Yesterday, I downloaded a torrent of this awesome first person shooter, Battlefield 2142 because nobody really cares what I buy for PC anyway and I rather spend it on a PS3 title. I also torrent Falcon 4.0 Allied Force and MS Office 2007 Enterprise Edition this month. F4AF FMV doesn't show up on my monitor (I uploaded it to Youtube), but the sound plays, so I had to delete the files. Good thing I didn't waste my money on it. It may play on my Dell Dimension XPS, but I have better things to do such as go to the Science Museum of Minnesota with my father. Problem is this Trojan got onto my computer and used up more bandwidth then I wished, got into the red danger levels of my bandwidth cap.

I got an email from a recruiter from Assurant which said she'll interview me again if I feel I can qualify. I don't know if my job agency will call or will I have too if I want to work nights there. Last time I asked; she said I wasn't qualified for this particular job. The CEO said I couldn't work there, but maybe she changed his mind. It could be those cleverly written trick answers which I'm betting on.

Transfer Windows HDD files to PS3 via your Network (2007-03-17 16:37)

This is a proven free way to transfer your MPEG4 movies onto the PS3 hard drive

First, you may be well aware that MPEG2 is illegal and therefore not possible for PS3 to decode off the HDD. The only codec that will work is H.263 (also MPEG4 ASP) and H.264 (also MPEG4 AVC). To do this, you must download [URL="http://www.redkawa.com/videoconverters/ps3video9"]Red Kata's PS3Video9 [/URL], download the encoder while installing as well. You may do H.263, but that's a little dated. So I suggest doing MPEG4 AVC. You can skip this part if the container is *.MP4 already.

- 1.) Now Download [URL="http://www.redkawa.com/fileservers/"]Red Kawa File Server[/URL]
- 2.) Go to C:\Program Files\Red Kawa\File Server\core
- 3.) In this "core" folder make another folder called "files"
- 4.) Dump your large videos or mp3s in there. AAC works, but those crash on mine.
- 5.) Then, on your PS3's browser go to : http://:8192/files
- 6.) Download the file onto your hdd.

My AotuV b5 Vorbis Collection is brand new! (2007-03-21 16:38)

Fourteen hours ago, I started encoding my 4,696 MP3 collection to [url=http://rarerare.org]AoTuV beta 5 Vorbis[/url] (the most advanced low bitrate codec on Earth until AoTuV beta 6 comes out) and it completed 2 hours ago. I think Mediacoder skipped 5 songs, but I'm thinking I might bring that with me to Minnesota if I go to MN Life College otherwise I'll bring the mp3 collection I burning to DVD as I type this up. AoTuV beta 5 won the Hydroforums low bitrate audio test against AAC, WMA, and MP3. I have the AoTuV beta 4 Vorbis on my Dell Dimension, but I think I'll update it after I burn the Vorbis to DVDs. This is cool right?

Also I bought Motorstorm for PS3 for $63 two days ago.

Tonio (2007-07-03 16:25:00)

Not so smart, transcoding will only lessen your quality... Can't get better than what you put in in the first place. Now if you did all the tracks again from their original source...

Ian's Smashing Good Blog Site (2007-10-08 23:36:00)

Yeah so with 900 GB of hard drive space I can do both vorbis and mp3s and it's fun + you fit more on DL-DVDs.

Wild's ninth win in a role. They're playing against the LA Kings. Score 4:1 I left at the end of the first quarter when the peewee hockey played for 15 minutes, because I kept hearing "you're uncool" in back of me, but that may not of been directed at me. I'm hearing words like crazy too. I was at the elevator, when I went back the noose bleed section because the elevator wasn't fast enough and watched all but the last 5 minutes. It was okay, but nothing I like. The resurface things were cool. The shop was full of bargains at twice the price so my dad didn't get me a jersey ($50 for XXX size), but only a cap.

Could it be simply me or does it look like a few of these responses appear like they are written by brain dead people? :-P And, if you are

GENESIS vs. DREAMCAST Bout (2007-04-01 16:41)

Which was the best Sega console? I was playing Sonic Adventure 2 today and had some fun so I'm saying despite Genesis had games from 1989 to 1996, Dreamcasts life from 1998 - 2001 had better and more fun software then what Genesis had.

List of excellent Dreamcast games

Soul Calibur

Dead or Alive 2

NFL 2k1

Sonic Adventure

Sonic Adventure 2

Skies of Arcadia

Rayman 2 The Great Escape

Test Drive: Le Mans

Resident Evil Code Veronica

Good reason to buy PS3 now. (2007-04-01 16:41)

Sony announced that PS2 emulation is [U]mandatory[/U] to get the price down so it can compete more with Xbox 360 and it badly needs this price reduction from what I heard. Sony is saying the list isn't complete with 100 % (7/10 working) of PS2 games in the European market and there are glitches in the emulation for most games. The European countries are getting the first Emotion Engine[I]less[/I] PS3s soon and NTSC versions are next. So if you're planning on supporting PS3...now is the time to get one. I betcha everyone will be looking for a used PS3 with full hardware acceleration and working BD-ROM once backwards compatibly becomes less then perfect.

I'm feeling not okay (2007-04-01 16:42)

The thought crossed my mind to trade in my Xmas gift for a Wii with Zelda The Twilight Princess at Game Stop. I think the PS3 has enough value. The PS3 is brand new. If I can do this tomorrow than why do i feel bad? I should feel good that I'm about to own all three consoles.

Come on everybody, give me some pointers so I can go thru with it! My parents are angry at me for taking out $250 on a wii anyways.

Almost new friend in the bag (2007-04-12 16:43)

Last Friday, I saw three Wiis at GameStop, but my Dad would get mad if I spent $250 on it. ESR is getting me a job in 1 week, because we pay them a lot too. Then I can afford a AM2+ motherboard for XMAS and Wii. Still buying those won't bring people to my house now would it? I guess I want to start over in my gaming skills.

I haven't blogged in a while, because school is much too important. Weather in Wisconsin is weird, yesterday there was a snow blizzard coming home fixing my cousin's computer and today there was no snow by 9AM and it was a sunny spring day. It's April! Maybe that would happen in March, but April is spring. So I got 60 for Easter, and $60 for setting up my cousin's DSL. My cousin, Uli, was playing Fable on Xbox..he could care less about my connection. The younger one wanted to hook up the DSL and computer hookup. Going home was dangerous. This paid for 2 games practically including F1 Championship Edition I paid for PS3. I can get first place on Easy difficulty. F1 Championship Edition is more fun than Dreamcast's F1 World Grand Prix (my favorite F1 game of last gen). The water effects are great.

At school, I am in the process of making a new friend Patrick. He's nice, but he doesn't know much about software and wants my help so I give him pirated PC games. I have to write an essay on myself and my visual pathways from the intelligence worksheet I've done in class, but the essay is negative and needs rewriting. I made my friend bob a few H.264 videos for his myspace blog asking him to come over so we could play games. It's boring here in my room doing homework all the time. My classmate over usage of the word "crazy" bothers me.

And why aren't we liking Iraqi war...it's better than DEFCON2 in my opinion! That's why those degrees of defense are in place.

[url=<http://www.fileden.com/files/2006/7/12/126713/april12.7z>]Homework[/url]

I'm a little lost in the console war so trying to collect all the higher then 85 % games out there including the ones for Wii as soon as I can find a job.

Wiivolution is leaked? (2007-04-14 16:40)

Wiivolution is a Wii /w a 160 GB hard drive and HDMI port, DVD video ready and it's been leaked onto the Internet. It's black instead of white. What is Nintendo up too this time? Is this another way to make people believe their current investment is outdated? If not a PC, don't understand what 160 GB is good for. I still do not have money to buy a Wii, and Super Mario Galaxy or Metroid Prime 3 Echoes aren't out yet so there is no point buying it... Wiivolution will cost $300 when it comes out between 27th of November thru 3rd of December.

I would ask this for Christmas if not for the Athlon 64 X4 and Socket AM2+ motherboard for the hellcat. I'm about done with videogames by November until I've completed college....I think.

Well, this is hte end of the long stretch. I passed my math and writing tests at Rasmussen College, and starting April 2nd. No more or little time spent on forums or gaming in general. On the forum, I posted my room and got an answer back so I posted my Linux screenshots. I'm starting courses, Strategy Successes, and English II (reading at a college level is online)

I'm Slacking today! (2007-04-14 16:46)

IT's not all it's cracked up to be (2007-04-28 16:29)

I was looking at the Crest of the Stars review ($50 anime franchise), because it got a really good score. I was going to buy it, but I thought well I'm really braindead Wednesday. So...I went to Youtube....streamed rip all 13 episodes via Replay A/V and converted the FLA to MPEG4 AVC *.mp4s with Total Video Converter and burnt it on DVD so i can take it to school to show how smart I am. And for some reason that movie got "sold out" GIF at Best Buy.com. So that's why I watched it in the first place.

After the 5th part, I started to believe it's not all it's cracked up to be. Just like Ghost in the Shell, Princess Mononoke, Final Fantasy VII Advent Children, Castle in the Sky, Akira, the Valley of the Wind, and Whisper of the Heart I got off Limewire Pro for free too.

I saved myself at least $120!

Randy's boating experience (2007-04-29 12:51)

My friend, Randy, came over while I was snoozing at 9:30. He has this stern boat with the biggest Mercury motor that is legal for a boat that size and he bought it for 6500. We cruised around Star Prairie Wisconsin's Lake St. Croix. He talked about how the Canadians are down right rude, and they're living off our economy and such. Then I told him how the Chinese hate MPEG4 due to liscencing costs so they're doing their "AVS" for HD programming. I told him about how I use MPEG4 AVC like the US Military does now. I told him about the free one I use for Google Video. He talked about how there are many babes and parties along the lake, Old Milwaukee's NA beer, dead Crappies (because of Winter). Why we don't colonize Alaska (areas w/o permafrost) with big cities and have Domed MLB and NFL stadiums for the future cities. We could use the Boeing 737 or Boeing 777 as cargo plains for the new Alaskan cities. Then we talked about how we'll make Japan become a part of the union...have Tokyo as our largest city (3 US military bases are in Japan) or just buy out something like Jamaica or Aruba and make that a commonwealth, and clean it up considerably afterwards.

Mark Brown (2011-05-12 07:27:08)

Wow! Your boating experience must have been really that fun. I wish I could have that kind of experience, but I'll save it for another time. And it's been a while since I've read something funny.

Iain's Smashing Good Blog Site (2011-07-24 14:42:50)

We talked about crappies. This was one of the last times I seen Randy.

Got Wii...sort of (2007-05-06 15:03)

Today, I have a Wii under my bed. I spent $266 on it at EB Games and I got really excited. I have a 30 day money back guarantee. The question is should I return it tomorrow or in two weeks? Okay, I'm sold out now. I have all three consoles!

I guess I have to kiss goodbye my first opportunity of getting one . Also on this sad day, I got a new job at Computer Network Specialists in Stillwater, MN. It's okay, but I am getting free Random Access Memory for my Compaq Presario. I really don't know if I like it. Too stupid to realize for $8 I can work at Assurant for example. Of course, I blew that chance so whatever! Hell, I don't care about blogging.

X

Opening that Wii box is stupid...I had plenty in the bank to cover it. Parents want it returned, but as of 05/06 it's still here. My father hasn't found out about it! And if he does yell at me..I'll simply bring it back to Game Stop.

I know what you don't! Hehe (2007-05-06 20:26)

IBM made a breakthrough in how CPUs are made by drilling micro holes into the Cell Broadband Engine using state-of-the-art nano technology and update each SPE to 2 MB L2 cache instead of 512 KB. It makes the Cell 33 % faster and run a lot cooler (because it runs cooler it runs 33 % to 66 % faster.) Now the Cell can be clocked up to 4 GHz. That's what PS4 will have and be backwards compatible with PS3. It'll also have a Nvidia G91 GPU d if PS4 comes out in 2011. The G80 was promised for PS3 before it came out. By then the Emotion Engine will be entirely emulated because all PAL models will have PS2 emulation on PS3. That's Europe fault for not buying the current $500 model. Thanks to them, it doesn't exist anymore. I also here the PS3 is going to drop price to $425 at the end of the year. For your information....I always complete all my homework from college before the due date.

IS PS3 the most important gadget since TV! (2007-05-20 20:28)

Ever since PS3 got the Cell Broadband Engine (the reason why IBM makes more than Intel) and Blu-ray all in one for less than a normal BD Player....makes it a High Def VCR for your TV. You know since VCR was the biggest thing since TV back in 1986. That was just to warm up!

I am smart because I'm getting a 88 % in Writing class. Videogames are becoming a little stupid. I am the only person buying games for me. I played F1, and Super Paper Mario today, but it wasn't all that fun. Maybe it's due to the fact that I had a load of homework yesterday, and today, when I had free time, my parents had computer issues and it took up all my forum time on ps3forums.

The people at neon cherry really suck. I'm going to quit. They're so anti-current gen. They're no fun to talk too. The admin there want to ask me why i shelf games so they can tair my ego down. Damn her. Fuck her. I go on PS3 forums, but I could say . I just don't play them, because there are to many videogames to review since no body else will do it for me. Assholes.

And I wonder why I can't say motherfucker in public? Can't I like say something tothem cowards deserve W/O getting punched or killed. I just said it...it's easy.

I'm going to fucking playderise.

In Europe, Marijuana smokers too high to commit crime (2007-05-28 09:48)

I heard that canvas decreases crime, but there is no political defense once made legal; therefore, is made illegal. Rep Ron Paul and Gov Gary Johnson, Republican-Libertarians, want to make only Marijuana legal, to decrease crime and empty our overcrowded prisons. Legalized marijuana works in San Francisco so far.

Marijuana is far less toxic and less addictive than alcohol. Long-term marijuana use is far less damaging than long-term alcohol use. Alcohol use contributes to aggressive behavior and acts of violence, whereas marijuana use reduces the likelihood of violent behavior. Alcohol use is highly associated with violent crime, whereas marijuana use is not. Alcohol use contributes to the likelihood of domestic violence and sexual assault and marijuana use does not. Alcohol use is prevalent in cases of sexual assault and date rape, whereas marijuana use is not considered a contributing factor in cases of sexual assault and date rape. Alcohol use contributes to reckless behavior and serious injuries, and it is highly associated with emergency room visits, whereas marijuana use does not contribute to such behavior and injuries, and is seldomly associated with emergency room visits.

I agree that the police comes to your locker in high school upon possession, because you're under 21 like alcohol for minors! It can't be smoked on campus either, because of second-hand smoke with non-smokers.

??? talented or untalented: that is the question? (2007-06-09 17:27)

Sorry, with so much school going on...it was IMPOSSIBLE to write something on my blog. I got the game collection...I don't need low grades. So anyways, I read The Giver by Lois Lowry, and got either 80 % or 100 % on the discussions...I can post them if you would like. Other then my fascination with Scott Daylor's (appeared on Catharton as Phantasystar77) blog, nothing is that new. I opened my Wii, and played Super Paper Mario once two weeks ago. I visited Eagle scout Rance Rutherford and played Urban Crisis with him at his apartment. His Apartment is very messy, and is in a business building. He drives a Jeep Cherokee too so he must be republican too! It's an American stereotype that republicans drive Jeeps. He owns a Harley Davidson motorcycle too. Rance is nice about his superior intellectual skills, but I hardly know him, and I know I can't act like a genius nor a fucking asshole anymore. I try to be a very smart in front of him, but doesn't work even when I say rance are, because he's an eagle scout, and I wrote 23 pgs of shit on my resume and it worked three times for three jobs! I was a Life scout myself, before I quit. I quit because Boy Scouts are not mainstream...they're dorks. On paper, it only matters if you're Eagle scout which I aint.

Another thing is this Mainstream thinking [well maybe it's 4 months dated] that Wii is good and PS3 and Xbox 360 are bad. The Wiimote is the fad, and PS3 is only a PS2 with better graphics. So I buy a Wii after the two ps3s [I hate to give away my stuff, period] and a xbox 360, because that was suppose to be incredible to some people in 2005. So I buy everything under the sun including Forza Motorsport 2? That makes me mainstream, right? Almost. Ps2 is outselling Wii, and that's 121 titles, okay? And I got the recent hits, God of War II, Rogue Galaxy, Odin Sphere. I just started Rogue Galaxy and it plays so much like Star Ocean 3 Till the End of Time. So I'm waiting for action replay for some cheat codes so I can finish it at the same time as other people. I also downloaded max files of FF12 and Star Ocean Till the End of Time off gamefaqs so I can play the ending. It won't matter anyways, because I'm casual, and I can play it a 2nd time if I do feel like it later. I'm actually waiting for Datel to make Action Replay for PS3 and Wii now. I confess, the SNES and Genesis was the wrong decision despite what the Gamespot reader reviews scores say about it's best games. You know despite what people say, it's more intelligent to collect far less for each of multiple consoles than it is to collect on just one platform. This prevents me from being a fanboy of one manufacture and buying 7.5 titles because I own all the good 8s or 9s.

Life is interesting. I actually get away with whichever mood, gester, and sentence I speak and my meds i'm on are keeping me from paranoid. I don't get thrown in jail nor punched in the face. I'm a big guy..6 feet and 200 lbs. The fact I was with 10 talented city teens for 4 yrs in Moundsvew than they stopped seeing me after I chose to be in River Falls, Wi. I still am fucking hearing voices. These voices tell me I was talented back then and am no longer talented when I left Calvin Academy actually. They were very similar to the Minnesota Life adults who have superior intelligence that I also had a chance at living at. I chose Rasmussen though, because I want to be a IT Guy despite if I'm untalented and normal. They were, they knew they weren't in popular culture/liberal/secular progressive in the way the high school athletes had all the hot girlfriends, dressed mainstream looking, and listened to their KDWB hiphop station, due to some medical issues like Cerebral palsy or autism or half-autism or ADHD. I was elected to be on the "class King" competition in 1999, but it was staged event...right before I left St. Croix Central for the 2nd time for Calvin. I still never tell people I look at nude women when I'm lonely..it's not important.

And I promise to take a picture of my handheld collection, my PC collection, and all the Fifty-third update games again to prove everything on the list is legit or pirated legit in the case of pc titles.

Work...install....meh (2007-06-11 06:24)

Work isn't exciting as I thought. I have to copy paste stuff so it looks like the one here. I took my work home with me...it's a Celeron 450 MHz and I trying to install Fedora 7. I do know what is wrong....the 2.6.21 kernel is too new for the ancient hardware so I'm thinking of installing 2003 2.6.1 kernel of Red Hat Enterprise Linux 3.0 (4 yrs old) and OpenSuse 10.2 together, and try to install server files that way. It's just time consuming.

Me and Randy did try the Wii. It took us 20 minutes to find out there was a motion sensor. I felt goofy looking at Super Paper Mario. He played Forza Motorsport 2 with me. I felt good! There is a lot of techno on that game. The game feels like the prequel. It was an awesome game. Then we tried Virtua Fighter 5 and played Vs on it. I beat him. After that we raced in Ridge Racer 5, a fine game with fancy graphics. He tried out my Motorstorm game by himself. He thinks that PS3 is a lot better than his PS2 which he mainly plays Madden NFL 06 on. He has a small collection. Finally, we played Winning Eleven Soccer 7 International. I fouled his person near my keeper, and he scored via shootout so the game ended 1 - 0

The Giver - The End (2007-06-16 21:48)

I believe that Jonas becomes the leader of the village who saved him at the bottom of the hill. The village is full of refugees from the other communities that escaped death, because of their physical disabilities. The villagers use more items superior to the Giver's communities like videogames [ps2, xbox] and internet pc. The village would be communities with the House of the Old and The Elders finding clues in the forest and possibly kill them if undercover spies found where the physically handicapped refugees were living at. It'll end of to be a civil war between the communities over spies, distrust, and control over natural resources. After it ends, the communities become a imperfect United States again and the truth is well known.

Dream Job (2007-06-18 21:50)

This is my dream job that a network specialist person like me aims for...the higher level of excellence of network specialist I thought it would be. Right now I'm working at an excellent job. I would like to be networking a super computer like Blue Gene L for someone. First off, I would be networking the US Department of Energy or Defense systems at North American Aerospace Defense Command in Cheyenne Mountain by having a Cisco Certified Network Professional certification and making $40 an hour someday. I have an idea that I'm suppose to place network of fiber optic cables to and from the super computer. I could also want to control MPEG4 Advanced Video Coding (codec, not abbreviation), streams coming in and out, because in my opinion compression is neat. Maybe I could be working in the space control center or the command center. I could be one of the 1,100 military and civilian personnel working in it.

I know supercomputers have virtual on-the-fly efx3 file system compression or NT (NT is NT, not abbreviated) File System compression depending if it's UNIX (not Abbreviated) or Windows, MPEG4 (codec, not abbreviation), JPEG2000 (codec, not abbreviated), monochrome Institute of Electronically and Electronic Engineers video standard.

However, I liked the idea I was in a tape library room at Assurant that is similar to a super computer. State-of-the-art tape drives held 2 Terabyte when virtually compressed and had a physical size of 1 Terabyte. Most of the obsolete tape drives held a couple Gigabyte and were thrown away. That was only eight months ago and the first PC type Serial-ATA (ATA isn't abbreviation) 1 Terabyte Desktop hard drive came out last month for $750.

So I would like to network with a Cisco Certified Network Professional degree and be in charge of compressing all the stuff in MPEG4 AVC (codec, not abbreviation) for people even if it has nothing to do with Cisco Certified Network Professional.

If I choose web designer, I would like to be able to submit my design to a big company such as right now I'm doing an online store for PC Network Services. My videogame pages weren't hugely complex nor popular so I thought webpage making as a hobby.

First Contact (2007-06-22 00:36)

I knew all about Roswell since Midway put out Area 51 in 1995 for Playstation. It's like Catch 22, because humans are smart enough to reverse engineer, yet cannot escape The DOW or Gray. The Gray/DOW were 2500 years more advanced in 1947. Rumor is humans have an alliance with another alien other than the Gray.

The Andromedans from the Star System Zenetae - [DSG, ch. 2]

All right. I want to start off by reading some information given to me by Vasais. In short, who the Andromedans are is that they come from the region of the Andromeda constellation and from a star system in that constellation they call Zenetae.

They are a telepathic race, although during the last 30 years I have tried to teach Moraney the English language. He has taught me how to "read" their telepathic communications, which are holographic. It's been an interesting situation. Now, when I write down what Moraney says, I write it down exactly as he says it.

When you go to the Leading Edge Research Group web site and you see that, it isn't that it is mis-typed, but it's exactly the way they say it. I have made a promise that is the way I will present it. They are a race with light-blue skin. They were on Earth some 62,000 years ago for a period of 62 years.

My connection to them is that at that particular time, I was one of them that was here. I volunteered to come back here and be here for this process, raising third density up into fifth density. I've asked to see the "fine print" on my "contract", but they have yet to produce that.

So, I would like to start off with this material told to me by Vasais on June 5, 1996:

"We have been in communication with many races regarding militant decision-making. We all agree that conflict in the end serves one purpose - to create fear. This, we know, removes the original intent from creations. We are hopeful that sincerity will gain momentum."

Now folks, what is happening here is happening out there. I have said this over and over again. I wish I could just come up to you and say "everything is love and light". It would be wonderful, but it would be a lie. We have challenges, and as long as we stick together we will make it. But, we have to stick together. Your neighbors are not the "enemy". Your government really isn't the "enemy", but they want you to believe so.

They want control over you.

Andromedan vs. Earth Education Systems: Back to the Future - (DSG ch. 2)

Now, the Andromedan people teach their children everything. The oldest and the wisest are the teachers, and hold nothing back from their children. Those with the most experience teach others what they know. This is called by them the Law of Consistency. They know that their children are their legacy. They don't "dumb them down" like the educational system here does. They would never ever think to do that, because they are proud of their lineage and their heritage.

They know that this is who they are, and their young people are who they are. Ladies and gentlemen, if you have children, you owe it to them to teach them what you know, and don't let anyone else babysit. Don't let the television babysit, because it is teaching them what to think, not how to think.

Television teaches them how to spit out numbers like a computer, and it isn't fair. They aren't being prepared for what's coming. They're your children, your responsibility and your future. There are people waiting for Christ to come. Suppose he doesn't come? Suppose he changes his mind? Then what? Oops.

When the Andromedans Arrive and the Prime Directive - (DSG ch. 5)

Val: Well, all these species that are trying to help are limited by the Prime Directive.

AC: Yes, they are.

Val: So, one would presume that they are waiting for a certain threshold of a feeling of wishing assistance to manifest itself, and that the threshold of feeling would overrule the Prime Directive and allow things to happen.

AC: Well, they are waiting for 10 % of the consciousness on the planet to awaken and ask for some kind of intervention. That may not come until after ... they may come shortly after Hale-Bopp gets here, or after the World Government and ET's try to stage the Second Coming.

Val: Obviously, Moraney and all these people have the ability to travel in time and know everything that is going to happen.

AC: Yes.

Val: So, they must know whether or not, and when, the 10 % threshold is reached.

AC: Well, it will be reached no later than August 12, 2003.

Val: So, relative to any world government "games" relative to Jerusalem and the emergence of the Maitreya scenario toward the end of 1996, wouldn't that paradoxically contribute toward the movement toward a 10 % threshold?

AC: Yes, it will. The regressives are going to mastermind their own undoing. But, for some reason they are so desperate to try to maintain control of us, and for some reason they don't want to let our particular solar system and the other 21 go.

Val: What could that reason possibly be?

AC: I don't know, but there is a reason. There is more about us, as humans, that I don't know, than there is that I do know.

Val: Do you have a particular perception of a relationship between HAARP and the Montauk projects?

AC: No, but I know that the Andromedans are very concerned about Montauk, because the humans who are working with this technology are being given specific coordinates in space, and the regressives that are here can use that same technology and leave here. The whole point is to track where they are going, so they do not continue to propagate their belief systems.

Val: If the universe itself is being "jacked up" several frequency levels, then it doesn't matter where they go to try and get away. They will be stuck in the same boat.

AC: Well, this is true. But, my understanding is that the idea is to limit the damage they do.

Val: Does this have to do with this 357 year period of tyranny which the Andromedans are trying to prevent.

AC: Yes.

Val: Well, obviously they must know that it was prevented if they can travel in time. That sounds like a paradox. They must know that they either were or were not successful. Here is where we start to drift into parallel lines of reality.

AC: Yes.

Other Races Associated With Andromedans - (DSG ch. 4)

Val: What other races do they associate with?

AC: They are very close with groups from Tau Ceti and from Cygnus Alpha. The group from Cygnus Alpha know a great deal about acoustic technology. They do a lot with sound.

Val: Phononic sound technology and optophotonic technology, here on Earth, are becoming part of the mind and behavior control program here.

AC: Some of those from Cygnus Alpha are here on Earth.

Val: Are they interfacing with the Earth groups dealing with this technology?

AC: No, they are totally isolated in very rural communities. They are over 1,400 human Et's here who are only observing that will be apparently leaving in the next couple of years.

Val: In order to meet the August 2003 deadline set by the Council?

AC: Yes. Many of the planets in the Andromedan system have water. Some of them are totally covered by water, and they live on the surface of the water and below these oceans. The dolphins that we have now on Earth are apparently a cross between a mammal from the Sirian system and one from the Cygnus Alpha system.

Val: What races have the Andromedans talked about to you?

AC: The Pleiadians, the Lyrans, the Arcturians, the Ciakars

The Arcturians - (LFA, vol 2, no. 2)

This group of beings settled in the constellation of Arcturius. These races of humanity are very private, and for very specific reasons do they get involved with Earth. They think of themselves as healers. They carry a strong pride of technology in the arts of physical healing, and emotional and spiritual bodies.

They have been known to intervene in the ancient past to help resolve very serious conflicts in our area of the Universe by sharing their unique ability to show others how to integrate their belief systems and feelings to resolve conflict. They can be very silent, and can and will keep very much to themselves.

They as a group, have done much to help raise the overall levels of consciousness in our Universe. At this time the Andromedans have added little more than this

Draconians - The Race from Alpha Draconis - (LFA vol2, no. 3)

The Draconis race is probably the most misunderstood. I have witnessed a deep respect for this race which is generated out of admiration and fear. The Draconans are the oldest reptilian race in our Universe. Their forefathers, somewhere in our most ancient past came to our Universe from another separate Universe and/or reality. When this actually occurred no one really knows.

The 11 (Council of Eleven) have said that the Draconans themselves aren't clear how or when they themselves got here, but what is interesting is that they declare and teach to the masses that they were in this Universe first, before humans beings, and that they are the true heirs to this Universe and, as such are all royalty.

Most, if not all, human races don't recognize this claim as truth but, none the less, they don't debate the issue with them either. Alpha Draconans have colonized many star systems and have created many races by genetically altering the life forms that they encountered.

The most densely populated area of sub-races of Draconans is the constellation of Orion, Rigel, and the star system known as Capella. Here lies a very dangerous part of the Universe for human beings. The mind set or consciousness of the majority of the races in this region is service to self and as such they are always subverting, invading and manipulating less advanced races using their technology for control and domination.

This is a very old and ancient war with the peace that does exist always being tested by these beings that believe that fear rules and love is weak, that the less fortunate are meant to be slaves.

This belief system is created at birth in the reptilian races as the mother, at the time of birth will hide the young and then abandon them to fend for themselves. Most of the time they are cared for by the warrior class that uses the children for games of combat and amusements. They believe that in their ways that if the young ones survive they were meant to and in the process they have had to fight all the way and at a young age they are full warriors, used to depending on no one.

Alpha Draconans are very suspicious of all life forms including their own, but not of course to the extent that they would be of humans. They are taught that Draconan history of the Great Galactic War.

The version or opinion that the humans were at fault for the invasion of the Universe and how we selfishly wanted the Draconan race to starve and struggle for the basic materials for their society to exist. Therefore they are brainwashed at a young age just like we humans have done to our younger generations by all human races in the galaxy.

Alpha Draconians - The Hierarchy in Our Galaxy - [DSG, ch. 1]

There are two schools of thought in our galaxy. There are the regressives, who are races that carry fear and because of that want to control others. The hierarchy of the regressives starts with a group from Alpha Draconis.

The Andromedans have no idea where the Alpha Draconians came from, but what they have learned through interaction with other dimensional races is that somebody brought the Draconians to this universe and "dumped" them in the Alpha Draconis system, where they had the highest probability of survival.

According to the Andromedans, the Alpha Draconians have had space travel for 4 billion years. They are an incredible race and have achieved great things, but they are bullies. They are jerks, and that's a judgment - I'm taking that judgment myself. That's my judgment based on what I know about them. The Draconians do not like human beings.

The Andromedans say that Draconians believe that this universe was here for them - that their history teaches them that they were left here to rule it. But, when they started traveling, they ran across other races. They were able to conquer many of those races through genetic manipulation.

Now, our government, the United States government, the New World Order - whatever you want to call it - wants to implant everybody. From the Andromedan perspective that means ownership. Extraterrestrial don't want to bother with that stuff, since that is not permanent. Extraterrestrials value genetics. What they do is they come in, conquer a race and genetically alter it. From that moment on, that race is genetically altered.

The genetic changes alter the frequency, sound and thought patterns of the race if they move into a physical form.

Does everyone understand this?

Q: Could you give us an example of this?

AC: The best example I could give you concerns the Greys. Apparently, the Greys were much more human-looking at one time. What happened was that they, as a race, were captured 891,000 years ago while leaving Zeta 1 and Zeta 2 to go off and do their own thing. This is very common, and it is how Earth became colonized. What happened is that they got captured by a group in Orion that was already genetically altered and under control of the Alpha Draconians. According to Moraney, the first thing this Draconian-altered Orion group did was slaughter almost all of the females of the captured race in order to control the birth process. They then genetically altered the remaining females, so that all the children born after that were genetically altered.

The males were enslaved, made to work in mines and slaughtered by the Draconian-controlled Orion group, who had absolutely no regard for life. What we know now as the Greys became a natural resource.

More on the Draconian Civilization: - The Ciakars - [DSG, ch. 6]

Val: Another question that has been put to me to ask you is the following. If withholding love leads a race to regression and devolution, due to the absence of expressed emotion, then why is it that the Alpha Draconians are two billion years old and have not yet become extinct? Second, what is the average life expectancy of the Draco?

Alex: The average life span of the Draconians extends from 1,800 to 4,100 years of age. The ones that live as long as 4,100 years are the royal line of the Draconians.

Val: The winged Ciakars.

Alex: Yes, because their genetics have been kept totally intact. Now, as far as them being regressive, yes they are, but what is interesting, Val, is that they are not regressive with respect to their own people, only against other races. So, what you've got is that you have this race of beings that are very regressive toward other races other than their own.

Val: It sounds like a super-model of imperialism.

Alex: They don't turn on their own people and have continued to evolve within their own race.

Val: One of the recent themes in orthodox media, especially movies, is that reptilian species have a penchant for pituitary and adrenal type substances, and that they try and get these substances any way they can, even to the extent of ripping somebody's brain out of their head in order to acquire these hormones.

Alex: Well, these hormones, in essence, hold emotion. The brain and spinal fluids hold emotion. It is what nourishes the nervous system and the brain.

Val: So, is this media portrayal have any accuracy at all? Do reptilian humanoids have to supplement their own internal production of adrenal hormones from outside sources? If so, what does this contribute to them physiologically? If this process does exist, as has been inferred before, is it a function of a need or just as cosmic joyride for them?

Alex: Well, they don't make the same type of spinal fluid as humans do. As far as their physical needs, I don't know. I do know that they get a "rush" from hormones from other species that have been in terror. For example, if they capture a human being, they will not usually kill the person right away. What they usually do is terrify them as much as possible in order to jack up the level of emotion and hormones. Then, when they consume the physical body of that psychologically terrorized being, not only are they feeding themselves but the hormones impart a physiological and psychological "rush" which they enjoy. It's essentially a "drug high" for them.

Val: So, they couldn't use hormones from animals, because they don't have the emotional range of embodied spiritual entities...

Alex. Cattle don't have the extremes of emotions we have. They do have emotions, but the more extreme the emotions, the "higher the high" when the substances generated are consumed by the reptilians.

The Draconians - [DSG, ch. 1]

AC: The Draconians are the force behind the repression of human populations everywhere in this galaxy instilling fear-based belief systems and restrictive hierarchies. I asked Moraney about them, and he said,

"the Draconian race is probably the most understood race of beings. I have witnessed a deep respect for this race."

The Andromedans consider the Draconians the "ultimate warriors," in a negative sense. Moraney continues,

"the Draconians are the oldest reptilian race in our universe. Their forefathers came to our universe from another separate universe or reality system.

When this occurred, no one really knows. The Draconians themselves are not really clear on when they got here. The Draconians teach their masses that they were here in this universe first, before humans, and as such they are heirs to the universe and should be considered royalty.

They find disgust in the fact that humans do not recognize this as a truth. They have conquered many star systems and have genetically altered many of the life forms they have encountered.

The area of the galaxy most densely populated with Draconian sub-races is in the Orion system, which is a huge system, and systems in Rigel and Capella. The mind set or consciousness of the majority of races in these systems is Service-to-Self, and as such they are always invading, subverting and manipulating less advanced races, and using their technology for control and domination.

This is a very old and ancient war, and the peace that does not exist is always being tested by these beings, who believe that fear rules, and love is weak.

They believe that those they perceive to be less fortunate, in comparison to them, are meant to be slaves. This belief system is promoted at birth in the reptilian races, wherein the mother, after giving birth, will abandon the offspring to fend for themselves. If they survive they are cared for by a warrior class that uses these children for games of combat and amusement."

So, you can see that the reptilians are forever stuck in survival mode. This means they have no boundaries in what they will do to other beings.

Moraney continues,

"it is engrained in them never to trust a human. They are taught the Draconian version of the history of the 'Great Galactic War', which teaches that humans are at fault for invading the universe, and that humans selfishly wanted the Draconian society to starve and struggle for the basic materials that would allow them to exist."

AC: Now, there are some real similarities there. The expression 'Draconian thought' is an expression on our world. I would suggest you research that.

Return to The Occult Reptilian Saga

Greys - (LFA vol 3, no. 1)

The Greys made contact with a world governmental body for the first time in 1933 in Germany. However, they were turned away by the German government because it had already committed itself to involvement with the Giza intelligence. A renegade group of human extra terrestrials that were headquartered under the Giza plateau in Egypt. They were predominantly Pleadians. They were on their own, doing their own thing.

Ashtar, Commigal, and even Jehovah were a part of the group, for some time. They came down here and played God with us. People worshipped them because they had technology which they used it as their power, big time.

During the 1930's, the Germans were building rockets and starting a space program due to their contacts with the extraterrestrials of the Giza intelligence. The technology developed however, was used to create weapons because the German governmental body involved were concerned that there was going to be an alien invasion.

The Giza intelligence had told them that the Greys were here to invade, but this actually did not occur. Plans for weapons such as sound devices, lasers, neutron bombs, particle beam weapons, etc. were designed. Although many of these weapons were not created until much later in history, a lot of other technology was shared with the Germans, by the Giza Intelligence, like how to do: anti-gravity, free energy, etc.

The United States was the first to open its doors to the alien race known as the Greys. I have been told of only one contact in 1934, where the Greys made their presence known to the U.S. government, in the state of Washington. I don't know the particular details but somehow the government knew that the Greys were there. It wasn't until 1947, that actual contact occurred with the aliens and United States officials.

The first face to face contact was due to the shooting down of an alien craft, namely the Roswell incident. This pressed the Greys into a contact earlier than they had actually anticipated doing themselves. After the crash in Roswell, the United States, the Soviet Union, and the British, at the very highest levels, became blood brothers. By the way, none of these governments knew what Germany was really up to. The Germans were very, very secretive about their contact with the Giza Intelligence.

The Roswell incident created more of an urgency to develop a true space program to defend the earth. The United States and the Soviet governments thought that this alien presence could be a threat, because these aliens were so technologically more advanced. But the Greys in their own fashion, really back doored these governments through deceit. The true space program, this underground program that we are just now beginning to hear about, was originally financed by members of the Club of Rome.

Now, you'll need to do some homework, to find out who those members are. And don't be surprised at who you see. We will talk more about that later, when we discuss the moon. Prior to this, in the 1850's to the 1950's, a hundred years, there had been some utilization of cattle and humans in experiments by the Greys. The NSA, which was created in the 1950's learned that the Greys were responsible.

In 1952, the U.S. government prepared itself for the realization of ongoing alien contact when our military radar system started to down their craft. The Greys knew that in order to perform their experiments on such a large scale, to save their race, they would need the cooperation of a high political body. In other words, they had to come to terms. A select politically structured body, created secretly within the United States Government, was designed to be the liaison between the Greys, the technological gods, and the earth humans.

The military was very enthusiastic for communication with the aliens, in hopes of exchanging technology for raw materials. This liaison group, this political structure, is and was the NSA, the super secret National Security Agency. For contact and study of the aliens was it's original purpose.

In May of 1954, at the Holloman Air Force Base, the United States Government made a formal agreement with the Grey alien race. Some of the terms of this agreement were the exchange of technology, of anti-gravity, metals, alloys, and environmental technologies to assist the earth with free energy and medical application regarding the human body.

All the Greys asked for in return, was to be allowed to study the human development, both in the emotional consciousness makeup, and to reside here on earth. This single act of signing a contract with an extraterrestrial race was the most significant act in human history because it launched us in a direction we were never intended to go in the first place and it thrust us into a role that we were not prepared for either. Being hosts to an alien race.

Essentially, what this contract has also done, has handcuffed the Andromedan council and those benevolent extraterrestrial races from being able to take a more active role in the earth's evolution. It has placed the burdens squarely on the shoulders of humanity to enlighten itself of the facts, and to consciously create ascension on an individual basis. Because this particular treaty was agreed upon between the aliens and the "ULTRA" units in the NSA, which actually is a government unto itself, they in affect turned away help from outside benevolent races that we could have obtained before.

Now pay close attention, because this is the first time I've ever mentioned this. The particular document and original exchange material may be found today in the NSA facility, called Blue Moon, under Kirtland AFB, New Mexico (35°02'N 106°36'W). It's exact entrance is in the Monzoni Mountains. This location houses the private department of energy technological labs.

The story of Kirtland AFB is really the story of three bases, since the merger in 1971 of Kirtland, Manzano and Sandia Bases which brought the three installations together under one command.

Currently, the building of free energy devices for use in space and on the Moon and Mars is ongoing, in this particular area. Much of the alien technology has been reconstructed and sent via a connecting tunnel to Los Alamos and an area located underneath the cliff sides of Los Alamos canyon, where huge vaults are built into the earth.

This facility is twenty-nine thousand square feet in size. There are also laboratories equipped to study light, thought and pure energy there. This facility is also used as a jail for aliens captured by the black (secret) government.

Corporations that are currently assisting the aliens and the black government are,

Standard Oil

Lockheed

Northrup

McDonald Douglas

AT &T

IT &T

The A.A. Matthews Construction Company

The Robins Company

and numerous more...

The NSA is exempt from all laws in the United States unless the NSA itself is specifically mentioned in any creation of law. This is due to its interaction with aliens and it's sometimes necessary infringements of civil rights and constitutional rights of the American people. In other words, to make it exempt from breaking any laws and hurting anybody here, they made it completely separate.

And it is completely separate, even though your tax dollars pay for the running of it. There was also a great deal of private money used by the NSA to build the alien technology and to keep humanity under control. The status quo secure. Even the CIA doesn't know much about the Ultra or Blue Moon units of the NSA. These are the two highest units the NSA has that deals directly with alien technology and information.

Now realize that the Greys are genetic engineers, though not the only ones. Most of the aliens from off planet are genetic engineers because they value life forms as opposed to gold and silver. Genetic's, life forms and things of that nature is their wealth. A lot of the genetic engineering and experimentation is going on here, on earth and on Mars moon Phobos, by the Greys.

They are using this opportunity to try to satisfy their own agenda, which is to create DNA and genetic stock that is clean enough to foster new physical life forms that are capable of regeneration and birth for their race. As of right now, the Greys are most interested in female genetic stock because all family lineages follow the female rather than the male.

Why? Because you always know who your mother is, you may not always know who your father is.

Many new races have been created this way throughout our galaxy. It's not something that's new going on here. This has been going on for a very long time. Few races today have actually remained as pure genetic stock, with the exception of two races that the Andromedans say are really genetically clean.

That is the Reptilians from Alpha Draconis, and the other is what we call, or know as the Elohim, which are a very ancient race of humans that survived Lyra. All other races are a varied degree of hybrid or mixture of races of different genetic stock.

Another point is that, the Greys themselves would like to be free from the Orion empire. They will have no chance of survival themselves if they do not create or match their body type or genetics with ours. You see, time is quickly running out for them and we as a race is also evolving at a tremendous rate.

On a spiritual conscious level, we are evolving dramatically, making our genetics harder to use while they are dying out like there's no tomorrow. And they are very aware of this fact. So, even though what they're doing is wrong, they really are caught in a very tough position themselves.

Because what they're doing to us has been done to them. I'm just trying to draw parallels. I'm not justifying it in any way. By the way, when any of the aliens give birth to a child, they take that child outside of the earth's atmosphere so the child is born fully aware of its reincarnational history, so it realizes who it is, and it doesn't carry the veil. Why is this? Apparently, there is some kind of agreement; if you're born within the earth's atmosphere, you've got to be veiled. It's just part of what comes with being born here.

The Greys masters assigned agenda, is to create a slave race which is currently in full swing, for the purposes of control, physical services, labor and, sexual energy. Now I will explain this. The acts of feeding, war, anger, psychic energy, genetic experiments, hybrids as a food source, genetic and biological materials. The Greys and their Masters feed off this, our energy. As examples: If two people are fighting, they create a lot of emotional negative energy.

And this is why you will find, that whenever there are wars going on, there's a lot of UFO activity. Negative energy! They just feed off it. It's liken to when your making love to your man or to your wife, and you reach that moment where you are both at the same place at the same time, in a loving benevolent way.

That's how it feels for them regarding negative energy release. The energy of fear, that rush of adrenaline, young teens on a battlefield running around scared, this is what they crave, all of the negative emotional aspects.

They have also been doing extensive research on the human brain and its capabilities as well as study of the soul. Many people who have been implanted by the Greys, those who are aware of it and those who still aren't, must become aware of the fact, that they have actually been on a kind of machine and are being shown and trained to do something.

According to the Andromedans, the Greys are training us to fight their war against the Draconians (One of their masters) when they get here, because they are going to use us as their soldiers. Just like when our military sends in the infantry and marines, those implanted will be the first ones on the beach. While the Greys sitting back on board their ships drinking champagne or having a gin and tonic, and wondering how the battle is going. And they have chosen our world to be the battle ground.

At the same time they are still going about preparing the earth for its new owners. Apparently, the Greys are going to make this attempt, but the inevitable truth is that the Reptilians from Alpha Draconis are on their way here now. And this has very serious implications for us.

Now, honestly, I'm not here to promote fear. I don't believe in it. But I'm telling you what I've been told to tell you. We have boxed ourselves into a corner and the only way we can change the outcome is that we have to consciously become aware of what our world is really about, what's really going on here. And we have to create a space of love. Folks, that's the bottom line.

By creating a space of love, the Greys, the Draconians, the Orions won't be able to handle the vibration. They have got to leave, or we're going to have to ask for some serious intervention here. In which case, there's going to be war in the heavens as the Bible has predicted. It will be all about saving us! You know, this talk about ASHTAR coming down here to save you. Ladies and gentlemen, it isn't going to happen. It's just another belief system.

Or how about Commander Hatton, who is saying we will take you to Mars. No thanks! I don't want to go to Mars, it just isn't going to happen that way. Nobody is going to save you, because according to the Andromedans, if you're sitting here waiting for a savior, you're not doing the work yourself. And who would come down here to take you off the hook? For what purpose? You will only recreate the situation again someday.

If you haven't permanently evolved to that level of becoming your own savior, your own messiah, then you haven't learned your life's lessons. And this is what the Andromedans strongest message is. You have got to do the work yourself. You are only responsible for yourself. Nobody is going to take you off the hook. Matter of fact, if they do end up intervening on our behalf, they are not going to stick around afterward and baby-sit us.

That means we have got to get it straight. That we as a race, have got to come together and decide what it is that we want and how we want to live. How are we going to raise our children? What moralities, what laws, etc. Not to be told by somebody else out there, what is best for us. Folks! It's never worked before, and it isn't going to work now. Most human beings would rather die than live being a slave. That's just our nature, our soul, to be free. We're at that point again. What will we choose?

You see, the Greys are currently monitoring the brain waves of those they have implanted. They have done this for the better part of a hundred years on earth. So generations of family members have had implants. The cloning of human beings, of life forms and the art of subversion was taught by the Greys to the NSA.

On the two highest levels of human interaction with the Greys within the NSA, there exists cloned human beings and humans so heavily implanted, that according to the Andromedans, they do not consider them human beings anymore. They have joined the group mind of the Greys. They have lost free will. They are clone robots! Their soul is trapped and they are no longer considered compassionate human beings.

The Greys clone their own race into a cast of slaves, just like ants. They all basically think the same things at the same time. Their minds are like radios. If there are no radio waves, they don't do anything. They have computers which transmit the radio-like waves, telling them what their jobs are, their functions that they must carry out. If the computers, their group mind, were shut down, the Greys would no longer know what to do for themselves.

They do not possess individual intelligence like us, although they would very much like to create us to be like them. The Greys also consider what we call God, a mind, like we think of our own mind. They have completely detached themselves from their spiritual essence, so long ago, that their physical existence and personality has become pure ego. The Draconians are pure ego, as well. Many other races genetically altered by the Draconians, are also experiencing the separation from their own essence too.

Now, I don't understand the process or exactly how it works, but the Greys no longer believe themselves to be spirit, to be in essence. They're trapped mentally, emotionally, physically in a physical existence, therefore, that's all they see. They literally disown and fractionalize themselves away from their spiritual essence.

It's no longer a part of them. Human beings have also been known to do that themselves, as well. You know we can fractionalize ourselves into many different personalities. The Greys are pure ego!

They are very sophisticated in mathematics and energy sciences. It has been said, that our military at the time of the Holloman Air Force meeting, that there was an exchange of personnel. Our military gave the Greys sixteen military personnel and that were supposed to be taken to the Greys' point of origin and that they left us one or two guys or something of theirs along those same lines.

Well, according to the Andromedans, it was really a hundred and nine human beings that were taken at that particular exchange. They have not returned. As a matter of fact, they did not go to the Greys's point of origin, which was Zeta Reticuli 2, rather they went to the motherships and Phobos where they were experimented on.

The Greys gave virus technology to the NSA, which then was handed on to lower levels within our military complex. In Africa, we find the testing ground for the AIDS virus. There's a reason for this. This virus technology was given by the Greys to the biological unit in Ultra within the NSA.

One of NSA's underground facilities is underneath Fort Mead in Maryland. At that location there are nineteen acres of underground caverns, with some of the most highly technological and sophisticated super computers in the world, that were built and designed inside the facility.

They have never seen the light of day. This area, and the one in Mt. Hood, Oregon are engaged in massive surveillance of the world's telephones, telegraph, telex, fax, radio, television, microwave communication, NORAD and also space radio waves. The complex in Mt. Hood is where our military is cloning human beings and aliens. I don't know what alien races.

Jumping back in history a bit. In the late 1950's, the Greys also approached the Russians regarding the signing of treaties and mutual exchange. The Russians, however, already at the time, were included in the proceedings of the NSA, chose not to sign this independent treaty because they knew full well that the Greys would try to pit the United States against the Soviet Union. It is in fact the Soviet Union that informed JFK of the Greys presence, during the Cuban missile crisis.

The Andromedans have stated that the Russians were trying to blackmail the U.S. into sharing the alien technology, thus the Bay of Pigs. That's when they put the missiles there pointed at the United States. The Russians became increasingly aware that the NSA and the CIA were developing incredible technology and were not sharing it, as was their agreement, shortly after the Holliman agreement. Apparently, JFK asked the CIA three times if the Russian allegations were true.

The CIA lied twice to the president, even though nuclear weapons were only eighteen minutes away from striking the U.S. They just flat out lied to him and said, "No. They're nuts." This prompted JFK to want to scatter the CIA to the winds. This is one of the more important reasons the "black" government found JFK as a threat and had him make a physical transition prematurely.

It was JFK's desire that some of this technology would reach the common people and be used for the betterment of mankind and that it be made known to the American people that the alien presence was upon us. This is one of the reasons why he successfully launched a civilian space program so that all Americans and people of the world could share in the discovery.

In 1953 satellites and radars showed large objects coming towards the earth. They were Grey motherships. These time traveling space crafts were the same crafts seen near Venus in 1787, 1788, 1789. In 1645, it was reported that a large moon was seen near Venus. For other times, as well in the same year, it was seen coming and going. The last time it was reported was in 1767. The same type of occurrence happened around Mars, on November 25, 1894.

A large ship was seen illuminating part of Mars. The same occurrence for Mercury in 1799. The same large planetary body crossed the sun on August 26, 1859 and this same body today, that's still there, is called Volcan. It's a mothership. It isn't a planet. During the total eclipse of July 29, 1878, astronomers saw two large glowing planetary bodies, about the size of Venus, between Mercury and Venus.

According to the Andromedans, these were Pleadian and Andromedan motherships that had gone back in time. They were observing the Greys orbiting around the sun. They wanted me to share all these dates with you. I don't necessarily know why, but here are some more.

In 1783 and 1787, huge bright lights were reported on the moon. They were mistakenly reported as volcanoes, at first. But then they moved and lit up the dark side of the moon which cause a noticeable glow around the top portion of the moon.

In February of 1894, a comet was apparently photographed striking a huge dark object in our solar system. It happened to have wings and, according to the Andromedans, this was a Draconian mothership. The same phenomena occurred in April 4, 1892 and it was about one third the size of the moon, six to seven hundred miles in diameter. As it crossed astronomers thought that it was a bird, but its wings didn't flutter.

Again, this was a Draconian mothership. This was observed again on January 27, 1912. A ship two hundred and fifty miles long, fifty miles wide, resembling a crow, was sitting on the moon. According to the Andromedans, this again was a craft from reptilian Alpha Draconis.

Many operations have been created by the Greys over the past five hundred years for the purposes of manipulation and control of our religious belief systems. I don't want to offend anybody, but I'm going to tell you just the way it's been presented to me. All you have to do is listen. If it doesn't feel right for you, then dismiss it. If it does feel right, and you get the chills, then maybe you should start paying attention to it.

To have us morally and spiritually compromise our free will to a savior-like image, the Greys by allowing us to compromise ourselves under these false pretenses, they are absolved from the creating any Karma for themselves. Instead, they let us create the Karma to ourselves. It really is such a set-up.

The power of belief systems can be used as fuel for the game of seducing people into believing that certain things are true. By the power created by the conscious thoughts, we can literally make these things occur and come true, whether they benefit us or not.

These are real spiritual dynamics at work here and they're being used against us. Our physical matter (physical body) is the embodiment of ideas or belief systems. Our Universe consists of ideas and thought systems, condensed and turned towards itself, inwards. We turn it towards ourselves to create and originate spirit and energy. Now if I need to say it again I will. This is our definition again, word for word.

Our physical matter is the embodiment of ideas (belief systems). Our universe consists of ideas and thought, condensed and turned towards itself, inwards. To create and originate spirit and energy. In other words, we really are gods. We really can do anything we want to do.

We, of earth, have evolved only in technical and material sciences. Our spiritual evolution, for the most part has been suppressed from us by a group of extraterrestrials, and now the black government and its plan for a New World Order. Because upon learning these spiritual truths, the NSA and the black world government, realized that everything that they have been trying to do can be swept away.

According to the Andromedans, and their exact words were,

"Could be swept away in a day, should humanity become enlightened."

If a billion people come to the realization and a decision that we no longer want this reality, it can literally change with the setting and the rising of the sun. But, they stress, we need to be clear of what we want, which is part of the decision, and our responsibility factors. That is ours. In other words, if we're going to create it, we take responsibility for it.

The Shroud of Turin. According to the Andromedans, this is one example of the extra terrestrial manipulation or assault of our belief systems. This holographic image on the shroud was created by the Greys to strengthen a belief system in a savior or messiah. This belief system assists their plan for control because humanity would love to give their power away to someone that appeared to be a true and legitimate messiah, because we've been taught to do that.

The Greys know that few people truly want to accept responsibility for their own evolution. Most would rather be told what to do, than to realize the situation and take the appropriate action necessary to free themselves.

To further realize the Grey manipulation on a belief system level, there is also a plan in development to play out a staged second coming. This will occur shortly after the destruction of the world economy, maybe six years, tops. This being will be a clone human being, a biological, who will holographically be imprinted with everything from spiritual truths regarding information about all religions, metaphysics, and he will come out speaking about all of these great wonders.

He will strongly profess the Hindu philosophy. Why, I don't know, but this is what they're saying. The intent is evil; this being will not have a soul. He is not spirit. He is robotoid, a clone, a robot, a synthetic. The Greys have this kind of ability to stage this kind of action using their technology. He will be the image of the man on the Shroud of Turin. The Anti-Christ will not be the evil soul portrayed in the Bible. The Anti-Christ will truly be someone who tried to express the truth on the true matters and seize the United States government as the cause of all this evil. This is what they've said. Now, I have to add this, in defense of that belief system. The Vatican, in 1960, admitted that there were fourteen plagiarisms in the New Testament. They refused to say what they were, but they said that there were fourteen.

That means you can't believe by it as gospel, so to speak, because they changed it. It wasn't God who wrote it. The church changed it and they admitted it. So, you do with that what you want. But everyone is believing it has to happen, and by us believing it has to happen, ladies and gentlemen, we're going to create it! We're going to make it happen, and they're sitting up there laughing at us, saying look at those idiots. Look what they're doing to themselves. The Greys were responsible for the Fatima episode in Portugal, where the Virgin Mary supposedly spoke to the children. This was a holographic image of a woman who professed to be the Virgin Mary, the mother of Jesus Christ. The sun supposedly fell from the sky and miraculously healed people.

Using Grey technology, these somewhat miracles did occur. But they used light and sound, which they beamed from their ship to the various people affecting these cures in their physical bodies. Now, this is technology that has been here on the earth, at least the last hundred years or more.

But it is against the law now, in most places in the United States because it works. And that's color and sound, And the reason for sound work, is because the entire universe is a holographic projection turned inside of itself. It's all a holograph. Virtually all the people present were implanted during the missing time phase of this episode. A large mothership positioned itself in front of the sun to create this occurrence.

The reasons this is not a true is because the biblical Jesus is a composite character. And as such, is an allegorical myth. The Virgin Mary is also a composite character and these composites were made for the purposes of uniting the religions of the ancient Roman Empire so that their resources were not being used to constantly stop religious wars between different factions.

In the 1950's the so-called meetings of the Jason Society were triggered by information given to the Ultra unit in the NSA by the Greys about the world's situation regarding pollution and population. It was at this particular time that the Greys offered little assistance or sharing of technology regarding environmental issues. This has persisted even today.

The Pleadians have in fact, offered more solutions than any other group to date, but they were turned away by the NSA. This prompted the first of three alternatives that have been discussed in UFO circles already. These alternatives are in fact, and were in fact, a reality. That's alternative one, two, three and four.

The New World Order is in a major predicament. The Greys are twenty-five hundred years ahead of us technologically. The black government is afraid to tell us the truth concerning this reality because they fear a revolution, overthrow, and desire self-preservation from the people who will want their scalps.

Two large motherships are on the planet right now, hiding in the oceans. One is in the Pacific Ocean, below the equator and the other one is in the Atlantic. I don't know where. I don't know whose they are, but they're here. My sense is that they're benevolent because the government has actually talked about implementing alternative four which was creating a controlled pole shift.

The Andromedans have said no way would they allow this to happen. So my sense is that there are benevolent ships that are anchoring the planet on its axis. That's my opinion. The military know that this is why they're testing sound in the oceans, especially in the Pacific.

Aliens have been attacking us more openly in space.

It started with the Russian Phobos probe when it was destroyed.

The Mars observer was captured by Reptilians on Mars. It isn't going to come on-line. It's gone.

Also, closer to home, in December 1993, a Landsat satellite disappeared in orbit, just vanished.

In August of 1993, the European space agency lost two communications satellites, again, they literally just vanished from orbit.

The Canadian Telstar was destroyed in our atmosphere on January 15, 1994. It was seen crashing to earth. This was shot down by the Greys. Again, I don't know why.

A NASA Satcom 3 communications satellite vanished in May of 1979. It was just taken.

Two Soviet Millennia satellites were also taken. They just vanished from our orbit, from our atmosphere.

Here's our scenario. The benevolent races have told the world governments that they would help us but world governments have to dismantle their nuclear weapons. The earth governments did not want to do this because they don't know who to trust. They created this situation and they do not know who to trust now. However, the world government is so desperate to get rid of the Greys, that they apparently have put a call out for help, using satellites. The Andromedans say there is a group that has offered to help our earth governments with the problem of the Greys, even by giving us weapons to fight the Greys.

Re-enter, the Reptilians from Alpha Draconis, the only real enemies the Greys have, and that humankind has. The Reptilians from Alpha Draconis have answered the call. But the Greys actually work for the Draconians. It's all part of the set-up. When we invite them in here there will be no battle. And once they're here we'll never get rid of the Draconians.

The Pleadians are assisting the Andromedan Council in attempting to quarantine our solar system from invading forces, namely the Orion group and Alpha Draconis. The quarantine line, the defense line, is between Uranus and Pluto and consists of a mixture of benevolent races, both physical and non-physical.

There are:

Pleadians

Andromedans

Arcturians

Syrians from Sirius A

Reticulin

Accordance and Umonians from Umo

This line of defense is really like a last resort. Apparently, two huge Grey motherships have already been turned back that were on their way to Earth and Mars. And apparently there were casualties on both sides in the exchange of turning them away.

Please realize that currently, there are fifteen thousand Greys underneath the United States. The Greys (Dows) are in fact, a renegade group of Reticulans. They are not from Reticuli and haven't been back there for hundreds and hundreds of thousands of years. They have been travelling through space in their arc's.

Before they came to Earth, they were residing on Sirius B. That was their originating point before coming here. There are approximately eighteen hundred and thirty-three Reptilians living beneath the United States.

Their habitat is from one hundred to two hundred miles beneath the surface of the earth. They generally live in caverns and the ancient tunnel systems created hundreds of thousand of years ago. They are not benevolent. And, every once in a while, they come up for a contact. They have been seen in New York City, Missouri, Chicago, and in the southwest United States. These area's happen to be the largest areas where missing children occur, numbering in the thousands.

The Andromedans state that thirteen thousand seven-hundred and twelve children have been taken by these Reptilians over the last twenty-five years. In Linda Molten-Howe's book, "Alien Harvest", there is mention of human body parts seen in underground bases. The Andromedans confirm that we are being used for food. The Greys use our blood and it is the Reptilians that consume the live human flesh. Their favorite food is children because they lack nicotine, caffeine, and other environmental pollutants. Like we eat veal, they eat us.

The Greys are searching for walk-ins for they want to learn about spirit. I'm speaking about benevolence and not satanic possession or that kind of stuff. Walk-ins are necessary at this particular time. They are higher evolved souls. Seventy-two thousand walk-ins are on the planet right now and are a part of the Andromedan Council.

Seventy-two thousand more are coming in the next three years to balance the negativity that is being created. Because of the Councils laws of non-intervention, the Andromedan Council found it necessary to intervene in another way without violating its council directives.

Thus, the walk-ins who are actually earth human beings, are here to do that kind of work. It's a backdoor approach.

There are fifteen hundred and thirty-one actual benevolent human extra terrestrials on our planet right now. Where they are, I don't know. But they are here to record, report and observe, and possibly assist some of the walk-ins. And at some point, they will be leaving. But, apparently they live just like us, and they're in our every day lives.

Keep these facts in mind. There are eighteen thousand Greys:

fifteen thousand here on the Earth and three thousand on the Moon

The regular government which makes up the majority of Washington, D.C., doesn't have a clue as to what's really going on. The black government, consists of various levels. At the top, they know everything, The lower levels only know small pieces, on a need to know basis, usually just one piece of the puzzle. The total picture is one outrageous secret based on deliberate deceit that creates the subversion of the public trust. Forewarned is forearmed.

What are we going to do about it?

The Race of Greys Called the DOW - (LFA vol 2, no. 3)

The Dow are a small group of Greys that are responsible for many abduction/detentions. They have very little emotional development, but do possess very strong telepathic powers. These powers are often used to deceive and conceal their true motives and objectives. Their race is struggling to assure their own self-preservation but, as of yet, they have not met with any true success.

Unable to attach a soul to their own hybrid bodies, they must strip off energy layers of abductee's soul bodies. This energy is then "fed" to infant hybrids in attempts to sustain their life. This same technology is also used to disembody, capture, and contain a soul for future use. They are clearly regressive in nature.

The Dow have their heritage in the system of Zeta Reticuli, with their original place of origin being the star called M-2, in Zeta Reticuli II. Their home sun had burned out and their planet destroyed many thousands of years ago. The exact date hasn't been give yet.

They were Reticulans originally, loving healers with tremendous skills in technology and analytical powers. Their cousins, the Zeta's, who are still there are very much the healers in the Universe, especially on a third and forth density level. This group is said to be very gentle. However, this is no longer the case for the Dow.

As a small group, the Dow ventured out on their own and were captured by the Orion Group. Genetically altered many times through many generations, the Dow became the slaves and pirates in service to the reptilian species, specifically the Orions and the Draconians.

The Dow were deliberately altered genetically so that they couldn't reproduce, ensuring they wouldn't rise up in force against their captors. This forces them to stay very much in the survival mode, making them much easier to control. They would like to be free, but instead have become wanderers. They are no longer Reticulans, nor honored in their home systems, because of their abuse of power (service to self) and the fact that they are now on the same side as their owners. They, like their owners, have left a wake of destruction and slavery in their path.

Be very clear about this! The Dow are out for their own survival and will do anything to us, without compassion or understanding of what their actions will or have done to us. I have been told to have understanding of their situation and possibly some inner compassion for their plight, but to fight and stay very clear of them as they are very dangerous to the human Terran race on Earth.

The Dow assignment is to go out in groups as biological and genetic engineers to find underdeveloped worlds and civilizations and then conquer them without force. The Earth fell victim to these plans. The Dow broke Cosmic Law as decreed by the Andromedan Council by interfering with a developing world.

The only group originally given permission to be here was Pleiadian. Since then, several other groups have also been granted permission. This type of interference is typical of the Orion Group.

Here is how the plan was explained to me.

The Dow first make contact with a world that is developing, to what degree I am uncertain.

They study all of the world's religions, countries, governments, etc. then decide which is the strongest and make contact with that nation.

Incredible technology is dangled in the face of this nation or nations in order to get treaties signed giving permission for the Dow to be here and study the life forms, etc.

Once this is accomplished, they then slowly take control of the governments that rule the populace and then they become our leaders.

Few in the populace really get to know that it has happened.

Clones or genetic doubles are created and programmed to do what the Dow want and then they play upon the greed of the beings on this planet.

Frequently, the elite and/or governments sell out their own races to be, or remain, in favor of their rulers.

Once in control, having done so in a most subversive way, the Dow then invite their rulers, the Reptilians and the Orion Group, to the planet to continue the conquest.

Here is where it gets difficult for the Andromedan Council.

The Dow are the only group that really violated the Law by coming down in the first place. The Orion Group and the Reptilians are asked as guests of the ruling race to come to the planet and colonize. The problem becomes how to get the Orion Group to leave of its own volition. They technically have not been the ones to violate the Law of Non-intervention.

The Council cannot hold the Orion Group responsible for the actions of the Dow. Does any of this sound familiar to you? The Council of Eleven have said that this has happened to many other worlds in our Universe and it has also happened to us here on Earth, or Terra, as the Andromedans call us.

The Dow presence here in the United States is strong. While there are less than two-thousand ensouled Dow, there are thousands of clones. The entire group is comprised of a "hive" consciousness by which they are all in contact with each other via a central point where instructions and information is transferred. Presently there are thousands of Dow on both the Earth and our Moon.

In 1953, 1955 and 1957 large mother ships took up positions along the equator. Each ship contained thousands of Dow. Several ships went into the oceans. The largest is still said to be very deep in the Pacific, west of Easter Island. The other two have left orbit and, I'm told, have gone to Phobos and to Mars where they are to meet the Reptilians from Draconis and Rigel. The Orion Group however, is still here and will be addressed in a future article.

The Dow have also come here with their own agenda, a survival mission to find a home and a way to save their own race from extinction by interbreeding with us - without our consent or real knowledge. They have been crossing our genetics, both DNA and RNA, and attaching some of their genetic material to it, along with other chemical components, to alter us to fit their life forms. They are made up of a combination of botanical genetics and reptilian DNA. The reason for the addition of our genetics is to stop their supposed evolutionary decline on a physical level.

Their original agreement was to assist humankind by sharing technology and information. The government, in turn, gave its promise that the Dow could study our civilization, in complete secrecy in underground bases (Dow avoid bright light) built by the government, all without public knowledge. Almost immediately the Dow broke the agreement and used their technological strengths to take control of events here on Earth.

The government did not want to tell the people in their respective nations for fear of retaliation from the masses and the aliens. Out of desperation, the secret governments started to experiment with time travel i.e.- the Montauk Projects, to send people into the future to find and acquire future technology to bring back here to our present that we could use against our conquerors now in the present. This, the Council of Eleven have said, is the reason our secret government went to any length to accomplish the goal.

The Dow have created this same type of scenario on 26 other worlds in our Universes present time. They have enslaved these planets for their rulers and have broken the will and the spirit of many. We ourselves could suffer a similar fate if we are not careful about our own belief systems.

Lyrans - (LFA vol 2, no. 2)

The Lyrans are the original white Aryan Race and what is left of the Aryans is the Pleiadians and Andromedans. Birth of the humanoid race has all of the genetic DNA from this area. Ancient Lyrans were the Titans. The giants Bigfoot also descended from Lyrans. All life destroyed on Lyra and the ring Nebula eye Og God.

Lyra consists of 14 inhabited planets, three planets were destroyed during the wars Bila, Teka and Merok. 50 million were slaughtered. Lyrans started the Black League. The Black Dragon.

Lyrans grew into:

Sirian

Arcturian

Antarian

Pleiadian

Andromedan

all human evolution...

Based upon genetically human forms in higher realms and very highly evolved Universes, it was decided that many forms of life would be created here in Lyra because it appeared to be ideal as far as the age of the Suns and Planets and the length of probable stability.

The human race would have time to evolve and create space exploration and gravitate by means of energy and spiritual recognition into planetary civilizations and that those races would in turn create their own root races and life. It was also important that these races be allowed to manifest and create different aspects of ourselves mentally, emotionally, and spiritually. Thus we would be creating diversity and expressing our own need to create.

As the human race fragmented, the races moved, traveled, and settled many different planets in many systems as space travel evolved. The human became aware of other planetary civilizations in these systems. Different cultures meet and grew. Belief systems clashed or spread. New thoughts of Philosophy or technologies came into being. Mankind was evolving.

A very strong social community developed between all in the Lyra System. The Lyrans were a very peaceful race on the whole. There were disagreements and light conflicts, but much was always cleared and resolved. The Lyrans learned to adapt to virtually all of the planetary environments that they settled. They learned to live in complete harmony with their respective planets.

They developed agricultural communities that were literally awesome.

Lyra is a small, dim constellation, but it is home to the 5th brightest star in the sky, Vega. It also contains two messier objects. The most famous of these is M57, The Ring Nebula. This famous planetary nebula appears as concentric rings of color with a small white star at its center.

It is this star that shed the material that now makes up the nebula. M56 is a tight globular cluster of stars. Lyra is the radiant, or origin point, for the Lyrids meteor shower which occurs every year between April 16 and 25.

They were not only efficient and could feed billions of beings, but it was actually enhancing the planet itself and creating an even wealthier environment.

All aspects of life seem to benefit from the Lyran's commitment to be at one with their home planets. At the same time, the life expectancy was between 300 - 425 years on the average. This was to increase by 3 times later, but everyone worked as a community.

They were not in service of self, but were a race that beat as one heart, and shared and moved in the same direction as a whole and would try to make sure that none of their race would lag or fall too far behind the whole. In other words, "The needs of the many, outweigh the needs of the few." They were an incredible role model for all humanity that followed to this present moment. The human race is history.

The works of the mind are a record of that history, for the whole record of the human race is in one man. If you read these words then you are a part of Lyran heritage and a part of your carries this history within.

Lyrans - (DSG, ch. 1)

I want to talk to you about Lyrae and how the human race colonized our galaxy. Based on the age of the Suns and the planets in our galaxy, it was decided that the human life form was to be created in the Lyrans system.

The human race lived there for approximately 40 million years, evolving. The orientation of the human race in Lyrae was agricultural in nature. Apparently, we were very plentiful and abundant, and lived in peace.

Then, one day, huge craft appeared in the sky. A large ship came out of the huge craft and approached the planet Bila, and reptilians from Alpha Draconis disembarked. Apparently, the Alpha Draconians and the Lyrans were afraid of each other. I told you before that the Alpha Draconians were apparently the first race in our galaxy to have interstellar space travel, and have had this capability for 4 billion years.

Well, when the Draconians came and saw Bila, with all its abundance and food and natural resources, the Draconians wanted to control it. There was apparently a mis-communication or misunderstanding between the Draconians and Lyrans humans. The Lyrans wanted to know more about the Draconians before some kind of "assistance" was offered. The Draconians mistook the communication as a refusal, and subsequently destroyed three out of 14 planets in the Lyrans system.

The Lyrans were basically defenseless. The planets Bila, Teka and Merck were destroyed. Over 50 million Lyrans humans were killed. It is at this point in history that the Draconians began to look at humans as a food source. This is how old the struggle is between the reptilian and human races.

Now, I must make the point that not all the reptilian or human races are "dark". There is a mix. When we start meeting these races, you are going to have to trust your gut instinct. But, they are coming. Hale Bopp is on its way here. It is not a comet.

Nibiru (Anunnaki) - (DSG, ch. 6)

Val: Here's another question that was submitted to me:

"You mentioned that the Lemurians and Atlanteans were extraterrestrials and you also mentioned Nibiru. Tell us about Nibiru and its role and relationship to us in this solar system."

Alex: This is what I have been told about who those connected with Nibiru are. A very long time ago, colonies on Sirius B and the Orion Group were having trouble with each other. In order to bring peace, there was a marriage between two members of each group.

The woman came from the Orion Group, where the hierarchy includes a queen - the matriarchal paradigm. The male was from Sirius B. Both members were considered royalty of their respective line. When these two came together in marriage, their offspring had the genetics from both lines.

Because of these genetics, the new race that was created was given the name "Nibiru", which I am told by Moraney in the Orion tongue means "divided amongst two". This is who they literally are - a cross between those from Sirius B and a race from the Orion system. They formed a new "tribe" which has continued to flourish for at least hundreds of thousands of years. So, they are a tribe that has become a race.

Pleiadians - (LFA vol 2, no. 3)

The human species called the Pleiadians evolved from Lyra. The Pleiadians are our far distant first cousins and ancestral forefathers of some of our races. It has been said that the Pleiadians as we know them were Lyrans who migrated from Lyra in large space stations or arks exploring young star systems seeking the potential for stable longevity.

These Lyrans would send down scout teams consisting of scientists, engineers and agricultural specialists to explore the surface of possible habitable planets and then return data and information to the motherships.

Each planet was explored and based upon its unique nature, would be developed for colonies that were then sent down for settlement. Some these first Lyrans colonized our Earth for a time, while a larger group of Lyrans eventually found the seven sisters and other star systems during the Orion Wars. It should be noted that through the development of effective weapons of war, this helped sustain them through the Orion Wars and beyond.

So as you can see the Pleiadians are very interested in our world and our races here. They have been visiting Earth for at least 79,743 years, establishing and maintaining many large settlements. They have come and gone throughout our planets history. We are very similar to them in many ways, however, they are emotionally and spiritually more evolved than us at this time. They too have gone through their growing pains, as we are experiencing right now.

They have and continue to make attempts to share with us the benefits of their experience so we ourselves don't have to experience the same kinds of setbacks and possible destructions. At present, not enough of us are listening. The Pleiades is an open star cluster consisting of 254 stars and many times that in planetary bodies. Many of the stars are very young. The Pleiades is located in the constellation of Taurus. The Pleiadian and Earth alphabets are both very similar. This was noted about 11,157 years ago.

The script form was developed here on Earth and carried back to the seven sisters. The original script form is the parent of most of our present day alphabets. All of Earth's languages are derived from an ancient Pre-Sumerian language called Tamil which was spoken in Lyra and latter in the Pleiades.

Three of the Pleiadian star systems have human life as we know it, with the most advanced system being Daneb of Taygeta. Another system is Taro which circles Alcyone. Most of the Pleiadians look like us in size and stature, build, color of hair, etc. They are also very affluent and articulate when speaking any of our languages, or discussing our sciences, history, and so fourth. We have inherited our aggressiveness towards each other from them.

Their life spans far exceed our own by at least 10 times our norm. Their technology has made it possible for them to travel anywhere in our Universe at speeds faster than the speed of light. They are capable of using our oceans for undersea operations. They are very concerned about our current misuse of our sciences along with our complete loss of our spiritual center and harmony with our sciences.

They have no use for money, politics or religions, clearly stating that the later two - politics and religions are really the same. The Pleiadians are worried that, as other benevolent races visit, we will destroy our planet and ourselves and expose their failure to help create a conscious shift.

The Pleiadians like other groups, have left descendants on the Earth in the past. They have said they are willing to help us but not to the point of changing our own evolution and then therefore becoming responsible for us as a race. They say, that we create our own future as we go and so we need to take responsibility in correcting our own mistakes ourselves or suffer because of them.

Sirians - (DSG, ch. 6)

Val: What about the beings on Sirius A?

Alex: There is a race of beings on Sirius A, the humans there, are called the Katayy. They are considered benevolent. There is also animal, mammal and aquatic life on the planet. Many of the human races there are red-skinned. Their ancestry is some of the first Lyraens that escaped with the women and children during the war. In their oceans they have whales, octopus and sharks. They are a race that is artistic. They have music and are connected to nature. They are builders and not very political. Their governments are based on "spiritual technology", which uses sound and color.

Val: And Sirius B?

Alex: The cultures around Sirius B have a very controlling vibration. Some of the humans are red, beige and black-skinned. The planets around Sirius B are very arid and are generally occupied by reptilian and aquatic-type beings. Palm trees originate from the Sirius B system. The society is more obsessed with political thought patterns instead of spiritual attributes.

Val: And Sirius C?

Alex: It is now just being terra-formed, so there are as yet only very small colonies there.

More on the Sirians - (DSG, ch. 5)

Val: On a recent Art Bell show, a fellow named Robert Ghostwolf discussed a Native American perspective that "the only two ET races that were attempting to help us were the Sirians and the Andromedans." I wonder whether you had any comment relative to that?

AC: My understanding is that those from the Sirius A system are trying to be beneficial and assist, because they feel responsibility in that those who colonized Sirius B system were originally from Sirius A. Those from Sirius B have come here and really messed with our heads, and they are the ones who originally gave our government the Montauk technology.

They have the same belief and brain patterns as those from Orion. Those from Tau Ceti are also very much involved. Nobody knows exactly what the Pleiadians are going to do yet, but I will share this with you. Those that live in the system around Alcyon - some of them cannot be trusted, as they have hidden agendas.

Those from Taygeta, I am told, have a very clear objective: to maintain the idea of freedom.

Just because a group is labeled "Pleiadians" doesn't mean they are here to help us. People confuse that issue. Know them by their works.

Those from Cygnus Alpha are here. There is a group from Arcturus that is trying to help. Those from Procyon, who have been liberated, are trying to help. They're pretty gung ho.

The Sirius-B Humanoids - (DSG, ch. 1)

Q: What about the beings from the Sirius B system?

AC: Some of them are human, and they have eyes like cats. Their skin is grey. They have long straight red hair. Many of them wear full body garments that cover their heads. They have extremely bad breath.

Q: Do they mate with humans?

AC: Yes, but the egg needs to be altered in a lab. They are using us. They want the encoded information in our genetics. We have racial memories and abilities in our physical bodies. We are moving from third to fifth density. It is the first time it has ever been done, and we can do this because on a soul level we are the Paa Tal. We have the genetic coding of 22 different races in our bodies.

When our DNA starts to unlock, we will be able to speak to ET's in their own tongue. We cannot be lied to any more. We will be able to create and manifest anything. That takes some responsibility. Those that are stuck and cannot or will not evolve, those who are stuck on manipulation and control, will manifest exactly what they desire.

Which means that there is a very heavy responsibility when it comes to what is behind your intent to create. If you screw up, it's going to hit you almost immediately.

Too Poor for Ebay (2007-06-26 21:47)

I paid too much money offline for JRPGs, and my parents refuse to use Paypal, because I can't put my bank account number on the internet despite I'm 22. I would put too much money into Ebay, that I couldn't pay for other things. My parents dislike virtual money and don't want to get into internet fraud. I'd feel funny asking my Uncle Jim to buy me Valkyrie Profile.

I'm unemployed again [for 2 weeks minimum], because the website server isn't working at Computer Network Services. I add products to a online store for them. I also was hoping to install Suse 10.2 Rieser file system over a corrupted EXT2 partition so I may install Fedora Linux 7 again for their Fedora Directory Server. It's not guaranteed to work, and I would be unpaid.

Saturn Review (2007-06-26 21:47)

I was researching thru Game Faqs and perhaps steal a review, yet I haven't. Everything there was 8 or 9 or 10. Sega Saturn biased. In reality we know that Saturn "sucked", N64 sucked much less, and PS1 was awesome. With a few possible exceptions.

Many Saturn games were coming to the US that made it to Playstation after Saturn's death including 3 Game Art RPGs Grandia - which was suppose to be Sega's weapon against Final Fantasy VII. The PS port is idenical graphically, sound, and gameplay...and recieved a 9.2 at Gamespot and 9.0 at IGN.

Lunar 1 and 2 - Port of the ill fated 16-bit Sega CD which I guess was Working Designs strategy of getting an average RPG to small nitchi Sega RPG fan hooked. That also went to playstation and scored a 7.5 at the lowest and 8.0 at the highest.

Princess Crown - RPG from Atlus and Vanillaware that got ported to PSP this year. It is amongst the most popular Saturn games at Gamerankings and Gamefaqs. Never came to the US.

Shin Megami Tensei: Devil Summoner was ported to PS2 as a remake of the Saturn game. Did come to the US, but scored below average [for me] 7.5 out of 10.

Daytona USA got a remake on Dreamcast known as Datyona USA 2001

Then of course the 2K sports series

NFL '97 was designed by Visual Concepts and continued on Dreamcast, PS2, Xbox till 2004

World Series Baseball by Visual Concepts continued on Dreamcast, PS2, and Xbox till 2003

Earthworm Jim 2 was ported to PS thru the Saturn port of the Genesis game

Panzer Dragoon Saga got a sequel on Xbox called Panzer Dragoon Orta and got a 9.2 at IGN.com and 9.2 at Gamespot. It was a lackluster seller.

Then of course the Saturn game Shenmue (thought to be 95 % finished) got remade for Dreamcast and still is the most expensive videogame project to date.

Now for the actual review:

I started up the Saturn, was heavy, and played Gex 2D platformer. Crystal Dynamics succeeded in giving it that B game feel. It felt like Donkey Kong Country of all games. The first and only level I played was the Cemetery, because it was discusting. The controller was decent

Then I popped in Virtua Fighter 1, the really blocky game. This game had only 3 buttons to control from and felt really dated, and there was no special moves that required pressing 1 button twice quickly or C+A or A+B or A+C or anything. The music was horrid.

After that I stuck in Daytona USA. I played the beginner and intermediate races. With the horrid dpad, I managed to get 8th place. Now this game DOES NOT feel like the 2nd best selling Arcade unit of all time, that's for certain. I'm thinking that the best selling one was MS. PAC-MAN. The music was terrific though, but the cars and low res textures feels like 1994! Sega actually improved the gfx further in the Championship Edition, but I don't own it.

Next up is Sonic 3D Blast. I am so used to playing this with the Gens emulator that I give this a slightly better score now that I used the Nights 3D controller. So it got bad reviews. That's because it wasn't very expensive to make. Back then Traveler's Tales were new to the industry and was working cheaply, and Sega had to do money elsewhere such as Shenmue (stupid Shenmue!) and Panzer Dragoon trilogy. I liked the music of the second area. It seemed too easy.

I did play 8 minutes of Nights into Dreams. This game is way to cutsy for me. There are colors, and you go around loops, and the gameplay is so dated now, that Nights into Dreams 2 (while got 6.5 on Wii) probably plays a bit better. It's just that crazy Sega fans will always be biased towards the best selling US Saturn game.

It also had Guardian Heroes, Shining Force 3, and Panzer Dragoon Saga that never got played by many people. I played Guardian Heroes and Panzer Dragoon Saga via a PC-based emulator. My last bought Saturn game from now on will be PD2 Zwei.

The Giver - Sameness (2007-06-26 21:49)

If we were all the same there would be no wars unless there was a resistance of anti-sameness citizens. Everybody would watch the same sports, go to selected vacations by the giver, and have stupid ceremonies where the parents say the newchild's name 30 times when their first baby dies by falling into river. I wouldn't be proud of my accomplishments, because job pay would be the same as most people in my occupation. There would be no military superpower like USA. There would be no 33 people died at Virginia Tech because of a Chinese physco's shooting-spree. There would be no Cuban Missile Crisis in 1962. Fusion or fission bombs would be unlikely. What is wrong with The Giver is every time Jonas stares up in the sky and see a military fighter jet...People think there may war in the past or present. These citizens take every jet seriously. Everybody would play the same non-violent videogames, and the only R movies would be comedy, action and drama. No crime-drama, war-flick, horror, porn-flicks or anime in case of Giver's world. All the Marvel Comics in stock are the 1950-1960s cloned versions where everything is pro-superhero. Bad guy always looses. None of the cars would have chrome and all the pickups would be generic w/o luxury. A world-wide plague would be very unlikely.

The Giver: Ceremonies (2007-06-26 21:51)

I graduated from confirmation at Redeemer Lutheran Church. I was also baptized at a Lutheran church. Today, my religious beliefs are bare minimal. In elementary school, every classmate worked on their project to science fair held in the Gym. I never was awarded the blue ribbon, because my ribbon was white. I didn't try hard enough. Our family celebrates Easter, Thanksgiving, Halloween and Xmas, but those are national holidays as well as Christian holidays. Of those four holidays, we don't go to church for any of them. It is difficult to describe how ceremonies are different in each culture, because Atheists like to adopt Christmas, Thanksgiving and Halloween for unique characteristics respectfully. Everybody gets cake and presents for their birthdays. Every elementary student is involved in school ceremonies including graduation, science fair; a small percentage who play in band are a part of homecoming twice [one for football and the other for basketball] and Christmas band concerts. In elementary school, A-honor role students ceremonies went on special field trip. Other school ceremonies are Christmas band concert, and homecoming football game held at night. The Jewish are known to have 24 more holidays than Christians holidays. Muslims have a lot more ceremonies than Christians and Lutherans. The Super Bowl a national ceremony in that 150,000,000 viewers watch the game on TV and eat junk food. Also since NASCAR is the 2nd hottest spectator sport, 1/3 of US households watch the Daytona 500 Sunday and eat junk food and watch cars go around in circles counterclockwise as the announcer names the places and gives history.

The Giver: Tradegies (2007-06-26 21:52)

It gives me chills when I think of brain death, because it's a human reaction. After death happens my conscious/subconscious is obviously in a infinite state of nothingness. It comes without warning and you're dead before you know something happened, because death is something completely at random. Pain is worst then death, yet counting down to death is worst then pain, but war is the exception. You don't die for your country; you let the other son of a gun die for his country. I prefer the natural random way myself [as a civilian].

As far as tradegies go, I have a many post-Apocalyptic videogames which pretend to be after nuclear fallout or demon fallout. I haven't experience a significant tragedy in reality, but have many examples in videogames. The movies are less important, but I've seen most of the the major end-of-the-earth ones.

Pre-Apocalyptic videogames I own :

Apocalyptic videogames I own :

- 1.Battlefield 2142 for PC

The Giver: Euthanasia (2007-06-26 21:53)

There are reasons why society don't make doctors countdown to death of their patients. It's unmoral, and it's like putting a gun to your head and counting down to zero. In fact the author purposely put that in there, because she knows this is how the death sentence is carried out for murderers (aka the lethal injection death sentence)! The elderly in the book aren't murderers (except for Jona's father who kills babies) so they shouldn't die this way.

The Giver: Main issues (2007-06-26 21:54)

Main issues of "The Giver" is that no one was able to think, feel, grow, and develop as an individual. The community was so controlled that everyone was assigned a job, and a mission in life. Socialization was only done in a positive manner. Schooling was narrowly defined. The selective process, of who lives and who dies, was evil, yet unknowingly to the community. The selective process pertained to the newborns and the elderly. The whole community pretty much acted like programmed videogame characters. The community knew little beyond its borders. Living was simplified and disconnected from the world like the Amish.

The Giver - Sameness (2007-06-26 21:55)

If we were all the same there would be no wars unless there was a resistance of anti-sameness citizens. Everybody would watch the same sports, go to selected vacations by the giver, and have stupid ceremonies where the parents say the newchild's name 30 times when their first baby dies by falling into river. The Giver - Family (2007-06-26 21:55)

Jonas family seems somewhat like Rick Deckard's world as a Blade Runner (<http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0083658/>) and a version of socialism dating sometime in the last 40 years, because of regular sight of supersonic jets (people are afraid of advancements in jets...less perfect than tried and true turboprop cargo planes).

His dad and mom are nurturers, and Jonas is going to be selected by the Receiver at 12. His sister, Lily, is turning 8 and loses her stuffed elephant. Jonas's father speaks to his son of having fun after 12. His family is perfect so Jonas can be selected by the Receiver. Andrei, Jonas's friend, talks a lot and confuses his words and is the same age as Jonas, but isn't perfect and won't be selected by the "Receiver" (man on the cover). This will lead to Jonas screwing up later in the book, because he isn't supposed to see Andrei after 12.

Did anyone know that the movie is coming out this year?

(<http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0435651/>)

A family can be anything ranging from both parents to single parent and can include foster parents so that love and the ability to help with their son's payments are ethical. My family works and watches movies or Fox News. My mom likes to talk on the phone with her few friends and is short tempered.

I have DNA from a Scottish and German family whose parents lived in Wisconsin and Minnesota since birth. My dad's parents moved here from Germany and my Mom's parents were always Scottish DNA-wise.

Families are made up of biological parents no matter and sometimes families of adopted kids. That's not any less of a family. My cousin Joshua was adopted by my Uncle's daughter, but he wanted to live with his biological dad recently so I don't see him anymore. I didn't see him enough to really like him though.

US has largest Domed Structure in 2009 (2007-07-08 19:30)

The NFL and Texas tax dollars are funding a 100,000 seat domed stadium with HDTVs one each side that come close in size to the Miami Dolphins HDTV so that cheap seat fans can have a magnificent view. It's the first Billion dollar football stadium.

HIGH TECH Virtual Tour

The British hold record for largest ed dome structure called the O2 Dome in London. The Miami Dolphins are playing a season game in it sometime in October to expand football fanatics out of North America. Arlington will provide $325 million in funding, and Jones will cover any cost overruns, and NFL will provide only $150 million.

CELL BROADBAND ENGINE FOR PC! (2007-07-15 21:35)

The Cell Broadband Engine is finally able to be purchased for your gaming PC!

You need a dual PCIe socket motherboards of the Cell BE processor in a package designed for high-performance environments. Yes, it comes with driver CD for WinXP/WinVista

The problem I can't figure out is where to buy a motherboard that has the spacing that'll support 2x PCI metal (4 slots total).

Lutheran Church is The Church of Christ, Science + Singing (2007-07-17 16:08)

Yep, it's true I got baptized at a Lutheran Church, it is very flexible and got Conformation in 1999. You can believe in EBEs (aliens) and God (both of them) at the same time. They talked about Columbia Disaster, and we sing all the time. Listen to whatever you want...Metallica, Guns and Roses, whatever. Star Trek word is legal inside Lutheran church! Most modern Christian religion in world in my opinion, because it tolerates The Big Bang Theory + The Great Dieing theory (dinosaur extinction) + Bible at the same time.

I haven't went to church for years though.

PS3 #1 at Amazon, Wal-mart and Circuit city (2007-07-19 21:37)

All of these retailers sold out!

<http://news.punchjump.com/article.ph...hp?id=4537>

Great news. First it was Amazon sold out, Walmart now Circuit City! The consumer knows a reliable, technical advance console then the other.

That and I thought I buy Final Fantasy III (aka: average game) for NDS so that makes 11.

Oh yeah that little stunt about defecting to canada was bogus, although i thought it was cool. I have like no friends here just because what my conservative beliefs are. I wish i could got away lieing like that. Canada is cooler than US!

B22 STRIKE RAPTOR LIVE TOP SECRET THINGY! (2007-07-20 21:38)

Just comment! X44 Manta is getting a first flight later this year. It's a joint NASA/Airforce/Lockheed Martin Venture that modifies a Raptor to a tailless Raptor. Government is doing that as well as they're next gen FB-22 Strike Raptor (i own FB22StrikeRaptor at gmail dot com BTW) Because of the work already done on the F-22, developing the FB-22 might cost about $5 billion to $7 billion dollars.

NAFTA is evil as of today. (2007-07-28 22:50)

What this is exactly is (I really hate to bring the EU into this because they're so liberal) a railroad/US Freeway network that runs thru US, mexico and Ontario. Most of it is in control of the Union Pacific cargo service. It's very much like Yucca Mountain and Cheyenne Mountain where Congress and citizens have 0 control over it.

So basically we're having this North America Free Trade Agreement superhighway [road + track] and that's why the southern US security fence isn't being built. I wanted that fence built (which isn't impossible...Democrats and Arnold Schwarzenegger is making it seem so).

Of course the Mexicans will take it! They're poor and the United States a superpower economy wise. It'll make immigration worse!

259.2 GB Texture Bandwidth Geforce 9800 GTX...I want (2007-07-28 22:54)

This is a filler blog entry until i can think of something to type.

Nvidia said the Geforce 9800 GTX will come with their G92 core (45 nm process and better then G90 and G91 meaning they've been improving it for 18 months +), and it'll do 3x texture bandwidth as Geforce 8800 GTX. That's approximately 259.2 GB/second for the non-overclocked version. I want this of course.

Is this 1 Gigabyte at 1500 MHz in GDDR5 spec?

If this is 600 dollars than I'm asking it for my Bday.

And here are teh specs of my PC I got free from Rasmussen. Just low-end, but it's function is to install hardware. If it breaks...it's me who has to pay for replacement motherboard/CPU etc. It was enough to fit all my favorite software and Vorbis collection onto.

Future of the Gaming industry (2007-07-28 22:54)

Thinking that all that talk about X720, PS4, and Wii2 getting 512 Gigabyte hard drives with 7zip self executable games is not reality. X720 will have a HD-DVD-Rom , PS4 will stay with Bluray, and Wii 2 will stick with DVD-ROM again. I have proof. The X360 had a HD-DVD rom accessory. The Panasonic Q had a DVD-ROM. Nobody in the United States wants to download a DVDs worth of data for $60 if they can torrent it for free. The Wii 2 will have the IBM Xenon processor with switchable 729 MHz and 485 MHz speeds to be backwards compatible with Wii and gamecube. Nintendo said they want to copy the x360, stick with the wiimote, and have backwards compatibility.

Since 2006, Wii only had 2 games I wanted to date. Super Paper Mario and Metroid Prime 3. Rest of it is shovelware or released on gamecube. The PS3 will be so expensive that all it's software will be released on it, but not canceled to eventually be released on ps4, because PS4's Open GL Mt. Evans graphics (DirectX 10.1-like) will require new game engines...and any amount of porting from PS3 won't happen. All games will start from scratch.

Thinking that the PS4 and Xbox 720 are going to be based on the G92 and R600 GPU cores respectfully. PS4 will have a Cell Broadband Engine with micro hole drilling to make it 33 % faster and Xbox 720 will have a modified Xenon with four cores instead of three.

PC gaming will diminish due to World of Warcraft (DirectX 9 game) being played less than Diablo 2 Lord of Destruction online wise since Diablo 2 is the best selling RPG and the record was set in 2001. You can tell if PC games are getting popular by how Blizzard games turn out due to seems like every American gamer played either Diablo 2 or WoW. The amount of meaningful DirectX 10.1 games will be very slim at best. I'm probably only going to have 4 DirectX 10 games and 1 DirectX 10.1 game. The Geforce 9800 GTX will be DirectX 10.1 certified. Once the Geforce 9800 GTX falls under $200...everybody will stop buying new pc game releases, because everything interesting will have come out. Nvidia will come out with a Geforce 10800 GTX in 2009, but it'll be meaningless in people's collection...games are still run great on a Geforce 9800 GTX with 95 % of games being still DirectX 7/8/9. People will play the ones they own already. Thinking in 2009 all the pc gamers will ditch pc gaming for current consoles. It's more efficient.

Instead of watching Sailor Moon, I watched Kyōryū Sentai Zyuranger r, Gosei Sentai Dairanger and Ninja Sentai Kakuranger when I was 6 - 10. I bought this about 8 months ago and has been under my TV ever since. In 10 years, I can show what I was crazy over when i was 6! That's always a good thing I thought. I got it for $60 and it regularity is either $140 up to $250.

No toys...I knew toys were stupid back then. Just VHS tapes when I was the age group.

EFX2 blog went offline (2007-09-11 16:34)

Sorry about the silence for the pass month. EFX2 blog went offline approx 1 year after modblog did in 2006. I had my Valorapter is alien post, I'm getting a Core 2 Quad for Xmas instead of Geforce 9800 GTX which maybe unrealistic now, and my article how how my friends are jackasses.

Now, I got the highest grade in A+ at nice 95 % and about a 94 $ - 96 % in microcomputer. I handed in my final assignment today, and have to do a presentation on Thursday. So that's added to a 89 % in Success Strategies and a 91 % in English 2 from last quarter.

I went into the Gamestop and looked at all the mediocre JRPGs for PSP and wonders why reviews are giving them bad scores. Are these games simply stuck into the past. I didn't exactly see much I wanted. I also updated my game list to current.

Here is my current videogame collection

More ultra rare PS games to play (2007-09-19 23:51)

What's coming out 10 yrs from now (2007-09-25 12:09)

I'm thinking that Intel and AMD and Nvidia will still be in business. ATI is apart of AMD now.

200 Teraflops Rigs of performance with DirectX 15 support?

Nvidia G180 GPUs doing 70 Teraflops with GDDR9 memory while our PCs run DDR7!

40 Terabyte SATA 28,800 RPM Hard drives?

64 Core CPUs with 64 MB L2 Cache and 16 MB L3 Cache or 8 Core with 56 SPEs CPUs modeled after Cell Broadband Engine with 80 MB L2 Cache and licensed from IBM.

All computers will have Quad Layer BDRE drives in them.

Do you believe web browsers will finally intumpment JPEG2000 and SVG into IE8 and Firefox 10.0?

9.10 OctoberUncle Bought me Tales of Destiny II (2007-10-01 09:09)

You don't know how many times I called the Hi Score and Toyriffic for this game. I saw it once at Hi Score in Stillwater, but never picked it up for $80. My uncle bought the game from a Michigan man for $49! That is such a great deal. Now I'll wait a year before I ask him for Valkyrie Profile, because I hate to use him. He didn't ask if it I was into anime or anything! What a guy. This game got a score of 9.2 at IGN with gameplay a 10.

It's coming in the mail.

Bought John Deere ATV (2007-10-01 09:10)

Woah! I got my first ATV ever! Now I'm kicking ass if i can find a friend. I blew my whole savings on it. This guy from Warren, Wisconsin was trying to rid of it during this move. Now I can make friends this way! It's also my first pickup. I'm going to fucking pull my finger at anyone who looks like a enemy. This thing cost a lot of money... $1,985!

Geforce 9800 GTX School Essay! Favoritest Essay in the whole world! :) (2007-10-12 12:48)

In this blog entry I'm retiring my homework last week here, because I thought it was 9.0 out of 10 work, but that's just me. She said my first paragraph was PERFECT while other paragraphs were ranging from 7.5 - 8.5 therefore averaging 8.2.

PIC OF ME G80! <http://img329.imageshack.us/img329/2875/8800pcf7.jpg>

This assignment is about including the Geforce 9800 GTX or Geforce 9800 GTS [1] with my Core 2 Quad + socket 775 motherboard + DDR2 RAM (double-data-rate synchronous dynamic random access memory 2nd generation) purchase. For the case of quality writing, internet forums may not immediately come to mind as a great source. The primary purpose of most forums is simply discussion. This often brings a wide variety of demographics including age, maturity level etc in to play, and consequently varying levels of writing skill. When I post it is often to my benefit to back up any claims I make with valid URL sources, and to post in a clear and informative tone. Peers are apt to respond positively to this approach and subsequently add to my reputation.

In my thread [2], I had to state what I was buying and try not to be bias towards the Geforce 9800 GTX. If I knew what I wanted then online members of PS3forums ask what the purpose of the thread was I would not receive any quality replies. This was interesting that there were only a few DirectX 10 games out [3], but my first Windows Vista boxed version will carry Service Pack 1 with DirectX 10.1 [4]. DirectX 10.1 has Shader Model 5.0, accelerated DXTC texture decompression, improved physics processing and has three times the memory bandwidth of my Geforce 8800 GTX (88 Gigabytes/sec). The forum gamers of this thread convinced me to buy a Core 2 Quad for my birthday, because it's cheaper than the Geforce 9800 GTX. However, I told these biased members I was buying both graphics processing unit and CPU, and I wanted to give them a legitimate reason which was Vista comes with DirectX 10.1. The PS3forum members agree I don't need a Geforce 9800 GTX. No one was right about DirectX 10.1 working with any of the Geforce 8 series video cards though. These forum members said teraflop floating point is not needed in DirectX 10 games even if it's good enough for Xbox 360; a DirectX 9.0c console.

If I had a Geforce 9800 GTX, I could have it free so I have some serious frame rate upgrades which is where PCs are going to be at in a year anyways. The average person buying a new pc will have them inside their computer so I don't see why I shouldn't have it inside my computer I would be even more right picking the AMD Phenom X4. If my were buying the Geforce 9800 GTX for Christmas; I would still have to pay for the Phenom X4 and Socket AM2+ motherboard which is out of my budget. Buying both Core 2 Quad and Geforce 9800 GTS and a gigabyte of DDR2 RAM is within my budget. Everything from now into the future is going to be overpowered and unneeded, yet that's what I'm in business for. Vista will come with DirectX 10.1 and it's future proofing due to my PC having an Athlon 64 X2 4800 inside it. DirectX 10 GPUs are seen as a high end configuration presently, yet an affordable option when it's Geforce 8300 GTS.

In my conclusion, starting a thread on the forum helped me decide that a Geforce 9800 GTX and Core 2 Quad Q6600 was exactly what I wanted. AMD's more expensive Phenom X4, with more L3 cache, is out of my budget. I could gain better game performance with the Geforce 9800 GTX with the Core 2 Quad than I would with a Phenom X4 and my current video card. Windows Vista only recommends a 1 Gigahertz central processing unit with 512 Megabytes of RAM so that obviously doesn't include DirectX 10 game requirements these days. My current Geforce 8800 GTX has a G80 core clocked at 575 Megahertz with 768 Megabytes GDDR4 at 900 Megahertz [5]. Otherwise the Geforce 9800 GTX has 1024 Megabytes of GDDR4 (RAM) at 1.3 Gigahertz with updated firmware and over 700 MHz clock speed. I know I could get by with a Geforce 9800 GTS which costs $200 less. I would still be happy if they just paid for the Geforce 9800 GTS, because it's less expensive then the Geforce 9800 GTX. I believe real world figures won't justify the price point between the Phenom X4 over Core 2 Quad or the Geforce 9800 GTX over Geforce 9800 GTS, and I don't want to not get a DirectX 10.1 graphics processing unit free.

Can you think of better music?

Fucking foreign nationals say this war is endless which isn't true. It's like Rock Concerts where the singer says false thing to raise hype. Democrats are "Hyping"

I say if we're in Iraq/War for 4 more years fighting terrorists - might as well just nuke our enemy's nuke facilities to end this endless war. The cleanup is probably as expensive as funding longer war. We're a superpower...we can't be assed about war for 9 yrs, because we have nuclear weapons and can't use them. B2 Spirits will just nuke the nuclear facilities and take the consequences in my opinion, because no one is helping us "win it" and "the democrats are saying this war is endless.

Nuking Iran/Iraq should make them shut the fuck up.

lock the democrats out of congress so they can't override foolish anti-war damnation. These are the same democrats that opposed the Vietnam war (yet older) and WE WERE WINNING EVERY FIGHT THERE. They listened to British Beatles (which are British and anti-war), did barn parties, were bums, and drugged up. Same guys who think maraquana should to be legalized. We got the best military money can buy. Democrats don't understand. We got 12 of the largest capital ships in the world and nuclear weapons, and 22 B2 Spirits and the #1 economy that is exactly as strong as the whole EU economy. We're just going to have to go back to Iran 10 yrs later. I pwned you. Without winning wars...all that money the military has vanishes and we can't have China's military superior to ours. It's ineivbal China is going to have a larger economy and they're Asian. Whose going to be a counter-superpower of China if they're a superpower? Nobody except USA!

Turkey can have Iraq while US armed forces invade Iran! Turkey looks like they have good sized army and the only European country to use our helicopters (Black Hawk). Anybody who can drive terrorists insane is a good thing. Why would they hurt the situation...they're a part of NATO too.

Who cares about civilian deaths? I mean in Vietnam and Korean nobody gave a damn. All of a sudden...it's not politically right to do collateral damage. Thinking it's a scheme so European Union can pull ahead with your advancing military technology. For example, in Battlefield 2142, European Union Armed Forces basically mirrored US Armed Forces when they had a chance of super power (no USA, frozen over) and no doubt EU did collateral damage in that game. It was made by the Cannooks too.

Gov watching me (2007-10-22 13:35)FB22 Strike Raptor to have HELLADS (2007-10-22 13:40)

First we had large Tactical High Energy Lasers. Then we have Mobile Tactical High Energy Lasers, but our most advanced fighter bomber aircraft, FB22 Strike Raptor will have HELLADS (lazer cannon) so that there is no wasted missiles. The HELLADS program has completed the design and demonstration of a revolutionary subscale high energy laser that supports the goal of a lightweight and compact high energy laser weapon system.

HELLADS

- o Develop and test a 17 kW objective system laser module with integrated power and thermal management subsystems.
- o Complete preliminary design of a 150 kW laser weapon system.
- o Complete detailed design and fabricate a 150 kW laser weapon system demonstrator.
- o Demonstrate performance of a 150 kW HEL and of a 150 kW laser weapon system.

Aero Adaptive Beam Control

- o Conduct design trade studies to develop preferred flow control approach.
- o Develop wind tunnel test plan and design wind tunnel model.
- o Conduct preliminary tests of flow control approaches using computational fluid dynamics and small scale wind tunnel tests.
- o Conduct full scale wind tunnel test to measure aero-optics distortions for turret.
- o Utilize flow control to reduce aero-optics effects and measure wavefronts to model effects of adaptive optics processing.
- o Integrate adaptive aero optics system with wind tunnel model to conduct hardware-in-the-loop wind tunnel demonstration.
- o Design flight test hardware and develop flight test plan.
- o Build turret incorporating flow control and compatible with HELLADS laser system and flight test measuring beam quality

The Media Apocalyptic: over yet? (2007-11-09 16:28)

Anime sales are going down. (though I bought boxsets for $20, $30, and $40, best ones available.

Hollywood has slow DVD sales since mid-2009 Is it Mr. Movies or Netflix that takes over? I think its second hand affect Hollywood personally.

In the age of cell phones or the Internet; audio cds, dvd walkie talkies have been taken to the grave. As far as videogames, there are three-four very essential titles annually. ut I'm 400+ games, so why not wait until new consoles come out? Why would games be worth it in the future. Rumor is they worsen in gameplay every generation.

I have heard rumors that Geforce/Radeon cards are no longer the favorite Xmas gift they used to be, because the latest PC games just require 512 MB of GDDR3 (RAM), and most people meet that benchmark (same amount as Xbox 360 that's why). These 512 MB video cards are only $100 (I spend 5x that amount)!

If you can't spend money on media, that leaves only the requirements for staying alive (we all knew that part). Ipods are a waste of money, because Android is price friendly. Everybody has a PC, why not rely on DSL. 3G/4G charges are expensive.

There is nothing out there practically, and that is a huge problem. Gamespot and game forums are one of the few ways to go besides golf, RVing, game tickets. Since the game forums are foreign like UK, they're pro-liberal and they wonder what's wrong with us? The media dumbs down on purpose, I blame all three liberals/socialists/marxist in the world for this (their specialty)!

Lockheed Martin X-33 (2007-11-14 15:27)ANTI-GRAVITY FIGHTER DISC

Information has come into the public's attention which suggests that Lockheed has been working in the "black" on a discoid-shaped aircraft. Not only does this aircraft utilise anti-gravitic propulsion, but the discs are believed to be equipped with highly advanced particle beam weaponry.

Lockheed does hold the patents on disc-shaped passenger aircraft, so it is not unreasonable to assume they have also (successfully) investigated the possibility of creating such craft as military platforms.

Colonel Steve Wilson, USAF (deceased) stated that black military astronauts trained at a secret aerospace academy and later would operate out of Beale and Vandenberg Air Force Bases in California.

From those bases, these military astronauts regularly fly trans-atmospherically and out into space. One of the aerospace craft they use, Colonel Wilson reported, is the X-22A, Lockheed's two-man anti-gravity disc craft.

Evidence for the existence of the X-22A first came to light during Operation Desert Storm when American soldiers (and most likely Iraqi soldiers as well) made sightings of disc-shaped craft in the desert hovering near to U.S. officers. People also made claims of seeing these craft fire intense beams of light that removed any trace of what previously sat at the location, apart from a circular charcoal-like burn mark on the ground.

A Desert Storm soldier stated the following: "In the first days film footage and especially Video-cams which a large number of G.I.s had were impounded so they wouldn't capture any sensitive material."

Dr. Richard Boylan states the following about the X-22A:

"The described disc was clearly an anti-gravity levitating aerial weapons platform in the U.S. arsenal, possibly a Lockheed X-22A two-man discoid craft, the real DarkStar, (of which the unmanned drone X-22 DarkStar is a front "cover" aircraft program to disguise this manned anti-gravity fighter disc.) Further, it appears that the real DarkStar manned discs come equipped with the latest Neutral Particle Beam weapons, which take apart the target at the molecular level. ET craft do not incinerate humans. Only human military fighters are so deployed. So this report does not deal with any extraterrestrial event.

Further, it appears that the real DarkStar manned discs come equipped with the latest Neutral Particle Beam weapons, which take apart the target at the molecular level. ET craft do not incinerate humans. Only human military fighters are so deployed. So this report does not deal with any extraterrestrial event.

As a behavioral scientist and clinician, I have been working for over 15 years with persons who report having had an encounter with an extraterrestrial intelligent life form, a Star Visitor. During the course of this work I have felt it necessary to learn as much as possible about the veridical reality of UFOs, and what the government already knows about these visitors from afar.

As information on Star Visitors and their encounters with humans piled up, I began to publish my findings, presenting them at national and international conferences, in specialty journals, and in media interviews. This in turn brought me to the attention of certain figures, currently or formerly in highly-classified sectors of government and the military and intelligence agencies. These individuals decided to leak certain additional information to me, knowing that I would thus serve as a conduit to bring such leaked information to the attention of the portion of the public interested and ready for such information.

My doctoral training in psychology and anthropology taught the value of first-hand field research. And because the existence and operations of various undeclared or secret government installations related to Star Visitor matters are not going to be plumbed without field research, I made it my task, starting in 1992, to reconnoiter, observe, and in some instances penetrate many of the most important of these installations. I reasoned that the knowledge I gained could be very helpful to the experiencers who consult with me, to help them feel secure that they had not hallucinated, but that such advanced technology exists, and in fact, the American government is in possession of some of this technology.

Additionally, the hundreds of experiencers of encounters shared with me information they possessed, including about advanced U.S. craft, either by reason of being told such things by the Star Visitors, or by being kidnaped by rogue military-intelligence units and taken aboard one of these craft to one or other of these installations, or viewed such craft once they arrived. This added to my store of information and data on advanced U.S. antigravity craft.

While I have gathered, or been entrusted by others with, considerable information on special American aerospace craft, I do not purport to know everything that is in the U.S. arsenal, nor everything about the operations and capabilities of the craft that I am about to identify. What I know is presented here. I have held nothing back.

At this time, I am aware of the existence of thirteen kinds of special-technology advanced aerospace platforms [milspeak for craft], all incorporating antigravity technology in some form. These thirteen are: the Northrop Grumman B-2 Spirit Stealth Bomber, the F-22 Raptor advanced stealth fighter, and its successor, the F-35 Lightning II advanced stealth fighter; the Aurora, Lockheed-Martin's X-33A, the Lockheed X-22A two-man antigravity disc fighter, Boeing and Airbus Industries' Nautilus, the TR3-A Pumpkinseed, the TR3-B Triangle, Northrop's "Great Pumpkin" disc, Teledyne Ryan Aeronautical's XH-75D Shark antigravity helicopter, Lockheed-Martin and Northrop's jointly-developed TAW-50 hypersonic antigravity fighter-bomber, and the Northrop Quantum Teleportation Disc.

Before we examine these thirteen exotic aerospace craft, a brief overview of the different forms of generating antigravity fields is in order.

The most primitive antigravity technology is electrogravitic. This involves using voltages in the millions of volts to disrupt the ambient gravitational field. This results in an 89 % reduction in gravity's hold on airframes in such vehicles as the B-2 Stealth Bomber and the TR3-B Astra triangular craft. And given the considerable ambient ionization field I observed around the X-22A, it is reasonable to assume that extreme-voltage electrogravitics is also employed with these craft.

The next level up of sophistication is magnetogravitic. This involves generating high-energy toroidal fields spun at incredible rpm's, which also disrupts the ambient gravitational field, indeed to the extent that a counterforce to Earth's gravitational pull is generated. The early British aeronautical engineers called this dynamic counterbary. This may have been used in some earlier American saucers and prototypes, but I have only been told that the secret Nautilus spacefaring craft uses magnetic pulsing, which appears to utilize this technology.

The third level of sophistication, that used in the more modern American antigravity craft, is direct generation and harnessing of the gravitational strong force. Such a strong-force field extends slightly beyond the atomic nucleus of Element 115, an exotic element donated by Star Visitor scientist-consultants to human scientists at S-4, a secret base south of Area 51. By amplifying that exposed gravitational strong force, and using antimatter reactor high energy, and then directing it, it is possible to lift a craft from the Earth and then change directions by vectoring the shaped antigravity force field thus generated. Important information about this third technology is available on Bob Lazar's website. (1.) This information is also described on the Bob Lazar video. Lazar worked on extraterrestrial technology at Los Alamos National Laboratory, and Area 51's Site S-4. (2.)

Let us now examine these 13 advanced craft in more detail. The amount of information available for each varies; in some cases more is known, in other cases very little.

1) The B-2 Stealth Bomber is manufactured Northrop-Grumman. The Air Force describes it as a low-observable, strategic, long-range heavy bomber capable of penetrating sophisticated and dense air-defense shields. Retired Air Force Colonel Donald Ware passed on to me information from a three-star general he knows, who revealed to him in July that the B-2 [Stealth bombers] have electro-gravitic systems on board; and that this explains why our 21 Northrop B-2s cost about a billion dollars each. (3.)

2) The F-22 Raptor advanced stealth fighter is built by a joint effort of the Lockheed-Martin Skunk Works and Boeing's Phantom Works. In crude imitation of extraterrestrial starcraft, the guidance system of this aircraft incorporates special Artificial Intelligence (AI), meaning that Star Visitor genetic material is incorporated into the semi-alive and autonomously-functioning guidance system mated with the aircraft. In addition the F-22 has antigravity field propulsion capability, which is exercised selectively by the pilot who is in mental connection with the AI guidance system, which activates the antigravity propulsion as needed in coordination with the F-22's conventional jet engine thrust, to effect the maneuvering of the F-22 Raptor. I have personally witnessed a F-22 stop on its tail in mid-air and dance slowly and gently about without regard for gravity's pull.

3) The "next generation" F-35 Lightning II advanced stealth fighter is built by Lockheed-Martin, Northrop-Grumman and BAE. The F-35 also incorporates quasi-alive Artificial Intelligence and antigravity field propulsion, (recovered re-worked Star Visitor technologies), in addition to jet thrust.

4) The Aurora is a moderate-sized spacefaring vehicle. The late National Security Council scientist Dr. Michael Wolf (4.) of NSC's unacknowledged Special Studies Group subcommittee, (formerly called MJ-12), has stated that the Aurora can operate on both conventional fuel and antigravity field propulsion systems. He further stated that the Aurora can travel to the Moon. Wolf had also disclosed to me that the U.S. has a small station on the Moon, and a tiny observation post on Mars (5). Thus I doubt that Dr. Wolf would characterize the Aurora thus, unless it was a vessel already used in making such trips. He disclosed additionally that the Aurora operates out of Area 51, (Groom Dry Lake Air Force Station), at the northeast corner of the Nellis AFB Range, north of Las Vegas, Nevada.

5) The Lockheed-Martin X-33A military spaceplane is a prototype of Lockheed's other spaceplane, the single-stage-to-orbit reusable aerospace vehicle, the National SpacePlane. Lockheed-Martin does not say too much about its winged, delta-shape X-33 VentureStar, except to say that we are building it. To be at that stage of development for its public-program SpacePlane, clearly Lockheed-Martin has already long since built prototypes, as well as an unacknowledged military version, which I have dubbed the X-33A. The 'A' suffix stands for antigravity.

Colonel Donald Ware, USAF (ret.) told me that he had recently learned from a three-star General that the VentureStar X-33 has an electrogravitics (antigravity) system on board (6.). This virtually assures that the unacknowledged military antigravity version, the X-33 A, must surely also have electrogravitics on board. It is possible that what I have called the X-33A is the Aurora craft which Dr. Wolf described.

6) the Lockheed X-22A is a two-man antigravity disc fighter. The late Colonel Steve Wilson, USAF (ret.), stated that military astronauts trained at a secret aerospace academy separate from the regular Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, CO. These military astronauts then operate out of Beale and Vandenberg Air Force Bases, Northern California. From those bases, these military astronauts regularly fly trans-atmospherically and out into space (7). One of the aerospace craft they use, Colonel Wilson reported, is the X-22A.

Another informant, 'Z', aka 'Jesse', who formerly worked at the NSA, told me that the Lockheed X-22A antigravity fighter disc fleet is equipped with Neutral Particle Beam directed-energy weapons, that it is capable of effecting optical as well as radar invisibility, and that it is deployable for worldwide military operations from a new U.S. Space Warfare Headquarters, located in Utah. (8).

Recently I also heard from an Army engineer, formerly TDY'ed to NASA, who shall remain unnamed at his request. He also confirmed that Lockheed had made the X-22A, the two-man antigravity fighter disc which I had seen test-flown in a canyon adjacent to the main Area 51 operations zone. He explained why I had seen the X-22A so nervously flown during that test flight. He said that the original X-22A had had a standard altimeter hard-wired into it, but that such an instrument would give faulty readings in the craft's antigravity field, which bends space-time. He had recommended that they instead use a gradiometer, which would function better. Apparently his suggestion was finally taken up, since in more recent years I have seen the X-22As flying more smoothly and confidently at high altitudes over and near Area 51.

Another informant who wishes his identity kept private related operational details about military deployment of anti-gravity disc craft which sound like the X-22A. He reports: 'During operation Desert Storm a close relative of mine was in charge of a Marine Division right on the front. In the first days film footage and especially video-cams which a large number of G.I.s had were impounded, so they wouldn't capture any sensitive material. Iraq was pumped up and Gung-Ho, since they had well over 50,000 troops ready to charge us, [and] since we only had about 3500 they knew of, and they knew [that], because of the close proximity of troops we couldn't nuke them, so, they were assuming piece of cake . Wrong.

'Two pictures my relative confiscated from one of his officers showed: 1. a large disc-shaped craft slightly in front of our men with a high intensity beam of light emitting out of it; then, 2. where men, equipment, etc. was [had stood], there only remained dark charcoal-like spots on the desert floor. We have had this technology for quite a while.' The described disc was clearly an antigravity, levitating, aerial-weapons platform in the U.S. arsenal. Quite possibly it was the Lockheed X-22A two-man discoid craft, the real DarkStar, of which the unmanned drone X-22 DarkStar is but an aircraft 'cover' program to disguise the existence of this manned antigravity fighter disc, the X-22A.

Further, as 'Z' noted, the real manned discs come equipped with the latest Neutral Particle Beam weapons, which take apart the target at the molecular level. Star Visitor craft do not incinerate humans. Only human military fighters are so deployed. So the above report does not deal with any extraterrestrial event.

7) The Nautilus is another space-faring craft, a secret military spacecraft which operates by magnetic pulsing (9.). It operates out of the unacknowledged new headquarters of the U.S. Space Command, deep under a mountain in Utah. It makes twice-a-week trips up to the secret military-intelligence space station, which has been in deep space for the past thirty years, and manned by U.S. and USSR (now CIS) military astronauts. The Nautilus also is used for super-fast surveillance operations, utilizing its ability to penetrate target country airspace from above from deep space, a direction not usually expected. It is manufactured jointly by Boeing's Phantom Works near Seattle and EU's Airbus Industries Anglo-French consortium. During travel to Washington State several years ago, I had a conversation with a former Boeing executive who worked in their Phantom Works, Boeing's black projects division, (roughly the equivalent of Lockheed's Skunk Works). The executive confirmed what I had earlier learned from an intelligence insider: that Boeing had teamed up with Europe's Airbus Industrie to manufacture the Nautilus.

8) The TR3-A 'Pumpkinseed' is a super-fast air vehicle. The 'Pumpkinseed' nickname is a reference to its thin oval airframe, whose contours resemble that seed. It may be the craft identified as using pulse detonation technology for propulsion in a sub-hypersonic regime, and also uses antigravity technology for either mass-reduction or complementary field propulsion at higher speed levels. As air breathers, these Pulse Detonation Wave Engines (PDWEs) could theoretically propel a hypersonic aircraft towards Mach 10 at an altitude in excess of 180,000 feet. Used to power an trans-atmospheric vehicle, the same PDWEs might be capable of lifting the craft to the edge of space when switched to rocket mode.

9) the TR3-B 'Astra' is a large triangular anti-gravity craft within the U.S. fleet. Black projects defense industry insider Edgar Rothschild Fouche wrote about the existence of the TR3-B in his book, Alien Rapture (10).

The TR3-B does not depend solely or principally on its hydrogen-oxygen rockets. It is a highly reduced-gravity aerospace craft manufactured in secret "black programs" by Humans. The antigravity field produced reduces the vehicles weight by about 90 % so that very little thrust is required to either keep it aloft or to propel it at Mach 9 speeds, or higher.

The TR-3B vehicle's outer coating is electro-chemical reactive and changes with electrical RF Radar stimulation and can change reflectiveness, radar absorptiveness, and color. This is also the first US vehicle to use quasi-crystals in the vehicle's skin. This polymer skin, when used in conjunction with the TR-3Bs Electronic Counter Measures and, ECCM, can make the vehicle look like a small aircraft, or a flying cylinder - or even trick radar receivers into falsely detecting a variety of aircraft, no aircraft, or several aircraft at various locations.

A circular, plasma filled accelerator ring called the Magnetic Field Disrupter, surrounds the rotatable crew compartment and is far ahead of any imaginable technology. Sandia and Livermore laboratories developed the reverse engineered MFD technology. The plasma, mercury based, is pressurized at 250,000 atmospheres at a temperature of 150 degrees Kelvin, and accelerated to 50,000 rpm to create a super-conductive plasma with the resulting gravity disruption [reduction of almost all of the pull of gravity and effects of inertia].

The MFD generates a magnetic vortex field, which disrupts or neutralizes the effects of gravity on mass within proximity, by 89 percent. The MFD creates a disruption of the Earth's gravitational field upon the mass within the circular accelerator. The mass of the circular accelerator and all mass within the accelerator, such as the crew capsule, avionics, MFD systems, fuels, crew environmental systems, and the nuclear reactor, are reduced by 89 %. The current MFD in the TR-3B causes the effect of making the vehicle extremely light, and able to outperform and outmaneuver any craft yet constructed - except, of course, those back-engineered total-antigravity craft which the government does not admit exist. To see the 13 known antigravity craft of US manufacture, see: www.drboylan.com/xplanes2.html The TR-3B is a high altitude, stealth, reconnaissance platform with an indefinite loiter time. Once you get it up there at speed, it doesn't take much propulsion to maintain altitude.

With the vehicle mass reduced by 89 % the craft can travel at Mach 9, vertically or horizontally. My sources say the performance is limited only the stresses that the human pilots can endure. Which is a lot, really, considering along with the 89 % reduction in mass, the G forces are also reduced by 89 %. The crew of the TR-3B should be able to comfortably take up to 40Gs.

The TR-3Bs propulsion is provided by 3 multimode thrusters mounted at each bottom corner of the triangular platform. The TR-3 is a sub-Mach 9 vehicle until it reaches altitudes above 120,000 feet - then who knows how fast it can go!

The reactor heats the liquid hydrogen and injects liquid oxygen in the supersonic nozzle, so that the hydrogen burns concurrently in the liquid oxygen afterburner. The multimode propulsion system can operate in the atmosphere, with thrust provided by the nuclear reactor, in the upper atmosphere, with hydrogen propulsion, and in orbit, with the combined hydrogen/oxygen propulsion. The engines are reportedly built by Rockwell.

10) The Northrop antigravity disc, (designation unknown), is manufactured by Northrop Aircraft Corporation. I have dubbed it the 'Great Pumpkin' from its brilliant ruddy golden-orangish glow. I first saw these craft operationally test-flown in 1992 above the Groom Range ridge line at Area 51, Nevada. Later I saw the same intensely burning-bright orange-gold craft that I had seen above Areas 51 being test-flown sixty miles north of Los Angeles, in the Tehachapi Mountains east of Edwards Air Force Base. There the Northrop has its secret saucer manufacturing works buried deep within the mountains. I saw the same intensely burning-bright orange-gold craft test-flown above Northrop's mountaintop test bed there as I had seen above Areas 51/S-4 (11). When energized these discs emit their characteristic intense glow. It is reasonable to assume that this is due to strong ionization, and that electrogravitics is the methodology of their field propulsion.

11) The XH-75D or XH Shark antigravity helicopter is manufactured by Teledyne Ryan Aeronautical Corporation of San Diego (now part of Northrop-Grumman). USAF Colonel Steve Wilson reported that many of these XH-75Ds were assigned to the Delta/National Reconnaissance Organization Division which retrieves downed UFOs. That Division is also implicated in mutilating cattle as a psychological warfare program on the American public, to try to get citizens to fear and hate extraterrestrials through assuming that aliens are the ones cutting up the cattle. Colonel Wilson also leaked a drawing of the XH-75D Shark. (See his illustration at: <http://www.drboylan.com/shrkhelo.jpg>)

12) The TAW-50 is a hypersonic, antigravity space fighter-bomber. A defense contractor with whom I have been in communication leaked to me details of this U.S. Advanced TAW-50 warcraft. Developed during the early 1990s, the capabilities of this war-bird are jaw-dropping. And the technology shows that the Defense Department did not fail to utilize what it learned combing through the wreckage of various UFO crashes.

The TAW-50 was jointly developed by the Lockheed-Martin Skunk Works (Palmdale-Helendale, CA) and Northrop (undoubtedly at their undeclared Anthill facility within the Tehachapi Mountains, northwest of Lancaster, CA.) Both companies have a history of development of secret anti-gravity craft at these Mojave Desert facilities.

The TAW-50 has speed capabilities well in excess of Mach 50, a number the contractor calls 'a very conservative estimate'. Its actual speed is classified. Since Mach-1 is 1,225 kilometers per hour, (approximately 748 mph), this means that the TAW-50 is capable of moving considerably faster than 38,000 mph. In comparison, the velocity required to escape Earth's gravity is 25,000 mph. Therefore the TAW-50 is capable of going into space, and does.

The TAW-50 has a SCRAM (supersonic ramjet) propulsion system for passing through the outer atmosphere. The TAW-50 utilizes electrogravitics to maintain its own artificial gravity while in weightless space, as well as to nullify the vehicle's mass during operations. The TAW-50's power supply is provided by a small nuclear power generator that the contractor said is Normal-Inert. The contractor said that the space plane uses electromagnetoferrimetric power generation by the immersion of pellets in heavy water (deuterium) and specially-designed coil superconductive magnets, which yield enormous amounts of free electrons when placed in an immersion which has been triggered into an oscillating field-state flux.

The TAW-50 has a crew of four. Nevertheless, the TAW-50 flies so fast that it requires computers to fly it. These were developed by American Computer Company, who derived them from its Valkyrie XB/9000 AI [artificial intelligence] Guidance series. They utilize a RISC Milspec Superchip. There are 180 of them in the flight control system, and 64 more in the weapons guidance system, the contractor reported.

It can carry a combined payload of glide bombs and a package of MIRV (Multiple Independently-targeted Reentry Vehicles, mil-speak for a group of intercontinental ballistic missiles), each of which can seek out and strike a different target. The MIRV pack also contains reentry-capable balloon countermeasures to make it very difficult for laser and other defensive weapons to track down where the real MIRVs are and intercept them. The TAW-50 is armed with its own Kill Laser system, which can track and immolate SAM (Surface-to-Air missiles), STTA (Surface-To-Trans-Atmosphere missiles), ATA (Air-To- Air missiles), and ATTA (Air-To-Trans-Atmospheric missiles). The TAW-50's killer lasers can also knock down high-performance fighter interceptors. The TAW's Kill Laser is much smaller than the earlier 1980s-era SDI (Star Wars program) models, and has a miniaturized cooling core and 500 times the wattage. The contractor said it uses a spontaneous nucleonic burst to trigger the lasing [laser] effect.

In addition, the TAW-50 is armed with microsuperexplosive HyperDart missiles. These are just a little larger than ordinary aircraft cannon ammunition, but travel at hypersonic speed for up to three minutes, and have enormous explosive capability. One HyperDart can blow apart a MiG fighter anywhere within 20 feet of the HyperDart. The TAW-50 carries several hundred HyperDarts.

Because the TAW-50 is designed to operate in space, it has on board a two-day air supply. This air supply can be extended by using its scoop system and traveling into the upper atmosphere to harvest more oxygen.

The contractor did not reveal the size of the space fighter-bomber except to say, 'It's a pretty big thing.' The performance of the TAW-50 makes it virtually impossible to defend against. It can hide in orbit many hundreds of miles into space, orbiting at times at 22,000 mph. Then, without warning, it can dive straight down through the atmosphere at over 38,000 miles per hour on an 80-degree attack vector, reverse direction within 150 feet of the ground with very little loss of motion and without a glide turn, and almost instantly go vertically straight up at over 38,000 mph until long after it leaves the atmosphere and resumes orbiting in space. The contractor noted, 'Those [electro-]gravitics allow it to change its mass to almost nothing in a moment, and reverse direction in a second, increase its acceleration to so many times G [Earth's gravity] it's not funny, yet they are able to nearly nullify the G-force on the pilots. They [the electrogravitics] are fourth-generation, with the ability to bring it to a complete standstill in under 2 milliseconds, if need be, without crushing the pilots, and keep it there for quite some time.' The contractor notes, 'It's far too fast for tracking radars.' 'And,' he adds, 'what military aims its radars straight up?'

The TAW-50 can be refueled and rearmed in orbit by docking with the secret undeclared Military Space Station that is in orbit (12) The entire refueling and rearming procedure takes under 10 minutes. Who mans the gas pumps? Military astronauts trained at the Secret Air Force Academy, located in the hills immediately west of the official Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, CO. These military astronauts rotate duty by traveling to and from Vandenberg Air Force Base on other military antigravity vehicles (13). <http://www.drboylan.com/xplanes2.html>

The Cape Canaveral Space Shuttles have carried the arming platforms ('classified Defense Department payloads') up to the secret Military Space Station. The contractor reported that with a few extra tanks of LOX (liquid oxygen), the TAW-50 could fly to the Moon and back.

As of 2002, the U.S. has 20 TAW-50s in its arsenal. But, as the contractor commented, 'You could take out an entire nation in under 10 days with only 10 of these, doing three attacks a day. One can wipe out an entire city.'

The electrogravitics for the TAW-50 was produced by GE Radionics. Pratt & Whitney designed the SCRAM atmospheric penetrator technology. American Computing Company created the artificial-intelligence supercomputers. The contractor said he could not tell me anything else. And it was clear he did not want his name used. So, this is what is known.

13) The Northrop Quantum Teleportation Disc. Are the above the current state-of-the-art in advanced aerospace craft? No. There have been advances beyond "mere" antigravity field propulsion. Quantum particulate physics is now being used to update a variety of aerospace craft and their weapons systems.

On a 09/16/05 field trip to the boundary of Area 51, during a middle-of-the-night observation, I saw first one, then another, and finally six brightly-lit objects suddenly appear at approximately 1000' (305 meters) height above the desert floor. The intensely-glowing, ruddy, golden-orangish ionization field surrounding these craft appeared identical to the field around the Northrop antigravity disc. But in the 13 years since I had last observed the Northrop discs above Area 51, and at their Tehachapi Mountains manufacturing site, considerable progress has been made.

In 1992, the Northrop disc slowly rose vertically from its flight pad and gradually reached flight altitude. But in 2005 these craft are able to depart from their flight pad and suddenly appear at flight altitude without any visible ascent. And it is not a matter of their ionization field having been turned off during ascent for stealth purposes. The ionization field comes with electrogravitic field propulsion. If the ionization were turned off, the craft would have fallen from the sky. Rather what appears to be going on is that the Northrop engineers have incorporated quantum physics principles into the propulsion. Simply stated, Northrop appears to have harnessed quantum entanglement to achieve quantum teleportation. To the observer the craft simply ceases to exist on the flight pad and instantly begins to exist at, (in this case), 1000 feet altitude. If the interpretation of this observation is correct, then there exists an 13th entry in the U.S. antigravity arsenal, the Northrop Quantum Teleportation Disc. If the black-budget scientists keep advancing along these lines, we could foresee the day when a fleet of Air Force craft suddenly "cease to exist" on the air base runway and instantly appear at 35,000 feet altitude over a target city halfway around the globe.

Afterward:

America has used its enormous wealth to become the global super-power. The TAW-50 is but one example of its exotic, unnecessarily proliferative, and highly-destructive arsenal. The world awaits the day when America finds its soul, and pays more attention to matters of spirit, mind, and metaphysical development, and withdraws from its addiction to war toys.

It has been said that if the American people knew what the military had in their arsenal today, they wouldn't believe it, and would think that someone was fantasizing about a George Lucas Star Wars movie episode.

But it's not science-fiction. The future is already here.

The implications of these advanced antigravity craft, back-engineered by humans, are several. All of the antigravity technology is in the control of the organization conducting the UFO Cover-Up. This organization is so heavily infiltrated by Cabal types that Dr. Michael Wolf regretfully concluded that the Cabal had effective control of it. He should know; he was a high member of that Special Studies Group, [formerly MJ-12], buried within the National Security Council. Since the Cabal effectively control the development and special uses of these craft, there remains a very high danger that the Cabal will use its growing antigravity fleet to try to repel the Star Visitors and even conduct Space War. Elements within the U.S. Air Force and the Naval Space Command are making preparations for such a Space War.

What can we do about this as lightworkers, Star Kids, Star Seed adults or other humans of good will?

First is to keep ourselves informed about dangerous and evil uses which antigravity (and quantum) technology can be applied to.

Second is to contact our political representatives to oppose policies and weapons systems development that is oriented towards space warfare.

Third is to encourage the release of this technology into the civilian sector, where it can revolutionize transportation, energy generation, large construction projects, and other peaceful uses.

Fourth, the existence of this human technology is a two-edged sword for the Cabal. Not only is the existence of antigravity technology starting to get out to the public, but also the very existence of a massive worldwide organization conducting the UFO Cover-Up and confiscation of Star Visitor technology. As the public becomes aware that the Cabal have unfairly monopolized this technology for 40+ years, the public will become incensed at the Cabal for their greed and selfishness. This then becomes the opportunity to expose and discredit the Cabal, the Number One obstacle to human safety and progress.

Being smart pays off after all. Got and enabled English MUI, enabled SLI config, installed Comodo firewall, moved Vorbis collection to it. Always forget to push power button to shut down otherwise it goes into hibernation. I'm almost as happy as I would if there was a Geforce 9 inside it. I'm just feel bad when officially the DirectX 10.1 games come out in 12 months. I could buy it when it comes out, but still....

Google Video/YouTube conspiracy (2007-12-28 05:28)

Adobe Flash 9 beta has H264 main profile decoding and Google Video / Youtube still don't decode H264. They read H264 and encode your video into Xvid, but that isn't good enough. In fact why would you trust a 9 year old codec vs. a 2003 one and in 1998 everybody had shit for processing power compared to 2003 so that's why it's a conspiracy. Forced to use fliedn all this time. All that talk about not needing anything better than xvid is really bogus and strange as it is stupid. Maybe I'm not a genius, but I do know people get excited for Xvid than they do x264 rips. Can't decode it? Bullshit. Google is teh most popular search engine and everybody uses it? Oh I get it! You're all still humping Dr. DivX like it's the best thing evar aren't yeah?

Good, now those Fortune 500 online companies can upgrade now that Flash does it. DirectTV and Dish Network and the US military done it? I don't get them people. The beta is practially stable. IE would be guarenteed crash without the beta. What changed?

Hey I was reading your blog and I saw you listed a song I have been looking for, for quite some time. I would have ordered the vinyl except the Euro to the USD makes every record I try and get from out there way expensive.

Anywho, I was wondering if you had the MP3 and if you did if you could possibly send it to me or upload it, thanks!

OpenSuse 10.3 installed X4 (2007-12-30 16:33)

Loaded Gstreamer and Mplayer for Linux onto two of the four computers I installed today , because I had nothing to do actually. The Gnome desktop screenshot looks exactly like the screenshot I took in December 2006. Microsoft fully supports Suse 10.x. Novell and Microsoft are friends.

Adolf Hitler was stupid (2008-01-11 06:09)

Catharine the Great of the Russian Empire always favored the American colonies. The USSR case is the enemy of our enemy is our friend!

Adolf Hitler sent military equipment to north Africa when he could've focused his battalions to Moscow and made the USSR surrender. This was so the Italian dictator could expand his Roman Empire. The Italian Army were loyal, but avoided bootcamp.

Power failure NIGHTMARE (2008-01-17 15:20)

My Systemax Hellcat PSU shuttered twice and than thirdly sparks and that was the end of it. Only good thing to come out of this is the fact that I didn't buy either Hellgate London or The Witcher at GameStop when I was with Randy. We drove to Eau Claire to walk around the mall. So I wasted 190 miles of gas just getting the situation under control. I got to shoot that desktop video (@myspace) in time before the PSU failed.

TIMELINE cos I'm lazy.

- a.) Borrowed $60 from dad (free money)
 - b.) Ultra X Connect 500 watt power supply blew
 - c.) Went to Circuit city to ask if they had Ultra X Connect, and they said "no"
 - d.) Went to Best Buy to ask if they had X Connect...they said no
 - e.) Bought BFGtech 650 Watt power supply for $149
 - f.) looked up BFGtech 650 watt power supply at circuitcity.com which was $109
 - g.) couldn't find reciet
 - h.) asked family member to pay for my installation costs and she agreed ($50)
 - i.) drove back to repair place with frame stock to the X Connect for the tower, because I told them to jerry-rig it.
 - j.) found out the BFGtech 650 watt power supply was defective
 - k.) drove over to the pc repair place to pick it up
 - l.) Got free replacement, but spent 125 miles worth of gas during the day.
 - M.) brought 2nd BFGtech power supply to Best Buy and got all $150 back
 - N.) told them to buy Coolermaster Extreme Power 650 watt power supply, because Coolermaster is at the very top of high end (or was) PSUs, and same model of the motherboard that burned out. Now hoping nothing else burnt out along with mobo. Near $250 on parts and labor!
- Should be completed by Tuesday.

Conspiracies (2008-01-18 04:41)

I know none of you will reply, but there is a conspiracy. Eric at school once told me that the field that I'm going in is where nobody gives a shit about your personal life or what the fuck I think...end of story. They want the job done and I dunno if I can put up with this shit. Problem is with a school this expensive, I'd think I'd be more popular (have friends at least) with a business degree rather than a “geek degree” We live in a society that hates geeks. I lived 5 years trying find a person that gives a shit about my job and what I do! People are evil! Why the fuck would I go into a field that nobody cares what I think...that I'm an android doing the master's bidding. It's really like that in this field according to Eric! No LAN parties, no humanity. Of course you can have all of this at $8.00 and no more. It's insane. Nobody would treat me and talk about what I want to talk about at 8.01+/hourly rage especially videogames, because they're talented somehow and wouldn't want me to get some. If they weren't stupid (the conspiracy) than everybody would want me to come over, follow me around, talk to me. If other geeks want to be my friend; it's because they want my job and they want to end my career at wherever I am at. It was that way at Assurant.

It's a conspiracy. Dean student gets me nothing! No new friends are racing towards me. That's the conspiracy. Why the fuck would I want to go in the IT field without these things. With a job, people who are my age aren't geeks and they hate videogames or talk about it amongst themselves even if I was talented, I wouldn't ever know. Another conspiracy.

Now with a business degree I could give up “geek” and actually have a single friend [multiple friends would be sweeter] in the mainstream culture, because my culture would be the same as theirs. That means I wouldn't be so fucking stircrazy all the time at home. The fact I'm at home all the time by myself is a conspiracy.

B3 Switchblade to have HELLADS and [again] KICK FOREIGN ASSES! (2008-01-25 00:46)

I just learned that the FB22 Strike Raptor got canceled and the [url=http://www.area51zone.com/aircraft/-switchblade.shtml]B3 Switchblade[/url] from Northrop Grumman took it's place. It will have HELLADS (laser cannon), glass cockpit, and have longer range and as large (larger fuel tanks) than either FB22 Strike Raptor and B2 Spirit! It's another flying wing I believe and it might be a fighter bomber, because that's what the USAF was hyped about when they wanted the FB22 Strike Raptor!

I was going to post this last month, but I've been saving it for rainy day!

Program Plans

HELLADS

- o Develop and test a 17 kW objective system laser module with integrated power and thermal management subsystems.

- o Complete preliminary design of a 150 kW laser weapon system.

- o Complete detailed design and fabricate a 150 kW laser weapon system demonstrator.

- o Demonstrate performance of a 150 kW HEL and of a 150 kW laser weapon system.

Aero Adaptive Beam Control

- o Conduct design trade studies to develop preferred flow control approach.

- o Develop wind tunnel test plan and design wind tunnel model.

- o Conduct preliminary tests of flow control approaches using computational fluid dynamics and small scale wind tunnel tests.

- o Conduct full scale wind tunnel test to measure aero-optics distortions for turret.

- o Utilize flow control to reduce aero-optics effects and measure wavefronts to model effects of adaptive optics processing.

- o Integrate adaptive aero optics system with wind tunnel model to conduct hardware-in-the-loop wind tunnel demonstration.
 - o Design flight test hardware and develop flight test plan.
 - o Build turret incorporating flow control and compatible with HELLADS laser system and flight test measuring beam quality

I believe Intel will skip 16-core generation (2008-01-29 04:37)

The Quad Core should last me until 2010, yet I'm going to buy before then just like the two most complex games in my collection [Crysis, UT3] run well in WinXP on my obsolete Athlon 64X2/G80 Hellcat. I got a lot of usage out of that pc and the only thing wrong with it is it couldn't handle the wattage.

The current G80 X2 config in the Core 2 Quad PC should do some fine DirectX 10 and early DirectX 10.1 games at 1280x1024 than I could improve the prototype list. I'm skeptical about a balance of what I have time for and game purchasing. I was thinking this is irrelevant since I'm buying 9800 GX2 at Birthday and Christmas anyways instead of 8-core Intel. They say the 9800 GX2 is $470, because of a combination of why upgrade, low cost 45nm fabrication and the recession.

Brand new game specs will say Pentium 4/1 GB RAM/Radeon 9800 Pro/G6800 for another 18 months yet and that was two PC generations ago and I know that FEAR couldn't run decent on those specs at 1280x1024.

I would be as aggressive if I choose to pick 9800 GX2 as reimbursement as Birthday present.

80 cores by 2017 is pretty much says it all. It's capitalism really. I have a feeling that Intel will skip a generation (8 > 32 cores over a year/32 > 128 cores over a year) to playderise CBE and ABOVE ALL ELSE OBLIGATE PPL TO BUY THEIR PRODUCT TO PAY OFF R & D. 16-core generation will be emulated (not real though) by dual socket mobos of the near future.

Radeon 1 GB GPU out! Nvidia to have lunch (2008-02-07 12:50)

Review

World's first affordable 1024 MB DirectX 10.1 GPU. It beats Geforce 8800 GTX by a little bit. Able to go Crossfire. Too bad there isn't any DirectX 10.1 games out. Geforce 9 series should come out at Tigerdirect next month.

Sounds like Dreamcast to me....come on PS2 and beat the shit out of it. <- I'm being funny cos nobody gives a damn.

10.3 March

A little less excited then 8800 GTX launch, but I'm old (2008-03-06 15:10)

This is my dream GPU, and it will do DirectX 10.1 API graphics. Everybody at PS3forums are excited for this GPU, because it enhances graphics... By then there should be a DirectX 10.1 game that I want to play!

I'm waiting for christmas for two (1 my parents pay for, 1 I pay for), but I'll get excited for it regardless. This is because somebody will care that I got it like Randy! Then I can be state-of-the-art while my friends spend their money on cars, girlfriends, and stuff.

I'm playing Hellgate London now on the Hellcat. Runs silky smooth. I'm having trouble between school. It's pretty good except it just seems empty. I've spoiled myself with the best games for console EVER MADE so I put it into prospective.

Cell 3 in PS4? Probably! Come Read! (2008-03-09 22:14)

"Cell 3" has been seen on IBM slides before as a Cell with 2 PPEs and 32 SPEs but nothing more has been said about it. According to a presentation the SPEs will be getting some redesign to reduce latency and improve bandwidth. The PPEs on the other look like they light be based on POWER7 technology. Sounds like it could be a pretty serious piece of kit. It's not known if this particular version will go into a future PS4.

The new buzz word will be PS4 can do "Ray Tracing"

Huge Mount Yamantau facility built for Cold War II (2008-03-10 16:59)

Closing Yucca Mountain Nuclear waste facility has something to do with Mount Yamantau, the most nuclear secure place on Earth. Having a United States equivalent of Mount Yamantau was the truth behind building Yucca Mountain. It was also to stop a nuclear power plant revival in the US, because Obama is marxist and hates cheap electricity. The Smith Act doesn't work for some reason.

Mount Yamantau is a very large complex – we estimate that it has millions of square feet available for underground facilities. There are reportedly provisions for living inside the man-made caves. There is an underground warehouse for food and clothing, a shelter for the Russian national leadership in case of nuclear war, and rumors that the Yamantau Mountain project was associated with the so-called 'Dead Hand' nuclear retaliatory command and control system for strategic missiles. "It seems the nearly $30 billion a year spent on intelligence hasn't answered the question of what the Russians are up to at Yamantau Mountain in the Urals. The huge underground complex being built there has been the object of U.S. interest since 1992. 'We don't know exactly what it is,' says Ashton Carter, the Pentagon's international security mogul. The facility is not operational, and the Russians have offered 'nonspecific reassurances' that it poses no threat to the U.S.

Mount Yamantau is probably Russia getting ready for Cold War II. We should get Yucca Mountain back up in 2013 after a Republican president reauthorizes Yucca Mountain construction.

Most of our US money that goes to disarm Russian nuclear weapons is going towards digging inside Mount Yamantau instead.

The US Government should stop funding Russian nuclear weapon disarming as soon as possible, because of Mount Yamantau.

Proud pirater of Windows XP Pro x64 Edition (2008-03-15 18:51)

Today, downloading WinXP Pro X64 Edition took no time at all...only 2 1/2 hours to download 614 MB ISO. This will allow me to use both cores while remaining in Windows XP for my classes. The memory limit will no longer be 2.5 GB. It's okay, because you can't find this CD anywhere! Stores always price gouge Windows XP Home for $100 and Windows XP Pro 32-bit for $170. It plain sucks.

I have to take a nasty Windows Worstations exam due next Saturday. I am 33 % done with researching answers. I am hopeful I'll get an A on it. I want a 100 % though. Also I think I'll complete the Introduction to Communication with a 96.9 %!

Slightly better Hellgate London and The Witcher performance anyway. Believe it or not, I haven't installed Guild Wars on the machine. Randy isn't going to make it over this weekend. Also he never is available during the week.

Bought a Geforce 9800 GX2 (2008-03-25 05:34)

For getting good grades in school, my dad gave me access to Tigerdirect so I could get a Geforce 9800 GX2, 128 GB second instead of 86 GB memory bandwidth (8800 GTX). Am sort of disappointed it's not DirectX 10.1 (Tigerdirect didn't say it was Shader Model 4.1) Actually installing this would be 20 GB slower in theory, but not all games support the 40 GB gain of SLI!

Proof ^

I saw the Xvid clip at Tigerdirect and he said it was crazy that it had 256 stream processors. I don't know. I agreed with him that it's all about bragging rights. I deserve it after taking that exam. I expect a second one for my combined Bday and Xmas present as I planning goes. I don't know how to look excited though, because I went from 7800 GTX to 8800 GTX to 8800 GTX SLI to 9800 GX2 in a matter of two years. O-well. I got $100 reimbursement from mom and dad!

Best Russian War films (2008-04-03 11:35)

1. Come and See

Brutal is an over-used term, but perfect for one of the most deeply affecting war movies ever made. Filmed in a frequently lyrical, disorientating style, 'Come and See' views the Eastern Front through the eyes of a child partisan, showing the Nazi atrocities in all their horror

2. The Dawns Here Are Quiet

Based on the eponymous book by Boris Vasilyev, the film is set in Karelia (North-West of Russia, near Finland) in 1941 during WWII. In a beautiful and quiet wilderness far from the front-line there is an anti-aircraft artillery point, where corporal Vaskov is stationed with a group of many young women in training. One of the women while sneaking from camp to visit her young son sees two German paratroopers. Vaskov takes five of the women to stop the two paratroopers, but finds sixteen paratroopers instead, leaving the small group of patriots to engage the enemy in an unequal fight.

3. War and Peace

Eight-hour epic based on the eponymous book by Leo Tolstoy. Two main story-lines are complex and intertwined. One is the love story of young Countess Natasha Rostova and Count Pierre Bezukhov, who is unhappy in his marriage. Another is the "Great Patriotic War" of 1812 against the invading Napoleon's Armies. The people of Russia from all classes of society stand up united against the enemy. The 500,000 strong Napoleon's army moves through Russia and causes much destruction culminating in the battle of Borodino.

4. Our own

It is August 1941. With the battle line far away in the east, three soldiers who have managed to escape from captivity find it difficult to hide: the territory is occupied by the enemy. The local woods are not safe: you can easily get embogged. Are the villagers loyal? Nobody can say. There is an old man who offers to help them. Is he reliable enough? He may kill them or report them to the local German authorities. Anything may happen, but one of them, the sniper, is his son who is his youngest, his dearest.

Birdy the Mighty: Decode

Birdy the Mighty: Decode 02

Eden of the East- it takes place in US

Gurren Lagann - it makes no sense

Revolutionary Girl Utena - it was ranked on few people's top 10. I know I'm too old for it.

Trigun - Don't know if I like Van the Stampede and gang.

Voices of a Distant Star - it involves spacecraft

Genius! (2008-05-06 05:20)

For however long the semester lasts...averaging a 9.3 this semester. I am thinking Cisco is the way to go, because it gets outdated a lot less then Microsoft Desktop/server. MCSE degrees.

I am not donating my talent to the US Airforce. That's just a joke i made to get the teachers off my back. 1 in the whole school

When will the Geforce 9900 1 GB GPU take 8800 GTX place (2008-05-06 05:22)

Gamestop is advertising the 8800 GTX as we speak, is one generation behind, on their Windows display at their store. I know how it plays and it does it well. First of mass majority of my games date from 2001 - 2005 and it works too well for those. Yet it did have a 368-bit memory bus. This basically means that the AA could be brought to 4x in res of 1600x1200 on the latest games while the 9800 GTX and GX2 flunked that aspect with fps dropping.

So with the 512-bit memory bus (double yay) in the 1 GB 9900 (either GTX or GX2) this must mean that Gamestop could start advertising it for PCs and I would have some credibility (actually purchase credibility in a way). It seems like everybody is updating to the 8800 GTS/GT/GTX whether a hardcore pc gamer or not, because we were the richest nation in the 1990s...maybe 2nd after Japan in terms of buying power, yet it's just a $400 GPU.

The 8800 GTX may of made Crysis playable in DirectX 9 on high settings, but the 9900 GTX will undoubtedly make it cool to the mainstream! The 9800 GX2, as bad as it is for the price is getting over [url=http://www.newegg.com/Product/ProductReview.aspx?Item=N82E16814150284]8.0 at newegg[/url]. It's not going away! The PC Gaming Alliance is doing it's job here.

Good DirectX 10 games coming out

All which I can afford a few months after launch, because I can't afford everything immediately. It takes planning several months in advance

HDMI emulation (2008-05-26 09:45)

This is a brand new age! I am so happy I didn't spend loads of money of NES/SNES/Genesis/Sega CD/Neo Geo/Turbografx 16 games. My already paid for Geforce 9900 GTX coming in the mail in July/August has a HDMI port.

That means any emulator including EPSXE can be played on my Sony 40" HDMI or 25" DVI TV...even Radiant Silvergun which I found on MegaUpload last week. I don't know why I would become more popular with the original games, because I knows after I bought them...life would be exactly the same as before...I wouldn't have any new friends.

Buying old games doesn't get new friends if it's me. IT might work on other people for some reason.

This is a very clever way of reducing withdrawals from my bank account for obsolete software (still treat it with respect).

In other news, I got banned from Gamespot. I tried creating BirdofPrey2017 & BirdofPrey2018 to get my game collection back up, but it's been continuously banded. O-well.

As you may now I updated my game list.

Oh yeah, school grades 92.2 % and 95.5 % average 94 %. Not perfect just like I said before. Life hasn't changed just like I said before. I'm absolutely right.

Megaupload is great for recessions! (2008-06-03 14:06)

Hurray! No spending multi-100 $ for stupid games! I do! Actually, I wanted to try these games, but the Toyrieffics don't have these and give and don't like me. These guys pirate at home so they probably already knew about megaupload. Well, these lesser known games are great. I got the beloved Radiant Silvergun and played that making pass the 2nd level (well known theme song in the 2nd level). The game store people told me that Albert Odyssey: Legend of Eldean was another big collectors item, because it's better then Shining Wisdom (direct sequel to Shining Force II), but much less rare than Panzer Dragoon Saga (played that too).

Oh and I bought Bangai-O (second Ebay purchase ever) with Uncle's help. I heard this game is amongst the most desired shooters on the Sega console which explains why Bangai-O Spirits for the Dual Screen came out. Only $50!

A little older, but I'm game (2008-06-19 02:00)

I have 100+ PC games and their specs don't come close to G80s except for Crysis, but it's been 2 yrs now (7 months for the G80 SLI in the Tigershark) and I have got to get me another PC game like Mass Effect (DX9.0c) and I will by next month or the month after that, because I want to.

This discussion; however, is about the Geforce GTX 280 (Geforce 10 to those ppl who lived under a rock) and I am buying one today, yet it's not nighttime yet. It costs like nine $60 PS3 titles + one $20 PS3 title.

Why? Oh because I feel technology is changing. There is like millions and millions of gamers in this country alone? No one will probably care....UNLESS, I get SLI config by Christmas. If you want someone to comment on my blog then

I should get a Tri-SLI config of these GTX 280s, but since my power supply won't generate that much power. SLI for me thou.

This will extend the life of my  Core 2 Extreme QX6700 Systemax Tigershark.

Comments please. I benchmark! Don't want the competition pass me buy with their $10 hourly wage and I can definitely emulate PCSX2 and play Crysis Warhead with SLI.

Obama and the New Party (2008-06-20 13:51)

Two weeks ago at RedState, we documented Obama's 1996 endorsement by the New Party. A review of the New Party establishes that not only was the party an amalgamation of far left groups, but Barack Obama knew that when he sought the party's endorsement.

Most of the New Party's history has been lost in the digital age. It was established in 1992 and started to die out in 1998, well before Google and the modern web were established. But through lengthy searches of the Nexis archive and microfilm at the local university library, I've been able to piece this together.

The New Party was established in 1992 "by union activist Sandy Pope and University of Wisconsin professor Joel Rogers," USA Today reported on November 16, 1992. The paper wrote that the new party was "self-described [as] 'socialist democratic.'"

The seeds, however, had been sown all the way back in 1988. Quoting John Nichols in the March 22, 1998 issue of In These Times, "The roots of the New Party go back to the aftermath of Jesse Jackson's run for president in 1988. At that time, Dan Cantor, who had served as labor coordinator for the Jackson campaign, and University of Wisconsin sociology professor Joel Rogers began talking about how to formulate an alternative between the increasingly indistinguishable Democratic-Republican monolith."

Joel Rogers sought to use the idea of "fusion" as a way to get the New Party into power.

Fusion is a pretty simple concept. A candidate could run as both a Democrat and a New Party member to signal the candidate was, in fact, a left-leaning candidate, or at least not a center-left DLC type candidate. If the candidate – let's call him Barack Obama – received only 500 votes in the Democratic Party against another candidate who received 1000 votes, Obama would clearly not be the nominee. But, if Obama also received 600 votes from the New Party, Obama's New Party votes and Democratic votes would be fused. He would be the Democratic nominee with 1100 votes.

The fusion idea set off a number of third parties, but the New Party was probably the most successful. A March 22, 1998 In These Times article by John Nichols showed just how successful. "After six years, the party has built what is arguably the most sophisticated left-leaning political operation the country has seen since the decline of the Farmer-Labor, Progressive and Non-Partisan League groupings of the early part of the century In 1996, it helped Chicago's Danny Davis, a New Party member, win a Democratic congressional primary, thereby assuring his election in the majority-black district The threat of losing New Party support, or of the New Party running its own candidates against conservative Democrats, would begin a process of forcing the political process to the left, [Joel] Rogers argued."

Fusion, fortunately for the country, died in 1997. William Rehnquist, writing for a 6-3 Supreme Court, found the concept was not a protected constitutional right. It was two years too late to stop Obama.

On December 1, 1994, after the Gingrich revolution swept the Democrats from congress and forced Bill Clinton to triangulate, the Chicago Tribune ran an article by Steve Mills entitled "Looking for the Left: The Old Progressives and Marxists Still Breathe Idealist Fire, but They're Too Splintered to Generate Any Heat."

"'The Left is in crisis, and it has been for some time,' said Carl Davidson, the former national secretary for the radical Students for a Democratic Society. 'I don't know if it's even bottomed out yet,'" he reported to Mr. Mills. Mills continued, "The Socialist Workers Party is in this corner; the International Socialist Organization is in this one. The [communist group Committee of Correspondence] is in another. The radicals, or even the liberals with some radical leanings – so-called 'soft radicals' – seem to find it hard to abandon individual issues for a broader movement."

But, Mills reported, "It is amid this political confusion that The New Party would like to step in. 'If there's anything that defines the American Left, it's fragmentation,' said Dan Cantor, the party's national organizer.... The New Party aims to change that. By uniting the progressives behind a cohesive ideology, one that, in theory at least, will have room for all the factions that now litter the landscape of the Left, The New Party is confident progressives can again be strong."

In 1995, the New Ground, the newsletter of the Chicago Chapter of Democratic Socialists of America, noted, "In Chicago, the New Party's biggest asset and biggest liability is ACORN."

"Like most organizations, ACORN is a mixed bag. On one hand, in Chicago, ACORN is a group that attempts to organize some of the most depressed communities in the city. Chicago organizers for ACORN and organizers for SEIU Local 880 have been given modest monthly recruitment quotas for new New Party members. On the other hand, like most groups that depend on canvassing for fundraising, it's easy enough to find burned out and disgruntled former employees. And ACORN has not had the reputation for being interested in coalition politics – until recently and, happily, not just within the New Party."

Naturally, Barack Obama was an active part of ACORN at the time, helping it legally in court and helping it organize voters. By 1996, ACORN and the New Party were essentially the same body. Along with the Democratic Socialists of America, the New Party endorsed Barack Obama in his State Senate bid.

Obama began seeking the New Party endorsement in 1995. He had been running in a four way primary against his former boss, Senator Alice Palmer, herself a far left radical, and two other individuals. But an election law quirk gave Obama the upper hand. In order to get on the ballot, candidates had to collect signatures of voters. Printed names were not allowed. Obama challenged the petitions of his rivals and was able to get every one of them thrown off the ballot. By the time the ballot was drawn up for the 1996 election, Obama's was the only name in the race.

Nonetheless, Obama still coveted the New Party endorsement. The New Party required candidates who received the endorsement sign a pledge of support for the party. Obama did not need to support a party that was, in effect, a front group for communists; yet he still chose to. The July issue of the New Ground noted that 15 % of the New Party consisted of Democratic Socialists of America members and a good number of Committee of Correspondence members.

Barack Obama, not needing to, chose to affiliate himself with this band of quasi-communists. As the nation moves closer to the election, it is clear that Obama chose to affiliate with assorted anti-American radicals. Machiavelli once noted that we can know a leader by the people he surrounds himself with. What does that say about Barack Obama, who chose to surround himself with people committed to overthrowing the United States and capitalism? American Negro in the Communist Party

Our old chocolate lab died in April 20, 2008. We got these two yesterday. We're thinking about keeping both of them. Ones a male and the other female. I thought of naming them after planets, Neptune and Saturn, but that fell through. Other names we thought of were Onyx and Ruby.

Stag Party and Drinking party (2008-07-14 22:52)

We did this once to try it out, listening to heavy metal (93X), and hitting all the bars in St. Croix County especially Hammond, and Roberts.

A few weeks later, I went on one on a stag party with some old friends and acquaintances who i barely see. I didn't get drunk, because I wanted my bed to sleep in. We went to a strip bar. It was Randy Peterson, Robert Haggerty, James Benedict (left to right) Rob Vanderhoff.

In the name of advancing technology.... (2008-07-18 05:12)

Recently, I have undergone re-compression of Band of Brothers with X264 rev 889 and rev 912 VFW. This is over 2 yrs after my last work with the same VFW program with War of the Worlds, SW Episode 2 and 3. I mean I did about 2/3 with rev 889 and 1/3 with 912. I wanted to say I can go through this dawnthing task, because normally it is not wise to leave all those fans on for 96+ hrs straight with my on-the-fly ripping and compression utility which I cracked and downloaded off the internet in 2003 actually. If it aint broke don't fix it. My previous Band of Brothers video was encoded in DivX 5.2.1 and Xvid 1.0.1 I believe. Note: Advanced Profile aspect of Xvid just came online in 1.0 I can show how wonderful it looks at 525 KBps @ 680x410 & 96 Kbps MP3. I think I'll won't encode another movie for a month, because I have no friends to share it with. Randy was sinister not visiting me since his wedding in April! Oh yeah I plan to drop coin on Final Fantasy IV and XII on NDS. I love the reviews and because I already have Mass Effect on the PC, because the Xbox 360 version was no fun after all those Read Disc Errors exclusive to the game. Maybe that was Microsoft's intention? It's alright. Playing it on my Geforce GTX 280!

Yes, it's that time again. To update my Linux to the (almost) latest and greatest. The latest and greatest is KDE 4.1.0.1, but I only got KDE 4.0.4 with all the games, applications, word processors of opensuse 10.3 (that was KDE 3.5.7). It's fast, but the screens lag. I also put Gnome 2.24 on it. Well, got to go.

Oh yeah, game update

Soul Calibur IV for the PS3. It's a pretty good game and I like it. It's not smooth with the exception of the drive only being 2x speed. I have an option of putting it all on my HDD which I should. I made to end of arcade with 4 characters already, and I'm going to play story when I have time. I skipped the celebration, because it kicks me where it counts. I always feel I'm hanging like a thread over there. Last week I barely got my work in. I want to say shit that I can't say. My GPA last quarter was a approximently 94 % (93.8 %)

Game point average is 87 % in Buisness and 100 % in Windows Workstations.

Barack Obama's involvement with the Communist Party USA

Communist leader on "friend" Barack Obama

On November 15, 2008, Sam Webb, National Chair of the Communist Party USA delivered an address to the Communist Party USA National Committee. During his address, he noted the following concerning the party's relationship with Obama,

"The left can and should advance its own views and disagree with the Obama administration without being disagreeable. Its tone should be respectful. We are speaking to a friend."

Marable on Obama and Chicago communists

The late marxist academic Manning Marable claimed that Barack Obama has read some of his books and "understands what socialism is."

Marable, writing in the December 2008 issue of British Trotskyist journal Socialist Review, also claimed that Obama worked in Chicago with socialists with backgrounds in the Communist Party.^[1]

What makes Obama different is that he has also been a community organiser. He has read left literature, including my works, and he understands what socialism is. A lot of the people working with him are, indeed, socialists with backgrounds in the Communist Party or as independent Marxists. There are a lot of people like that in Chicago who have worked with him for years...

Frank Marshall Davis

Frank Marshall Davis

Barack Obama's first known connection with a Communist Party USA supporter was his boyhood relationship with communist poet Frank Marshall Davis in Hawaii.

Barack Obama's relationship to Frank Marshall Davis, first came to light through a March 2007 speech^[2] at New York University's Tamiment Library by Communist Party USA supporter and historian Gerald Horne.

Commenting on the alleged leftist sympathies of Hawaiians, Horne said;

When these sources are explored, I think scholars of the future will be struck by, for example, the response in Honolulu when tens of thousands of workers went on strike when labor and CP leaders were convicted of Smith Act violations in 1953 – a response totally unlike the response on the mainland. Of course 98 % of these workers were of Asian-Pacific ancestry, which suggests that scholars have also been derelict in analyzing why these workers were less anti-communist than their Euro-American counterparts.

In any case, deploring these convictions in Hawaii was an African-American poet and journalist by the name of Frank Marshall Davis, who was certainly in the orbit of the CP – if not a member – and who was born in Kansas and spent a good deal of his adult life in Chicago, before decamping to Honolulu in 1948 at the suggestion of his good friend Paul Robeson.

Eventually, he befriended another family – a Euro-American family – that had migrated to Honolulu from Kansas and a young woman from this family eventually had a child with a young student from Kenya East Africa who goes by the name of Barack Obama, who retracing the steps of Davis eventually decamped to Chicago.

In his best selling memoir 'Dreams of my Father', the author speaks warmly of an older black poet, he identifies simply as "Frank" as being a decisive influence in helping him to find his present identity as an African-American, a people who have been the least anticommunist and the most left-leaning of any constituency in this nation

Frank Marshall Davis' communism

Information from Davis' 601 page FBI file reveals that Davis (born 1905) became interested in the Communist Party USA as far back as 1931.

Certainly from the mid/late '30s to the early '40s Davis was involved in several Communist Party fronts including the the National Negro Congress, the League of American Writers, the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties and the Civil Rights Congress.

The FBI first began tracking Davis in 1944 when they identified him as member of the Communist Party's Dorie Miller Club in Chicago-card number 47544.

Davis taught courses at the party controlled Abraham Lincoln School in Chicago and attended meetings of the party's Cultural Club until he left for Hawaii in 1948.

Hawaiian activism

Frank Marshall Davis' move to Hawaii was influenced by two secret Communist Party USA members Harry Bridges and Paul Robeson.

When contemplating moving to Hawaii, Davis "wrote to Harry Bridges, whom I had met at Lincoln School. Bridges suggested I get in touch with Koji Ariyoshi, editor of the Honolulu Record..."

The Lincoln School was run by the Communist Party USA. Koji Ariyoshi was a leader of the Hawaiian Communist Party which controlled the ILWU affiliated Honolulu Record- which Davis went to work for.

Before going underground in 1950, the Hawaiian Communist Party was one of the most dynamic in the U.S. at the time. The mainland put huge resources into the Hawaiian party because the Soviets wanted the U.S. military presence on the islands shut down. The Hawaiian communists were charged with agitating against the U.S. military bases at every opportunity. Several times the FBI observed Davis photographing obscure Hawaiian beaches-possibly for espionage purposes.

Through its control of the International Longshore and Warehouse Union (ILWU) the Hawaiian Communist Party USA had considerable influence on the local Democratic Party. In the mid '50s, while still a confirmed communist, Davis like many of his comrades, became an official in the local Democratic Party.

At the time the underground Communist Party was divided into two or three person independent cells. Davis led one such cell "Group 10" with his wife Helen Canwell and one other comrade.

An extensive Senate Security Investigation in 1956 shattered the Hawaiian Party, driving the remnants completely underground .

The FBI continued to monitor Davis into the 1960s and he was marked down for immediate arrest should war break out between the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

Still a communist?

ACPF letterhead April 12, 1973

Frank Marshall Davis met Barack Obama in 1970 or 1971 when Obama was about 10 years old. The relationship lasted until Obama left Hawaii for Occidental College in Los Angeles in 1978.

As late as 1973, Frank Marshall Davis was still listed as an endorser of a major Communist Party USA front organization, American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born.

Frank Marshall Davis and Obama

In an article by Toby Harnden published in the Telegraph on August 22, 2008, Communist Frank Marshall Davis's influence on the young Barack Obama was uncovered. Maya Soetoro-Ng, Barack Obama's half-sister, told the Associated Press that her grandfather had seen Davis as "a point of connection, a bridge if you will, to the larger African-American experience for my brother (Barack Obama)".

Dawna Weatherly-Williams, a close friend of Frank Davis stated that Obama's maternal grandfather, Stanley Dunham and Davis were close friends, adding that they would spend evenings together, playing scrabble, drinking, cracking jokes and smoking marijuana. She said that Davis was first introduced to Obama in 1970 at the age of 10:

"Stan had been promising to bring Barry by because we all had that in common - Frank's kids were half-white, Stan's grandson was half-black and my son was half-black. We all had that in common and we all really enjoyed it. We got a real kick out of reality."^[3]

Chicago Communists first recorded interest in Obama

By Judith M. Hochberg

CHICAGO — As electoral campaigns intensify across the nation, so too are efforts to register more people to vote. One increase the vote effort was conducted during the recent Bud Billiken Day parade in Chicago.

With an estimated one million people participating in the Aug. 10 celebration, members of Project Vote! passed out t-shirts and registered more than 2,000 voters.

"The main point is that awareness of the importance of voting, the excitement of voting this year is getting out there," said Barack Obama, Illinois State Director of Project VOTE! "The enthusiasm for the vote, the enthusiasm about doing something is catching on."

Volunteers from Carol Moseley Braun's campaign for the U.S. Senate and Frank Lumpkin's race for the state legislature also participated in the voter registration effort.

The crowd was amiable and happy. They were energized, friendly and quite eager to talk about why they

In an article entitled Voter enthusiasm on rise in Chicago by Judith M. Hochberg, published in the Communist Party USA paper People's Weekly World on August 22, 1992, Barack Obama, then Illinois State Director of Project VOTE! is quoted as saying:

"The main point is that awareness of the importance of voting, the excitement of voting this year is getting out there".^[4]

Addie Wyatt connection

According to the United States Department of Labor, Chicago activist Rev. Addie Wyatt worked closely with Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. to support the Montgomery Bus Boycott and later counseled a young community organizer named Barack Obama as he came up the ranks in Chicago.^[5]

According to Chicago Attorney and broadcaster Lonna Saunders The Rev. Addie Wyatt, was a mentor to President Barack Obama in his community organizing as a young man.^[6]

In a letter, read at her funeral in April 2004, from President Barack Obama and first lady Michelle Obama, Wyatt was called a "champion of equality and a fierce advocate for working Americans."^[7]

Wyatt's home was used to carry out meetings with public figures such as Rev. Jesse Jackson, President Barack Obama, and US Rep. Bobby Rush.^[8]

Addie Wyatt was a long time affiliate of the Chicago Communist Party USA.

Vernon Jarrett and Barack Obama

Vernon Jarrett was a prominent Chicago journalist and was a family friend and later father-in-law of Obama adviser Valerie Jarrett.

In the 1940s Jarrett worked in several communist influenced organizations in Chicago, including serving on the publicity committee of the communist controlled Packing House Workers Strike Committee, with Frank Marshall Davis.

He also ran a radio show with Communist Party USA member Oscar Brown, Jr.

Vernon Jarrett was also a fan of Barack Obama. He watched his career from its early stages and became an influential supporter.

In 1992 Obama worked for the ACORN offshoot, Project Vote to register black voters in aid of the Senate Campaign of Carol Moseley Braun-who had strong Communist Party USA ties and was Harold Washington's legislative floor leader.

Obama helped Carol Moseley Braun win her Senate seat, then took it over himself in 2004-backed by the same communist/socialist alliance that had elected Washington and Moseley Braun.

Commenting on the 1992 race, Vernon Jarrett wrote in the Chicago Sun-Times of August 11th 1992;

Good news! Good news! Project Vote, a collectivity of 10 church-based community organizations dedicated to black voter registration, is off and running. Project Vote is increasing its rolls at a 7,000-per-week clip...If Project Vote is to reach its goal of registering 150,000 out of an estimated 400,000 unregistered blacks statewide, "it must average 10,000 rather than 7,000 every week," says Barack Obama, the program's executive director...

Dee Myles, a Chicago based chair of the Education Commission of the Communist Party USA penned a tribute to Vernon Jarrett, for the People's Weekly World of June 5th, 2004.

Readers like me can be extremely selective of the journalists we read habitually... We are selective about the journalists to whom we become insatiably addicted, and once hooked we develop a constructive love affair without the romance...

Such was my experience with Vernon Jarrett, an African American journalist in Chicago who died at the age of 86 on May 23. I became a Vernon Jarrett addict, and I am proud of it!

Vernon Jarrett's career as a journalist in Chicago began and ended at the Chicago Defender, the African American daily paper. In between, he was the first Black journalist at the Chicago Tribune, and I first began to read his articles during his tenure at the Chicago Sun-Times.

Jarrett's claim to fame is that he was a partisan of the cause of African Americans in the broad democratic tradition of Paul Robeson and W.E.B. DuBois...

Paul Robeson and W.E.B. DuBois were both Communist Party USA members. On April 9th, 1998 at Chicago's South Shore Cultural Center, Vernon Jarrett hosted a Paul Robeson Citywide Centennial Celebration event, with his old comrade and Party sympathiser Margaret Burroughs and former Communist Party USA members Studs Terkel and his old friend Oscar Brown, Jr.

Dee Myles went on to say;

Jarrett was fanatical about African Americans registering and voting in mass for socially conscious candidates. He championed Harold Washington like a great warrior, and this March, from his hospital bed, wrote an article appealing to Black Chicago to turn out to vote for Barack Obama in the Illinois primaries. Obama astounded everyone with an incredible landslide victory as the progressive, Black candidate for the Democratic Party nomination for the U.S. Senate seat from Illinois. From his sickbed, Vernon Jarrett issued a clarion call, and the people responded.

Communist Party support in Obama's 2004 Senate race

The Communist Party USA was supportive of several candidates in the 2004 election cycle including Frank Barbaro, Cynthia McKinney, Barack Obama, Betty Castor, Nancy Farmer and Inez Tenenbaum^[9];

It would be helpful for each district to single out House seats that can be swung from Republican to Democrat to develop our list of key races, which includes progressive Frank Barbaro in New York and Cynthia McKinney in Georgia.

A number of exciting candidates are emerging in the Senate, in the first place Barak Obama in Illinois, and also several progressive women including Betty Castor seeking to retain retiring Bob Graham's seat as Democrat; Nancy Farmer seeking to defeat Kit Bond in Missouri; Inez Tenenbaum seeking to retain retiring Fritz Hollings seat as Democrat.

The Communist Party USA actively campaigned for Obama during his successful 2004 Illinois Senate race^[10].

Activists from Illinois were immersed in the campaign to elect Barak Obama to the U.S. Senate. Obama won a landslide victory in the March 16 Democratic primary. If Obama wins in November, he would be only the third African American senator since Reconstruction.

"This was a historic victory. It was a victory for political independence and grassroots, coalition, and issue oriented politics over the machine and money," said John Bachtell, Illinois CP district organizer.

From a November 21 2004 report to the Communist Party USA National Committee - "The Communist Party USA and the 2004 Elections: Build the Party, Build the Coalitions".^[11]

MO: State Rep. During the campaign to elect a worker as State Representative: A new club in St. Louis, with another in formation. A new YCL club and another by the end of the year. A total of 19 new members in the YCL and Party. An increase from 2 to 12 bundles of PWW/NM a week. MI: A new club in Saginaw emerged from a national/district team that helped on a local campaign which elected a township trustee. A new club in the Upper Peninsula formed after a visit by Sam. New clubs in Lansing and Ann Arbor will be formed by the end of the year. ILL: 27 new members and an increase in PWW/NM bundles to 2500 a week. This in the process of participating in the movement from Illinois to Wisconsin to put that state over the top for Kerry, participating in the historic election of Barak Obama to the US Senate, and the successful campaign of Melissa Bean, defeating incumbent Republican Congressman Philip Crane.

In an October 23 2007 report to a Chicago Special District Meeting on African American Equality, Communist Party USA National Board member John Bachtell wrote:^[12]

The historic election of {Harold } Washington was the culmination of many years of struggle. It reflected a high degree of unity of the African American community and the alliance with a section of labor, the Latino community and progressive minded whites. This legacy of political independence also endures...

This was also reflected in the historic election of Barack Obama. Our Party actively supported Obama during the primary election. Once again Obama's campaign reflected the electoral voting unity of the African American community, but also the alliances built with several key trade unions, and forces in the Latino and white communities.

It also reflected a breakthrough among white voters. In the primary, Obama won 35 % of the white vote and 7 north side wards, in a crowded field. During the general election he won every ward in the city and all the collar counties. This appeal has continued in his presidential run.

Young Communist League backing

According to a November 20 2004, election report^[13] from Young Communist League USA national coordinator Jessica Marshall confirms Young Communist League USA support for Obama's campaign through Youth for Obama.

In New York YCLers were delegates and founders of the local organizing committees of the National Hip Hop Political Convention. In Providence, Miami and Chicago YCLers helped head up the League of Pissed Off Voters efforts. YCLers staffed Democratic Party operations and headed up precincts in Ohio and Florida. A YCLer from Virginia was a canvas director for a progressive young candidate in a tight race in Ohio. In Miami, the newly formed club helped ACT organizing efforts at Miami Dade Community College.

In Chicago YCL members were very active in the Youth for Obama efforts and one member worked with the United States Student Association and his student government to register over 1,000 new voters.

From a 2006 Young Communist League USA report by Jessica Marshall.^[14]

Young people are up to the challenge. In 2004 youth-run organizations helped to organize and register 4.6 million new young people to get out and vote... the majority of them voted against Bush and more than half were young people of color. The YCL was there and present for those experiences - we learned alongside them through our Midwest Project.

The YCL has to be at the table this fall too. Every club and every member needs to be out there and involved. And we need to bring everyone we work with out too! This is a national campaign to change the Congress and we are gonna be a part of that!

We don't have to be millions to have an impact! Just think about what a small group of YCLers have done in less than four years since our last convention!

We organized dozens of young people to head to the battleground states in 2004

In Ohio our YCLers were asked to lead up get out the vote teams because of our experience and hard work. In Cincinnati we helped defeat an anti-gay ballot initiative. In New York we worked on a campaign to elect Frank Barbaro defeat a Bush Republican and elect a real progressive In Chicago we helped to form a youth vote operation to elect Barak Obama. In St. Louis we were instrumental in electing John L. Bowman a progressive state representative. Bowman publicly acknowledged the key role the YCL and Communist Party played in his election.

Bea Lumpkin on Obama

Senior Chicago Communist Party USA member Bea Lumpkin, and her husband and comrade Frank Lumpkin were longtime supporters and a fans of Barack Obama.

As a friend, supporter and campaigner for pro communist Chicago mayor Harold Washington, Lumpkin credits the Washington campaigns with blazing the way for Barack Obama.^[15]

Sadly, when Washington died in office, the Democratic Party hacks crept back into power. The movement around Harold had not had time to jell into an organization with staying power. Still, the lessons of that campaign, with its spirit of African American, Latino and labor unity, took deep root in Chicago. Those roots nourished the spectacular rise of a new voice for people's unity, Barack Obama. Since then, Obama's strong voice has brought the message of unity to every corner of the country.

From her book "Joy in the Struggle", pages 244, to 248;

I am sure that Frank and I met Obama in the '80s. That's when he was working on pollution problems at the Altgeld Gardens public housing. The site was close to the steel mills, and Frank was active on similar pollution issues. We certainly knew the community people with whom Obama was working. But I cannot say that we knew the Obama name then. There were two reasons for that. Both Frank and I have a hard time remembering names. More important, was Obama's style. He pushed the community people forward and stayed out of the limelight himself. After Obama became our state senator in 1996, we knew his name, and I am sure he knew ours.

We were also friends with Alice Palmer, a progressive state senator. When she ran for Congress, Barack Obama won the vacated state senatorial seat.

During Obama's years in the Illinois Senate, we heard many good things about him. I helped organize steel worker retirees to visit Obama about health care legislation. He made us happy by telling us he was a sponsor of the legislation we wanted. And we liked his stand against a U.S. invasion of Iraq. He told us he was thinking of running for the US Senate.

Electing Obama to the U.S. Senate was a must-win election for us... The hardest part of the senatorial campaign was winning the Democratic primary...

About that time in the campaign, I heard Michelle Obama for the first time. Barack Obama introduced her in a way that really appealed to me. It showed not only his love for his wife but also his respect for women. "I want to introduce my wife, Michelle. She is taller than I am, smarter, and better looking." Michelle Obama then took the podium and gave a good, progressive review of the issues we care about.

The stakes were high. To win, each one of us had to do more than we could. But Frank was 88 and I was 86. Sure, we were in good shape "for our age." But how good was that? Well we found out. We worked and we worked and worked. And we did a lot of worrying, too. The polls kept teetering back and forth...As it was, he won the nomination in a landslide, 29 percent higher than his nearest Democratic opponent.

With Obama safely nominated, we relaxed just a little. We no longer had to dream the impossible dream. But nobody knew how much racism might cut into Obama's vote. It takes a huge supermajority in Chicago to offset the Republican counties in southern Illinois. So once more we needed to work on voter registration. But Frank and I could not continue the pace of the primary election. We did not have to. Many new activists came forward.

That August, at the 2004 Democratic Convention, Obama gave the speech that became his "trademark," the call for people to unite to benefit the whole country. In November 2004, Obama was elected to the U.S. Senate with 70 percent of the vote...

As an 18-year old, I served as a poll watcher in 1936. I was not yet 21, not old enough to vote. In fact I served as poll watcher in more local elections than I can remember. But it was not until 1948 that I really threw myself into an election, heart and soul and body, too. That was the Progressive Party campaign to elect Henry Wallace for president. Fast forward to 1983 for Harold Washington, as described above. And then we come to 2008, for Barack Obama. That was like nothing I had ever seen. There had been a high level of enthusiasm when Washington ran for mayor. But nothing equaled the Obama campaign for president.

I was ecstatic when Barack Obama put his name forward as a candidate for the nomination for U.S. president. There were other good candidates, with Kucinich the clearest progressive voice. But my hopes went through the ceiling when Obama spoke. A progressive African American for president? About time and more! With Obama, we could not only reject "W's" years of right-wing destruction, we could move the country forward. Then something I had never seen before happened. People surged forward and took ownership of the campaign. The candidate himself encouraged them to do that. He kept talking about "we" and "you" and repeated "It's not about me." People took him at his word. They believed him, and let their imaginations flow. Soon there was a flowering of people's Obama art and music that flooded "You Tube," kept artists busy and printing presses running. Tee-shirts by the millions were silk screened or whatever method is now used.

My favorite tee-shirt was the one that said, "We Are the Ones We Were Waiting For." This was the feeling of empowerment that was taking root in working class neighborhoods and communities of color. The coffee shop in my neighborhood, the family restaurant two miles away, friend after friend, were inviting me to forums, phone call parties, debate watching, pizza feasts, most with a television hookup to the national campaign. Strangers visited strangers, and all at once we were not strangers anymore. We were sisters and brothers united in the greatest cause of all—saving our people and our country from the Bush disaster and to rebuild America.

Soon after Obama opened a volunteer center in Chicago, I went down to help. They were making phone calls into battleground states. The large office was crowded. All the seats were taken. All the phones were in use. And every inch of floor space was occupied by 16 to 25 year olds, sprawled in various teenage positions. They had thought to bring their chargers for their cell phones and were calling away. The young people were a perfect cross-section of multiracial Chicago, a total blend of purpose and dedication. My heart sang, and I had the rare feeling that I was not needed. My replacements had arrived!

By primary time 2008, I was nearing my 90th birthday. Did I have one more campaign left in my arthritic legs? "Yes," my heart told me, and my legs kindly cooperated. Of course, I could have spared my knees, sat in a chair, and made telephone calls for the campaign.

When the votes were counted, Indiana came through for Obama-Biden! It was close. The steel retirees felt that they had made a difference, all of us. We are still celebrating our huge victory. Things have never moved so fast. At this writing, it is only six weeks since Obama took office. We are being swallowed up by the biggest economic disaster since the '30s. And it is beginning to look as though nothing smaller than a new New Deal can help us. How good it is that we have a president who has made job creation a plank of his crisis program. Had we not worked so hard and elected Obama, we'd be under a president who would let the people drown.

Meanwhile, Frank spent the campaign in the nursing home. I talked to him about Obama every day. I knew he wanted to know. But I could not tell if the news was getting through to him. The day after the election, the first page of the New York Times carried Obama's picture and his name in three-inch letters. I showed it to Frank. He looked at it, hard. Then he drew his right arm out from under the covers, bent it at the elbow, and raised his clenched fist high!

"Revolutionary mole" letter

Frank Chapman is a long time Communist Party USA supporter. In the early 1980s he chaired a party front National Alliance Against Racist and Political Repression. In the mid '80s he served on the board of another communist front, the U.S. Peace Council, alongside two future Obama colleagues and supporters Alice Palmer and Barbara Lee. Just after Obama won the pivotal Iowa primary Chapman wrote a letter to the January 12, 2008 edition of the CPUSA's Peoples Weekly World;^[16]

Now, beyond all the optimism I was capable of mustering, Mr. Obama won Iowa! He won in a political arena 95 percent white. It was a resounding defeat for the manipulations of the ultra-right and their right-liberal fellow travelers. Also it was a hard lesson for liberals who underestimated the political fury of the masses in these troubled times.

Obama's victory was more than a progressive move; it was a dialectical leap ushering in a qualitatively new era of struggle. Marx once compared revolutionary struggle with the work of the mole, who sometimes burrows so far beneath the ground that he leaves no trace of his movement on the surface. This is the old revolutionary "mole," not only showing his traces on the surface but also breaking through.

The old pattern of politics as usual has been broken. It may not have happened as we expected it to happen but what matters is that it happened. The message is clear: we can and must defeat the ultra-right, by uniting the broadest possible coalition that will represent an overwhelming majority of the people in a new political dynamic. We must quickly shed yesterday's political perspective and get in step with the march of events.

Message of support to a Communist Party "front"

In March 2008, Barack Obama sent a message of support to the Communist Party USA controlled Cesar E. Chavez National Holiday organization.

April 1, 2008 Washington DC—Evelina Alarcon, Executive Director of Cesar E. Chavez National Holiday welcomed the backing for a Cesar Chavez national holiday from Presidential candidate Senator Barack Obama who issued a statement on Cesar Chavez's birthday Monday, March 31, 2008. "We at Cesar E. Chavez National Holiday appreciate the backing of a national holiday for Cesar Chavez from presidential candidate Senator Barack Obama. That support is crucial because it takes the signature of a President to establish the holiday along with the Congress's approval," stated Evelina Alarcon. "It is also encouraging that Senator Hillary Clinton who is a great admirer of Cesar Chavez acknowledged him on his birthday. We hope that she too will soon state her support for a Cesar Chavez national holiday."

Alarcon's remarks were part of a statement made at a press conference at our nation's Capitol on April 1st called by Chair of the Hispanic Congressional Caucus Rep. Joe Baca (D-CA) in support of HR 76, a resolution he authored with 62 Co-Sponsors that encourages the establishment of a Cesar Chavez national holiday by the Congress^[17].

Barack Obama's statement for a Cesar Chavez national holiday:

"Chavez left a legacy as an educator, environmentalist, and a civil rights leader. And his cause lives on. As farmworkers and laborers across America continue to struggle for fair treatment and fair wages, we find strength in what Cesar Chavez accomplished so many years ago. And we should honor him for what he's taught us about making America a stronger, more just, and more prosperous nation. That's why I support the call to make Cesar Chavez's birthday a national holiday. It's time to recognize the contributions of this American icon to the ongoing efforts to perfect our union."

In June 2008, Communist Party USA leader and Executive Director of Cesar E. Chavez National Holiday, Evelina Alarcon presented an award from the organization to Barack Obama's younger sister Maya Soetoro-Ng at a gathering in East Los Angeles^[18].

Addressing a largely Latino audience in East Los Angeles yesterday, Dr. Maya Soetoro-Ng shared stories about her childhood with her older brother, Barack Obama, and the effect he has had on her life. Held in El Sereno's Hecho en Mexico restaurant, the event drew more than a hundred enthusiastic community activists, local elected officials, and regular citizens...

Evelina Alarcon, a notable Obama supporter and the sister of long-time Los Angeles politician Richard Alarcon, presented a poster to Obama's sister commemorating the life of Cesar Chavez.

Alarcon recounted the accomplishments of the late Chicano leader and argued persuasively for honoring his accomplishments with a national holiday. Reminding those in attendance that Barack Obama supports the call to make Cesar Chavez's birthday a national holiday. Alarcon trusts that if Obama is elected president the holiday will become a reality.

Obama has been quoted recently to say: "As farmworkers and laborers across America continue to struggle for fair treatment and fair wages, we find strength in what Cesar Chavez accomplished so many years ago and we should honor him for what he's taught us about making America a stronger, more just, and more prosperous nation. That's why I support the call to make Cesar Chavez's birthday a national holiday. It's time to recognize the contributions of this American icon to the ongoing efforts to perfect our union."

Special District Meeting on African American Equality and Building the Communist Party and Young Communist League Chicago, IL September 30, 2007

Opening Remarks By John Bachtell, IL District Organizer

First, I want to acknowledge the collective nature of this report and preparation for the meeting. Thanks to everyone who contributed. Secondly, these remarks will not begin to touch on every question, only a few of the key problems and issues before the district. The rest is up to you.

--snip--

The African American community, and especially trade unionists have played a crucial role in the struggle to defeat the ultra right. This includes massive voter turnout in election after election, but also the swing state mobilizations in 2004.

This was also reflected in the historic election of Barack Obama. Our Party actively supported Obama during the primary election. Once again Obama's campaign reflected the electoral voting unity of the African American community, but also the alliances built with several key trade unions, and forces in the Latino and white communities. It also reflected a breakthrough among white voters. In the primary, Obama won 35% of the white vote and 7 north side wards, in a crowded field. During the general election he won every ward in the city and all the collar counties. This appeal has continued in his presidential run.

CPUSA Extols Obama 2012 Victory at Int'l Communist Meeting

A report praising Barack Obama, and the changes wrought by him, was delivered at the 14th International Meeting of Communist and Workers Parties, held in Beirut, Lebanon, November 22-25, by Erwin Marquit, member of the International Department, CPUSA.^[22]

We express our gratitude to the Lebanese Communist Party for hosting this important meeting under the present difficult conditions.

The Communist Party USA not only welcomes the reelection of President Barack Obama, but actively engaged in the electoral campaign for his reelection and for the election of many Democratic Party congressional candidates. We regarded the 2012 election as the most important in the United States since 1932, an election held in the midst of the Great Depression.

The election of President Franklin Roosevelt in 1932 led to the legalization of the right of workers to organize labor unions and to bargain collectively with employers. It led to the establishment of a compulsory employer-worker funded pension system for retired workers. It also introduced measures that enabled unemployed families to survive the Great Depression, among which were employment in the public sector for the unemployed, work camps for youth, and food provisions for the poverty stricken. Except for the youth camps, which ended with the onset of World War II, all of these are measures that the 2012 Republican Party agenda would have eliminated or greatly weakened. We believed that if the Republican candidate for President were elected and if both houses of the Congress fell under the control of the far right, racist sector (calling itself the "Tea Party") that now dominates the Republican Party, the nation's return to pre-1932 conditions would be a real danger.

Because of this danger, we viewed our participation in mainstream electoral activity as obligatory, even though both major parties in the United States are dominated by capital, with no effective competition from a mass-scale social-democratic party. We are aware that some on the Left in the United States thought that the correct approach to the elections was either to boycott them, or as a protest, to run or support small-scale left-wing candidacies with no possible chance of winning. We Communists rejected this strategy because too much was at stake.

The most import success of the Obama Administration since its election in 2008 was the introduction of a major expansion of the people's access to financing of their health care. As a result of this legislation, 25 million people now have access to health care who previously did not have it. The repeal of this health care law was one of the main points in the programs of the Republican Party presidential and Congressional candidates in the 2012 election. Even without a repeal, there is still the danger that it will be ruled unconstitutional by the present Supreme Court even though the lower courts have upheld it. Whatever the present Supreme Court might not rule, a Supreme Court loaded with right-wing justices appointed by a Republican president would still be able to do so.

Obama has opposed Republican attempts to introduce austerity programs similar to those in the European Union. The Republicans have opposed his efforts to use government funds as economic stimuli to reduce unemployment, as well as his attempts to remove the special provisions of the income tax code that have allowed the rich to be taxed at a lower percentage of income than the average working person, and to eliminate of tax benefits that the corporations get when exporting of jobs abroad. The Occupy movement, with its slogan, "We are the 99 %," that swept through the country in 2011, sharply drew attention to the power of the top 1 %" of the population and stimulated support for Obama's efforts to require higher taxes for the wealthy. The Republicans have blocked all proposals to reduce global warming, environment destruction, industrial pollution, and other actions arising from corporate greed that threaten to destroy the biophysical basis of human existence. Republicans even want to privatize the FEMA, the federal agency for disaster mitigation.

Another important issue is that of justice for immigrant workers and their families. There are between 10 and 11 million irregular immigrants in the United States, mostly from Mexico and other Latin American countries. Our Party supports the regularization of their status, with full rights in the workplace and in the community, and access to U.S. citizenship. The Obama administration has moved too slowly on this issue (and the CPUSA has been sharply critical of this), but it is now taking some modest but real steps. The Republicans, on the other hand, have whipped up a racist frenzy against immigrants that has led to vigilante action and in some cases the murder of immigrant workers. Romney had promised to make life so hard for undocumented immigrants that they would all "self" deport.

Faced with a choice between the victory of either the Democratic Party or Republican Party, the Communist Party viewed a victory of the far-right Republican Party as an extreme disaster. In this situation, we saw the necessity of a policy of center-left alliances in order not to separate ourselves from the people's struggles for dealing with the far right onslaught. The basis of such an alliance now includes the labor movement, organizations of African Americans and Latinos, the women's movement, gay and lesbian civil rights groups, and organizations of the elderly and retirees. On some issues, these groups are joined by a few far-sighted elements of capital.

What do we mean by "far-sighted" elements of capital? As in all capitalist countries, big capital is not a monolith of common interest. Not only are elements of capital in competition with one another, but differences in their investment policies give rise to conflicting political interests. Corporations with investments in the oil, coal, and natural gas industries tend to have the most right-wing orientations. Corporations with heavy investments in China are somewhat wary of China bashing by the Republicans and even by Obama. Some corporations derive their superprofits by operations that do severe environmental damage and contribute heavily to global warming, while others depend on a relatively healthy environment for their maximum profits. That is why some elements of big capital support the Republican Party, while others support the Democratic Party because they can see a limited common interest some issues with the working-class base of support for the Democratic Party. Our present strategy is build alliances both inside and outside the Democratic Party to curtail the dominance of big capital over the lives of our people.

We are well aware that mass political activity on issues of social justice domestically and anti-imperialist solidarity internationally will not spring from within the Democratic Party. The Communist Party must continue to work with other components of this alliance to generate mass activity independently of the two parties to pressure the president and the Congress to act on its demands.

In our electoral policy, we seek to cooperate and strengthen our relationship with the more progressive elements in Democratic Party, such as the Progressive Caucus in the U.S. Congress, a group of seventy-six members of the Congress co-chaired by Raúl Grijalva, a Latino from Arizona, and Keith Ellison, an African American Muslim from Minnesota. We also will strengthen our relationship to the Congressional Black Caucus (formed by African Americans in the Congress), which has been the point of origin of innovative policies including an end to the U.S. economic blockade of Cuba, and with the Congressional Hispanic Caucus. In its domestic policy, for example, the Progressive Caucus has put forth a program for using the public sector to deal with unemployment. It has opposed the use of the so called "war on terror" to incarcerate U.S. citizens indefinitely without criminal charges. In its foreign policy, the Progressive Caucus and the Black Caucus are outspoken in their opposition to U.S. imperialist policies abroad. The Progressive Caucus, now that Obama has been reelected, will be playing an important role in contributing to the mobilization of mass activity on critical issues to bring pressure on the Congress and administration to act on them.

In this year's elections, the labor unions made vigorous efforts to involve their members and their retirees in phoning and door-to-door visits to campaign for Obama and the Democratic Party candidates for the Congress and state legislatures. In my state, our Party members preferentially participated in the election campaign through these labor-union channels.

In our foreign policy, U.S. Communists consistently oppose all U.S. imperialist activities abroad. We participate in the Cuban solidarity movement and demand the end of the U.S. economic blockade against Cuba and the freeing of the Cuban Five. We opposed the NATO intervention in Libya and oppose U.S. intervention in Syria. We support immediate withdrawal of NATO troops from Afghanistan and oppose the use of drones for assassination and bombing. We call for the end of sanctions against Iran. We oppose the intrusion of the United States militarily and politically in the affairs of Southeast Asia. We oppose the China-bashing policies of the U.S. government. We welcome the election of several progressive, anti-imperialist governments in Latin America and oppose U.S. attempts to undermine them. This leftward shift in Latin American, opening a path to possible socialist development, is of tremendous importance in the worldwide anti-imperialist struggle.

We call for the replacement of U.S. support of the apartheid regime in Israel by support for a two-state solution based on the 1967 borders with the right of return of Palestinians to their native cities and villages. The day before the elections, the New York Times, in discussing the prospects of a Palestinian/Israel agreement, wrote: "Whatever chance exists of a new American peace initiative after the election is likely to vanish if Mitt Romney wins; at private fund-raising event, he said that the Arab-Israeli conflict was 'going to remain an unsolved problem' and seemed unconcerned about it."

With the elections now over, there is a prospect that growing support in the United States for a just Middle East solution can induce President Obama once again to put pressure on the Israeli government to end the settlement expansion and resume negotiations leading to such a solution. An indication of such growing support is the letter on 19 October 2012 signed by fifteen leaders of the principal U.S. Christian churches calling upon the Congress to reconsider giving aid to Israel because of human rights violations. Reverend Gradye Parsons, the top official of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) said, "We asked Congress to treat Israel like it would any other country, to make sure our military aid is going to a country espousing the values we would as Americans—that it is not being used to continually violate the human rights of other people." The letter said that Israel had continued expanding settlements in the West Bank and East Jerusalem despite American calls to stop claiming territory that under international law and United States policy should belong to a future Palestinian state. This is a sharp contrast to the evangelical Christian churches, which have been part of the core of the far right support of the Republican candidates for president and the Congress. A Jewish-American organization called "J Street," first organized six years ago as a "pro-Israel pro-peace" organization, has been gaining growing support among Jewish Americans for its advocacy of an end to the settlement expansion and a two- state solution based on the 1967 borders. In the 2012 elections, it contributed 1.8 million dollars to support the election of 72 candidates for the U.S. Congress, of which 71 were elected,

A key element of the Communist Party's strategy of alliances is to imbue the struggles of these alliances with enhancement of the democratic rights, and to promote the increasing use of the public sector to extend the acceptance of a socialist consciousness. Obviously the Communist Party needs far more growth than it has been able to achieve. We are, however, effectively using our participation in people's struggles and the Internet to recruit new members. We have an online daily news publication, People's World, www.peoplesworld.org, a monthly online theoretical journal Political Affairs, www.politicalaffairs.net, as well as national and district Websites. As a result of our online activities, we have been forming Party clubs in states in which we previously had very few or even no members. This influx of new members led us to have a national Party school earlier this year to acquaint new members with the Marxist-Leninist orientation of the Party.

The reelection of Obama places before us the high-priority task of reversing the decline in labor-union membership by securing the enactment of the law requiring the recognition of labor unions when supported by the majority of workers of an enterprise and securing passage of other legislation that benefits the working people. The fact that the composition of the new Congress did not change ideologically enough to facilitate passage of this law still presents us with a difficult struggle. The fact that Republican Party still controls the lower house of the Congress and has enough votes in the upper house to block legislative changes of a highly progressive nature presents an obstacle that we will have to combat until it can be changed in the 2014 elections. We still have the task of strengthening the center-left alliance and enriching its anti-imperialist character.

While the victory of Obama is a welcome aid for us in our domestic struggles, we still face the challenge of mobilizing mass pressure on his administration to reverse the imperialist character of U.S. foreign policy. The CPUSA will pursue this formidable task vigorously in alliance with domestic progressive forces and with our comrades in the Communist and Workers' Parties and their allies throughout the world.

Bronx communists for Obama

In 2014, Bronx Communist Party USA member David Mirtz wrote;^[23]

On a local level, our Party's participation can matter. Prior to 2008 our club in the Bronx had little involvement in local politics and little relation with local activists, groups or elected officials. Through spear-heading work on the Obama campaigns and the subsequent healthcare fight, as well as leading local work of the WFP, that has changed. Now we are "in the loop" and part of the local political scene

Flynn Club support

In 2014, the New York based Communist Party USA Elizabeth Gurley Flynn Club wrote;^[24]

Sometimes, we must be free to disagree with Democrats on selected issues, even those whom we have supported, such as Obama on a national level, Jerrold Nadler, a progressive Congressman from Manhattan, and Bill De Blasio, who is New York City's new progressive mayor. For example, we should be free to advocate a general reduction of our country's military and to disagree with the Obama Administration's expansion of some sections of our military forces.

Discussion: Political Tactics in New York by: ELIZABETH GURLEY FLYNN CLUB, NEW YORK CITY June 2 2014

Civil War doubled as marxist revolution (2008-08-21 14:19)

Karl Marx and Abraham Lincoln exchanged letters at the end of the Civil War. Although they were divided by far more than the Atlantic Ocean, they agreed on the cause of “free labor” and the urgent need to end slavery. Lincoln’s response signaled the importance of the German American community and the role of the international communists in opposing European recognition of the Confederacy.

The ideals of communism, voiced through the International Working Men’s Association, attracted many thousands of supporters throughout the US, and helped spread the demand for an eight-hour day. Blackburn shows how the IWA in America—born out of the Civil War—sought to radicalize Lincoln’s unfinished revolution and to advance the rights of labor, uniting black and white, men and women, native and foreign-born. The International contributed to a profound critique of the capitalist robber barons who enriched themselves during and after the war, and it inspired an extraordinary series of strikes and class struggles in the postwar decades.

In addition to a range of key texts and letters by both Lincoln and Marx, this book includes articles from the radical New York-based journal Woodhull and Claflin’s Weekly, an extract from Thomas Fortune’s classic work on racism Black and White, Frederick Engels on the progress of US labor in the 1880s.

Karl Marx supported the Radical Republicans via New York Tribune (2008-08-26 02:00)

Horace Greeley founded the New York Tribune in 1841. Greeley took a strong moral tone in his newspaper and campaigned against alcohol, tobacco, gambling, prostitution and capital punishment. However, his main concern was the abolition of slavery and the introduction of universal suffrage.

Greeley was very interested in socialist and feminist ideas and published articles by Karl Marx, Charles Dana, Margaret Fuller and Jane Grey Swisshelm in his newspaper. He also promoted the views of Albert Brisbane, who wanted society organised into co-operative communities.

Ulysses S. Grant

After the demise of the Whigs, Greeley supported the Free Soil Party. He was one of the leaders of the campaign against the 1850 Fugitive Slave Law and in 1856 helped form the Republican Party.

During the Civil War Greeley and the New York Tribune supported Abraham Lincoln, but opposed his renomination in 1864. Greeley was highly critical of the presidency of Ulysses G. Grant and became associated with the Radical Republicans. Later he helped form the Liberal Republican Party.

After the 1860 elections the Radical Republicans became a powerful force in Congress. Several were elected as chairman of important committees. This included Thaddeus Stevens (Ways and Means), Owen Lovejoy (Agriculture), James Ashley (Territories), Henry Winter Davis (Foreign Relations), George W. Julian (Public Lands), Elihu Washburne (Commerce) and Henry Wilson (Judiciary)..

Radical Republicans were critical of Abraham Lincoln during the Civil War, when he was slow to support the recruitment of black soldiers into the Union Army. Radical Republicans also clashed with Lincoln over his treatment of Major General John C. Fremont. On 30th August, 1861, Fremont, the commander of the Union Army in St. Louis, proclaimed that all slaves owned by Confederates in Missouri were free. Lincoln was furious when he heard the news as he feared that this action would force slave-owners in border states to join the Confederate Army. Lincoln asked Fremont to modify his order and free only slaves owned by Missourians actively working for the South.

When John C. Fremont refused, he was sacked and replaced by the conservative General Henry Halleck. The Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, William Fessenden, described Lincoln's actions as "a weak and unjustifiable concession in the Union men of the border states. Whereas Charles Sumner wrote to Lincoln complaining about his actions and remarked how sad it was "to have the power of a god and not use it godlike".

The situation was repeated in May, 1862, when General David Hunter began enlisting black soldiers in the occupied district under his control. Soon afterwards Hunter issued a statement that all slaves owned by Confederates in his area (Georgia, Florida and South Carolina) were free. Lincoln was furious and despite the pleas of Salmon Chase, the Secretary of the Treasury, the instructed him to disband the 1st South Carolina (African Descent) regiment and to retract his proclamation.

In the early stages of the American Civil War Lincoln only had one senior member of his government, Salmon Chase

(Secretary of the Treasury), who was sympathetic to the views of the Radical Republicans. Later in the war other radicals such as Edwin M. Stanton (Secretary of War), William Fessenden (Secretary of the Treasury) and James Speed (Attorney General) were recruited into his Cabinet.

Radical Republicans were also critical of Lincoln's Reconstruction Plan. In 1862 Benjamin Wade and Henry Winter Davis, sponsored a bill that provided for the administration of the affairs of southern states by provisional governors until the end of the war. They argued that civil government should only be re-established when half of the male white citizens took an oath of loyalty to the Union. The Wade-Davis Bill was passed on 2nd July, 1864, but Abraham Lincoln refused to sign it.

Despite their insistence that the white power structure in the South should be removed, most Radical Republications argued that the defeated forces should be treated leniently. Even while the American Civil War was going on Charles Sumner argued that: "A humane and civilized people cannot suddenly become inhumane and uncivilized. We cannot be cruel, or barbarous, or savage, because the Rebels we now meet in warfare are cruel, barbarous and savage. We cannot imitate the detested example."

After the war Horace Greeley advocated universal amnesty and actually put up the bail for his long-term enemy, Jefferson Davis. Lyman Trumbull and Hannibal Hamlin campaigned for better treatment of those Confederate leaders still in prison and James F. Wilson took up the case of the former vice-president, Alexander Stephens.

Radical Republicans were strongly opposed the policies of President Andrew Johnson and argued in Congress that Southern plantations should be taken from their owners and divided among the former slaves. They also attacked Johnson when he attempted to veto the extension of the Freeman's Bureau, the Civil Rights Bill and the Reconstruction Acts. However, the Radical Republicans were able to get the Reconstruction Acts passed in 1867 and 1868. Despite these acts, white control over Southern state governments was gradually restored when organizations such as the Ku Kux Klan were able to frighten blacks from voting in elections.

In November, 1867, the Judiciary Committee voted 5-4 that Andrew Johnson be impeached for high crimes and misdemeanors. The majority report contained a series of charges including pardoning traitors, profiting from the illegal disposal of railroads in Tennessee, defying Congress, denying the right to reconstruct the South and attempts to prevent the ratification of the Fourteenth Amendment.

On 30th March, 1868, Johnson's impeachment trial began. Johnson was the first and only president of the United States to be impeached. The trial, held in the Senate in March, was presided over by Chief Justice Salmon Chase. The Radical Republicans played a leading role in the trial. Thaddeus Stevens was mortally ill, but he was determined to take part in the proceedings and was carried to the Senate in a chair.

Charles Sumner, another long-time opponent of Johnson led the attack. He argued that: "This is one of the last great battles with slavery. Driven from the legislative chambers, driven from the field of war, this monstrous power has found a refuge in the executive mansion, where, in utter disregard of the Constitution and laws, it seeks to exercise its ancient, far-reaching sway. All this is very plain. Nobody can question it. Andrew Johnson is the impersonation of the tyrannical slave power. In him it lives again. He is the lineal successor of John C. Calhoun and Jefferson Davis; and he gathers about him the same supporters."

Although a large number of senators believed that Johnson was guilty of the charges, they disliked the idea of Benjamin Wade becoming the next president. Wade, who believed in women's suffrage and trade union rights, was considered by many members of the Republican Party as being an extreme radical. James Garfield warned that Wade was "a man of violent passions, extreme opinions and narrow views who was surrounded by the worst and most violent elements in the Republican Party."

Others Republicans such as James Grimes argued that Johnson had less than a year left in office and that they were willing to vote against impeachment if Johnson was willing to provide some guarantees that he would not continue to interfere with Reconstruction.

When the vote was taken all members of the Democratic Party voted against impeachment. So also did those Republicans such as Lyman Trumbull, William Fessenden and James Grimes, who disliked the idea of Benjamin Wade becoming president. The result was 35 to 19, one vote short of the required two-thirds majority for conviction. A further vote on 26th May, also failed to get the necessary majority needed to impeach Johnson. The Radical Republicans were angry that not all the Republican Party voted for a conviction and Benjamin Butler claimed that Johnson had bribed two of the senators who switched their votes at the last moment.

The Radical Republicans campaign for equal rights for African Americans was not a popular cause after the American Civil War. In 1868 Henry Wilson argued that the issue cost the Republican Party over a quarter of a million votes in 1868. In the election that year several of the radicals lost their seats including the long-term leader of the group, Benjamin Wade.

When Ulysses S. Grant was elected the only Radical Republicans in his administration was Schuyler Colfax, his vice-president, George Boutwell (Secretary of the Treasury) and John Creswell (Postmaster General). Later, he found posts for George H. Williams (Attorney General) and Zachariah Chandler (Secretary of the Interior).

After the American Civil War a group of former soldiers from the Confederate Army founded the Ku Klux Klan. The first Grand Wizard was Nathan Forrest, an outstanding general during the war. During the next two years Klansmen wearing masks, white cardboard hats and draped in white sheets, tortured and killed black Americans and sympathetic whites. Immigrants, who they blamed for the election of Radical Republicans, were also targets of their hatred. Radical Republicans in Congress urged President Ulysses S. Grant to take action against the Ku Klux Klan. After a campaign led by Oliver Morton and Benjamin Butler, Grant agreed in 1870 to instigate an investigation into the organization and the following year a Grand Jury reported that: "There has existed since 1868, in many counties of the state, an organization known as the Ku Klux Klan, or Invisible Empire of the South, which embraces in its membership a large proportion of the white population of every profession and class. The Klan has a constitution and bylaws, which provides, among other things, that each member shall furnish himself with a pistol, a Ku Klux gown and a signal instrument. The operations of the Klan are executed in the night and are invariably directed against members of the Republican Party. The Klan is inflicting summary vengeance on the colored citizens of these citizens by breaking into their houses at the dead of night, dragging them from their beds, torturing them in the most inhuman manner, and in many instances murdering."

Congress passed the Ku Klux Act and became law on 20th April, 1871. This gave the president the power to intervene in troubled states with the authority to suspend the writ of habeas corpus in countries where disturbances occurred. The passing of this legislation was the last substantial victory for the Radical Republicans in Congress.

In the 1870s several Radical Republicans, including Benjamin Wade, William D. Kelley, George W. Julian, Benjamin Butler, Henry Wilson and John Covode campaigned for the eight hour day and improved conditions for working people. However, they were now fairly isolated and were unable to persuade Congress to pass legislation to protect the emerging trade union movement.

Brain Drain Map (2008-09-07 14:39)

In Business / Economics, they call this the brain drain map. It has nothing to do with stupid people. It has to do with where # per 1000 geniuses are located. China has the most geniuses per billion! It's like that in economics, the geniuses all go the places that make the most money like Hong Kong even if its communist

If you want some of those geniuses back...voting Republican is the way to do it. Geniuses like profit.

John Doe said... (2008-09-16 13:28)

"I am an American that immigrated to Australia in 2001 (after Bush took office). My wife and I didn't like what we saw coming. Politically, culturally, financially and socially.

When Big Media first started covering the US's economic problems here in 2008 they drug out the old phrase "When America catches a cold Australia gets a flu". Two plus years on and this couldn't be further from the truth. The economy here is going great guns, and demand from Asia and a better government are a good part of the reason. House prices are having solid gains every year, unemployment is reasonably steady, and the federal reserve is trying to raise interest rates to cool the economy (.25 % again today)

To that point, the government here doesn't subsidise 30 year fixed mortgages the way they do in the US, so they can still manage the economy by slightly manipulating interest rates. The longest you can fix a mortgage for is 5 years, at a very high premium, so most people don't.

America has become an after thought, if not the laughing stock, of many Australians. It saddens me to see how far everything has fallen over there. I no longer try to defend the US or the American people. The time for real public outrage passed many years ago, and I have not only given up on the government, but also on the people themselves. So many dear family and friends spend their lives watching TV while their freedoms, lifestyle, culture and wealth were/are being destroyed around them. Ignorant and apathetic to the realities of the real world. Living with some strange notion of the past as if it represents the present.

Not all is doom and gloom here. And although it could still come, if it does it will have little, if nothing at all, to do with the problems in America." We're living in the past and watching TV loosing our freedoms? At least our two party system is made up of Republicans or Frankfurt School & Trotskyists. The American congress doesn't have your coalition.

Chinese workers (2008-09-27 02:24)

International Workingmen's Association was joined up with California Unions when they kicked the Chinese railroad workers out when they feared Chinese workers would be hired for lower pay! And that's why we have the people's republic of China. Something similar happened when the signs said that white people had to work even when non-whites would work cheaper...a type of "deleonism". They were all Tom Dooley clones. That's why the communists spew racism for the payroll originally....

That's why I thought that this union thing and Obama thing made Obama a deleonist.

American Federation of Labor has problems with racism, because of the Wobblies (Deleonist) integration into that .

Hong Kong [Capitalist] is most prosperous city in China. (2008-09-29 11:45)

You know the bailout failed, because the democrats were greedy again.

I say the Secret Service should of gunned down all the democrats in the fucking white house! Yes, in front of the President Bush.

Nancy Polisy (House major) lied about the fact that republicans made it better and that they showed show up! She called republicans unpatriotic. All the democrats went ACLU on us and that it was politically calculated.

He said in the Presidential Debate that he couldn't reach that far to the left.

we can prevent Great Depression II this way. Although if the economy is that bad off than everything goes Democrat like right now. Democrats are the problem here. The democrats prevented the bill so the economy could get worse so they can look like heroes (they're the villains)! In the great depression, America were liberal socialism anyways by building all those government projects like Hoover Dam. Oh yeah, John McCain said the same thing so hell I am 100 % agreement with McCain at the moment!

re we have to use smiley based fascism/socialism sparely, because we're capitalist. Look at Hong Kong, China couldn't add market socialism to Hong Kong, because they would cripple the city which is why it's a special administrative zone. It was doing so well independently That decision was brilliant. It's not the same deal in the United States, because Barrack Obama has to win the election. It's true that Hong Kong is the most prosperous city in China, correct?

What's wrong with capitalism when Australia is #1? (2008-10-08 12:27)

My banner means that like Russia (Putin is obviously KGB) that the US Treasurer is funding our economy which is smiley face facism (liberal fascism) kind of like the USSR. The People's Republic of China said that there would be no tax on businesses if they move over there and here in the US, corporate tax is 2nd highest in the world which is a democrat issue. And then Obama wants to spend trillion dollars on non-nuclear alternative energy to coal and gas, because of his cronies say so. Personally, I also believe he doesn't want to fund Yucca Mountain which is a mandatory government program if you like it or not.

And if we're the last holy place on earth as far as the apex of good goes; why would you diminish military spending? Since WWII, we fought the evil! We can prove this buy feeding 3rd world countries with American food.

Interesting enough, Australia is #1 in the world and they're capitalist. You won't hear that on liberal news. Looks whose building nuclear power plants under labor party leader! We're capitalist too and there isn't anything wrong with capitalism. With Barrack Obama (the messiah), you're handicapping capitalism and the smart people who do it. You have China with no corporate taxes, because Hong Kong, also capitalist-base, told him how to screw up American economy. China listened.

If we don't bomb Iran within months, they'll have their nuke. Then Pres. Bush would be ahead of his time, because there'll be nukes in the middle east like he predicted (besides Pakistan due to there be UN peace agreement) . The black marketing of designs and stuff will be terrible.

QUOTE <http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/business/7660409.stm>

Us republicans always had this figure in back of our heads kind of like death itself. It lurks around every so often...a few minutes daily for me actually. Actually you must understand that even though we're all Americans, the other 50 % is screwing us young people who have to pay it off. They be democrat and add up all that debt and then they die leaving it to the Boomerang gen to pay cash where its due.

And even more weird is the fact China government offering $0 corporate tax for American companies, because manufacturing moving to China where it's cheaper. They're leaving the USA. And it's a tie in the polls...that's ridiculous to think half of Americans are that stupid. Is it just me that will stand up to this point? Probably!

There is just something wrong with the party that taxes a couple trillion dollars on top of the rescue bill and that Obama motherfucker is still doing this reteric for advancing his career. That's why McCain is the only Presidential choice

Oh yeah everybody including Australia is building nuclear power plants except those silly democrats.

Nuclear Power is essential: a matter of national security even! (2008-10-27 01:59)

[EMBED]

For nuclear revival to work, you must vote GOP, because one of the primary concerns for nuclear power is where to store the waste. That'd be Yucca Mountain nuclear storage facility in Nevada. Completion date: 2020. Yucca will hold waste for the next 100 years, because it is the largest government project of all time. Barack Obama refuses to fund Yucca Mountain and wants to shut it down, because he is a socialist with an agenda. Sorry, but it's true that energy wattage will go up 50 % by 2030, and nuclear power plants which account for 20 % of the nations energy will be retired and he need more nuclear power plants just to tread water here (replace the ones that exist) .

X

I just caught the first half of CNBC's Nuclear Option, and it mentioned that the South Texas nuclear site wants to double in size and is one of largest two nuclear reactor site. There has been plans to expand it to twice it's size so another 27 megawatts which is about 2 million homes. . There are 20 cities who want to be the first to build a nuclear power plant in 30 yrs or face blackouts. Most of our plants have been in operation for 30 yrs and have a full life of only 60 yrs with technology being developed to bring them in operation longer. We'll need increase in nuclear power, because power demands grow. Nuclear absolutely needs to be a part of the equasion. McCain is the only presidential candidate to emprise nuclear power in this country. The workload for electricity is growing dramatically in the Southeast. This has generated a lot of interest in nuclear power in the US. One nuclear power plant built means the elimination of 11 million tons of CO2 over a coal plant. Nuclear power plants would be to the equivalent of $15 a barrel of gas compared to $120 a gas barrel would normally cost. 96 % of the spent nuclear fuel can be recycled into nuclear energy, and the 4 % is nuclear waste.

Why is nuclear good? Well, gas plants omit CO2 and prices are incredibly high, coal has all the issues of fossil fuel appliance costs associated with itself, wind and solar are certainly a part of the equation, but can not support sustained power generation. We need a nuclear renaissance just to stay at 20 % nuclear in the United States. It generates lots of income for schools and government in small towns.

So we need nuclear energy so that is a good reason to vote John McCain, the only man who can build new power plants for us. Democrats are so slow at it, that we'll have blackouts. And remember now, we have technology (invented by France) to reuse 96 % of the spent nuclear fuel.

www.aqmd.gov/news1/2004/HydrogenStationGrandOpeningPR.html

As you know nuclear is fission....hydrogen is fusion kind of like the difference between little boy and Project Chariot. Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger allows multi-billion plant to be built in So. California where blackouts are a part of life. This is first of several and hydrogen power plants will be built as soon as 2009 as the state budget proposal is almost confirmed! Gov. Schwarzenegger is a republican and democrats don't want Hydrogen power plants. Hydrogen power plants are more expensive than nuclear so these hydrogen power plants won't replace most of the 20 % of nuclear power.

Another MONDAY, ANOTHER BAILOUT

Someone went insane on one of these. Probably the socialist Barney Frank which should be shot. But that would be murder and I'm you know atheist. What happen to the good old sane democrats. Are there any left? And then Barack Obama hires a bunch of Clintonites to become a moderate.

Why not have 2 moderate parties? Ie: Socially liberal, politically conservative. What I mean is a hybrid party that invites all the liberal music and culture in right-wing point-of-view of pro-military, pro nuclear, pro-superpower, anti-corruption, anti-ear-marks. We're talking emulation here. It's been done before, I mean we're a representative republic (not a democracy)...the constitution was an anti-political party republic conservative document. An allusion yes, but the truth is because we're a superpower with a state-of-the-art military to go wars (every decade we have a war or two), we're the most conservative nation on Earth. For example the #2 nation has only 2 carriers. We have 12 commissioned!

It is literally four trillion dollars + whatever Barack Obama spends Vs. cutting taxes with Reaganomics (not costing four trillion dollars + whatever Barack Admin spends) and some creative tactics like giving everyone checks for private healthcare. And we would be more self dependent and not borrow an ungodly amount from communist China.

I believe in Reaganomics, Chapter 11 bankruptcy and reorganizing of all these companies. The overly greedy socialist-begging labor unions composed in the GM, Ford and Chrysler, and Teacher unions are mostly liberal, and will bring down their institutions in bizarre expectations.

Oh yeah, I voted a strait republican ticket on the 4th.

The Global Warming is evil propaganda to not build nuclear/hydrogen powerplants in America, and to build nuclear power plants elsewhere. None built since 1970s.

The UN is evil, because they're looking for money to steal from US (AAA first world nation) and these A first world nations hate us for being extremely rich via capitalism and they run the place. <http://blog.taragana.com/index.php/archive/11-prime-features-of-opensuse-11-1-a-comprehensive-review/>

You know I had OpenSuse 11 on my PC and the only problems I had was it had slow USB transfers to thumb drive, it crashed a few times (but always recovered in under 10 seconds) and the last few times, didn't recognize my mouse and keyboard! :(

The 2.6.27.7 kernel has the much needed improved filesystem (UBIFS) optimized for pure flash-based storage devices.

openSUSE 11.1 will roundhouse kick the competition!

I give the OpenSuse 11 Linux a 8.5 out of 10. I only used it like 6 times and one was to backup a locked Windows session. I downloaded a lot of MPEG4 and Games and succeeded.

KDE 3.5.7 and 3.5.9 were so much faster than KDE 4.0.4 too. No latency at all in the 3.5.x series.

I feel old...I have 2.6.27.7 kernel now. I remember using the Redhat 7.1 days of 2.4.18 kernel in 2003 in High School. 'It was my schizophrenic friend'. At least that's what the UNIX guy said. Did I mention I feel old ✕ Quickpost this image to Myspace, Digg, Facebook, and others!

You know that NASA is running Suse 9.3 Enterprise on their super computer and it's one of the top 5 supercomputers. Some more reasons to love OpenSuse 11+ over Fedora 7+, because Rasmussen is supporting some ancient version of Linux, Fedora 2 (ie: around when Suse 9 was coming out and the British were winning American Revolutionary War). OpenSuse is still most noob friendly Linux, and that's how I like it. I'm a Microsoft guy in case you can't tell. This distro's KDE 4.1.3 and Gnome 2.24 support MESA video drivers over the inferior NV ones so the shell boots in no time and runs 4x faster once it boots up with OpenGL 2.1 enabled. 3D Linux games are playable for the first time. Fedora 10 still has those low end NV drivers and is said to be slow, because of those NV drivers.

Because I can. Can't wait until BTRFS (ReiserFS 5.0) in Fedora 11. Everything is a bit jerky in Fedora 10 and it won't let me change to EXT4 without stalling.

Videogames when controlled enhances your mental compacity (2008-12-10 17:58)

Lets disagree with this article for a moment

It is scientific fact that videogames, while as worthless as audio cds or Video dvds in net worth, will enhance your brain in problem solving and quickness. The community of discussing your favorite game with somebody else gives you education of uniteness. It is practically the only way smiley face fascists (aka: liberal fascist) and libertarians may agree which each other though if you talk politics in some countries you're jailed and nobody has as much freedom as we do. Go figure. Which is hwy most Americans don't understand that part and play videogames as it is an indoor activity. Then of course there is the Canadians who close forums just because conservatives are free ourselves biased. So like China, if we speak out, they close it since they can't jail me. It's interesting though the fact of the less free people get more +rep than the free people with the exception of the brainwashed Americans (ie: Canadian wannabes) on that forum. No..it's just the realization that I'm more free than most of those people. Therefore, you have to be schizophrenic and sound British when you're completely capitalist for those +rep else you're screwed.

Closing Gitmo is an insane PR stunt, people! (2008-12-16 18:18)

Yep, you heard me right, it houses the most lethal serial killers in the world. It's not a gola, because it is what it is. Water boarding is not torcher, because these are the most lethal men in the world (they're all Michael Myers in disguise).

We were there since the Spanish American war, and we stayed and leased the place. It's a POW camp in war time and a dangerous asylum in the peace period. Don't give into the propaganda. US is absolutely right for having a prison in Gimo.

Water boarding is exception when dealing with the most lethal men in the world. The anti-American ACLU and European nations are fucking with us on that one. Don't let them.

(Gitmo prisoners)

Remember, Gitmo is a place to put the most insane, lethal guerrilla tactic mercenaries in the world who oppose the

USA. It's supposed to be there. In case you haven't noticed we were a super power, most of the world hates being underneath us; therefore, the insane PR stunt (anti-gitmo)

"People will find that there's quite a few that are very dangerous people and to put them in a position where they can eventually get out on the street and come back and harm one of our citizens would be a very dangerous policy," Mr. Bush told The Washington Times" Bush. Detroit is Fred Flintstone (2008-12-27 18:40)

This is so funny. The only way I want them to do loan is if they license BMW, Lamborghini, Ferrari, and AUDI car frames and blueprints and duplicate them via mass manufacturing. I can relate to this, because The Flintstones were a awesome 1990s cartoon on Cartoon Network.

Too bad we couldn't bankrupt them, because they're attached to 1000s of other supply businesses so that would conclude to 1000s supply companies bankrupted with millions of jobs lost. Republicans could emulate democrat loan BTW so that capitalism may survive in 2012 Election. Too bad the loan was the only way to achieve better stock market success. Political party wouldn't matter in this situation.

Foreign countries are having high energy lasers for 6th gen aircraft. We have them in 2008!

Land version

Top 14 Fighters (2008-12-29 22:06)

14. The JAS.39 Gripen. This is a small single-seat fighter using the American F404 turbofan engine. This aircraft is capable of numerous missions (point-defense interceptor, ground attack fighter, and even anti-shipping). It is highly maneuverable, and is a worthy successor to the Draken and Viggen interceptors that Sweden has built. This is what the 1980s F-20 Tigershark (an early competitor of the F-16 and F-18) could have been, had it not been stillborn.

13. F/A-18E/F Super Hornet. This is the ultimate Hornet, without the range limitations of the F/A-18A/B/C/D, and with two extra weapons pylons. This fighter is based on a proven design, and has even been used as a tanker with the premature retirement of the S-3 Viking. Sheer versatility – and improvement from the original make the Super Hornet's place on this list a secure one.

12. F-15C Eagle. This is perhaps one of the last of the single-purpose aircraft. This plane has done one thing for 30 years (air-to-air combat), and done it well (over 100 kills to no losses). However, what is remarkable is the almost-untapped potential the airframe has as a ground-attack platform. The F-15E Strike Eagle has become a superb multi-role fighter. However, the F-15 has gotten long in the tooth for air superiority.

11. Chengdu J-10 - This Chinese fighter is almost as good as the F-16C Fighting Falcon. Carries the almost same payload (within 300 pounds) of the F-16. Same speeds at altitude and sea level as F-16.

10. F-16C Fighting Falcon. This is a bird that has become a classic. Widely exported, and it has amassed a solid record. Still being built to special order for export customers, it not only has scored air-to-air kills in service with the United States, Israel, and Pakistan, but it is also one of the most numerous modern fighters in service today.

9. Su-27 Flanker. This was built to counter the F-15, and it has become one of the more feared aircraft out of Russia. Highly maneuverable, it is equipped and designed for a dogfight, it has been exported. The wide export market for this plane and its variants (the Su-30 in particular) is the primary reason for the F-22.

8. F-14D Tomcat. This is a plane that had aged like fine wine. Originally designed to face the Tu-22M3 Backfire bomber in protection of American carriers, it has become a carrier-launched version of the F-15E. Capable of long-range attacks using the AIM-54 Phoenix, the F-14 proved it was capable of dogfighting in two incidents with Libya (the U.S. Navy fighters scored four kills for no losses). This is a plane retiring before its time.
7. Eurofighter Typhoon. A low-observable multi-role fighter. It is fast, maneuverable, and carries a lot of air-to-air missiles. It also can be used for attack missions as well. This is a fighter that will be the backbone of at least four air forces (the UK, Spain, Germany, and Italy).
6. Dassault Rafale. Another European multi-role fighter with some stealth built in, this aircraft not only carries out the air-to-air and attack missions, it also comes in a naval version. Its first export order was recently signed – to Saudi Arabia. Equipped with French air-to-air missiles, it edges out the Eurofighter since its naval version could interest other countries who have carriers (Brazil and India come to mind).
5. F-35. This plane will be the new F-16 in ten years. Not only is this replacing the F-16, the A-10, the AV-8B, and some F/A-18s in U.S. service, but it will replace aircraft in other countries as well. Like the F-16, it will be produced in numbers. When it enters service, it will outclass many aircraft. Comes with HELLADS AAM system. Flies vertically like Harrier IIs.
4. Chengdu Super-10 : A stealth, 5th-generation fighter developed from the J-10B featuring a more powerful engine, thrust-vector control, stronger airframe and passive phased-array radar, and much more, according to Russian sources. It is also reported to be having carrier-born capabilities.
3. Sukhoi PAK FA - The PAK FA was designed to compete with the F-22 Raptor and the F-35 Lightning II, the world's first fifth-generation fighter jets. Due to it having the same take-off weight as Raptors; it is basically a clone. It doesn't have supercruise, but it does have afterburner.
2. F-22 Raptor. This is the F-15C's replacement. Entering service in 2005, it renders every other air-superiority aircraft obsolete. This is a plane that can not only outfly any other plane in the world, outrun any other plane in the world, and it can do so while remaining virtually unseen. The F-22 is a true heir to the F-15, and could do so in another fashion if Lockheed's FB-22 proposal takes off. Comes with HELLADS AAM system. This F-22 Raptor gets #2, because it has supercruise technology; otherwise it would get #3 and PAK-FA would get #2
1. Northrop Grumman Switchblade - Evolution of the X-29; featured in Popular Mechanics magazine two years ago, this is variable switchable aircraft does exist in blueprints and dates 1999. It has three modes Long wingspan increases lift, enabling slower flight speeds for precision bombing and landing on short runways. Forward sweep provides a good balance of lift and drag; efficient airflow over the wings and control surfaces enhances the fighter's maneuverability for air-to-air combat. Low aspect ratio provides the least drag, enabling the aircraft to speed up to Mach 3. In this configuration the trailing edge becomes the leading edge, a section of the wing root becomes the new trailing edge. Comes with HELLADS AAM system.

MIT Proves Global Warming Isn't Man-Made! (2009-01-02 14:24)

Yeah, it's a bunch of Sun spots and Sun flares seeping through the ozone and wasn't dissolved in Earth's Atmosphere. Nuclear Power Plants don't affect anything. It's mostly a hoax. The only thing that did affect weather a bit was 70 something nukes going off between 1945 - 2003. Never fear. Ian to the rescue.

It goes in cycles. Heat wave of 2003 was the direct result of a sun flare.

Technically, there is no truth behind nuclear power plant environmental scheme so everybody can build as many nuclear power plants as it wants; spare the U235 production.

500 million will outpace non-hydrogen power plants by 2050 (2009-01-03 14:28)

A sensible and prudent national energy policy should have, as two of its primary goals, 1) maximizing the lifetime of our remaining resources of fossil fuels, and, 2) making sure that the harmful by-products of energy utilization (waste heat and pollution) do not exceed the long range carrying capacity of our environment.

We can support a near 500 million population by 2050 if Government apply Gen3+ and Gen4 hydrogen power plants in key locations. Yucca Mountain is mandatory. We can't have several hundred acres of wind turbans. Fucusly solely on wind turbans are more crazy than ITER-based (magnetoplasma/Gen4) hydrogen power plants.

US at least needs 30 % nuclear with ITER-based (magnetoplasma/Gen4) hydrogen power plants by the time US has remotely near 500 million residents.

Nationalize healthcare will break our economy - It's Insane (2009-01-07 17:19)

One of the reasons why I voted republican was national healthcare is INSANE. Every other country with nationalized healthcare (all the first world nations) is broken right now. WE may continue to be smiley face fascist, but not socialist medicine that'll destroy us. Canadian healthcare is broken, because there is no modifvation and people have to wait in line. USA captialist healthcare is the best in the world, because we modifvate people. Other countries governments are so socialist biased, that they can not change to a capitalist privatized medicine. Remember, you Americans don't know how good our country has it with capitalist medicine. It's #1 in the world.

The left is totally crazy in this regard, and will never vote democrat ever. They all belong in asylums. Being medicine to all is an allusion to destory our economy. You can be democrat, but don't change our medicine unless you want a Great Depression II. It is so fucking expensive when it doesn't have to be, and you know the liberals are borrowing from China and denying that. It's insane! You liberals are all insane for supporting nationaized healthcare. I will ne Every other country which done it health care went down the toilet!

OpenGL 3.0 + Mt Evans & DirectX 11 (2009-01-12 21:18)

Here is what the Xbox 720, and PS4 prototype games are going to look like. I'm guessing these are quick mock ups using the renders available. The first image is heavily influenced by The Dark Knight, because obviously it's #1 on Bluray.com at the moment.

DX11 demos I am thinking I'll wait to buy a PS4 or Xbox 720 after the 2 year mark of either, because I have a lot to play yet.

I'm going to say that most of my future games are console, and only 2 are going to be DirectX 10, because the awesomeness of DirectX 10 even if DirectX 11 is better. For this I'll wait until Half-life 3 or Crysis 2 comes out. I think the law of diminishing returns have ended with the Geforce 8800 GTX, because that's when I am buying half as many PC games.

I'll be around to getting a DirectX 11 GPUs when there is 2 for 1 $450 deal. This is what the PS4/X720 is capable of. I am smart enough to know that DirectX 11 games work with current GPUs. A lot of people around here say they can't afford high end PCs. Even in 2009, people play either WoW or Guild Wars or Counter Strike Source so this isn't that I am missing much in PC gaming until I buy another GPU in 2010 Chirstmas.

I do have a wish list of 2009

January - February - Far Cry 2 for PC

January - February - Motorstorm - Pacific Rift March - Killzone 2 Ps3 version Final Fantasy XIII - March

April - Resident Evil 5 PS3

Star Ocean A New Hope - March

October - December - Diablo 3 And yes, I am are of the Geforce GTX 295 specs beating the Radeon HD 4870 X2 specs by 20 fps at 1920x1080 and that it came out on January 6th. Still DirectX 10, will pass.

Two wars for next decade! Obama goes to war. (2009-01-14 20:47)

The first war I know is the Cyber Cold War with Russia-China pact masquerading on US government servers. That's what the USAF Cyber soldiers are doing in Space Command. They can get into NASTAQ BTW. NATO has a serious problem with it, and we're their leader.

The new second American war would be drug cartels are getting closer to Texas. Mexico is fighting the war on drugs. It'll move into Texas by 2012 I am guessing.

Windows 7 read/writes Linux file systems !!!! (2009-01-18 11:46)

Finally, nobody has to be in Linux to read files off it's file system beginning mid-2009. It can be done in Windows 7! Excellent thinking on Microsoft's part. Way to stay more competitive with MAC OS 10.5+ and Linux. Linux is full of communist Chinese and Indian code anyways. ...and you have to mess around with emulators to get PC games to work!

Heavily Yielded Cyclops64 CPU in Playstation 5? (2009-01-20 01:13)

The Cyclops64 is like a high-end Cell Broadband Engine, if CBE was lowest end cellular architecture. It's basically a CBE with 80 SPEs/10 PPEs at 500 MHz instead of 8 SPEs at 3.2 GHz.

In comparison, Playstation 4 is rumored to have a Cell Broadband Engine 3 with 32 SPEs and 4 PPEs, but who knows how many disabled to improve yield. If Sony disable 12 SPEs left over from IBM Roadrunner super computers than PS4 still matches Xbox 720.

Cyclops64 is funded 95 % by the US Government shared by the DoD, DoE, IBM, and the Japanese have Toshiba to put it into future IBM Roadrunners, currently fastest super computer in the world. Yes, IBM got that from a Looney Tunes. NASA uses Marvin Marion to represent Mars missions.

Playstation 5 will likely have a yielded version left over from rejected US super computer CPUs. 60 or more SPEs over CBE 3's 32 SPEs...what's not to like? I'm sure it will be missing 20 just to pay for itself. Sony are essentially recycling garbage Cyclops64 and giving it new life as a console CPU. I'm sure the software will work-around the incompatibilities. Personally, PS4 should have a heavily yielded Cyclops64 chips, but I don't care what CPU they put in it, it's still having DirectX 11 graphics. And I am still going to wait 12 months - four years after launch to buy one.

Swastika flag on Mars? (2009-01-21 20:39)

The Nazis landed on the Moon, built a moon base, and then landed on Mars in a suicidal mission using UFO parts. Andromeda tachyon drives, and was armed with four triple gun turrets of large naval caliber. The large intensity of the electro-magnetogravitic fields and the inferior quality of the metal alloys used then for the structural elements of the drive, was causing the metal to fatigue and get very brittle only after a few months of work of the drive. The flight to Mars departed from Germany one month before the war ended - in April 1945.

Later trips to Mars by the joint Soviet-American craft in 1952 and by the Vatican craft of the Marconi project from Argentina in 1956 reached Mars in only 2 - 3 days, because their drives were working during the whole flight: accelerating in the first half and decelerating in the second.

What would / doesn't apply to Sturgeons Law these days (2009-01-25 18:07)

Sturgeons Law: states 90 % of the media out there is not worth the price-point.

Stuff Sturgeons Law doesn't apply to in my opinion:

- 8.) 5th Wheelers
- 7.) PCs in general running Windows or MAC OS
- 6.) Operating Systems
- 5.) Top 10 % of the best rock and country Audio CDs
- 4.) The Simpsons as well the top 2 % of anime series.
- 3.) Role playing games videogames
- 2.) Racing videogames
- 1.) Fox News Channel

What applies to Sturgeon's Law

- 11. Sports supplies like Kayaks, canoes, baseball, football, soccer. (rent them)
 - 10. LED TVs - They cost more and burn out sooner over older predecessor.
 - 9. LCDs over 40"
 - 8. Bluray (expensive and for most film you could buy 330 minutes of bargain anime on DVD)
 - 7. iTunes m4a
 - 6. most Platformer videogames
 - 5. most 3D Fighting videogames
 - 4. most Action Adventure videogames
 - 3. 99 % of American cartoons. and any anime below 8.0 at reviews
 - 2. All of newer Hollywood films released after 1970, all TV sitcoms (like Home Improvement).
 - 1. Sports videogames other then racing

Remember to be liberal conservative for the next 20 yrs so we don't go bankrupt when I have to pay for it down my lifetime. Obama is a evil, because he's a far left bureaucrat that'll spend our way out of it just because the democrat must do something drastic. I wish they go back to their old ways with caps.

Yeah, the United Kingdom government is on the edge of bankruptcy, because their socialist society didn't create jobs and the Brits were hoping that we vote democrat so Americans could go bankrupt along with them. Sickening huh. Yeah, If you keep being democrat, we'll end up like UK in 3 yrs...broke.

Why would I want him to succeed with making our health care system go down the toilet like UK or Canadian health care. Huh? I don't. Of course I want him to fail. I have laser vision.

Play PS backups on PS2s without modchip? (2009-02-09 23:27)

News to me. I have plenty of PS1 downloads to burn onto CD yet. Recently, I've read a way that regular PS2s can see backed up PS1 games without modchips. Shocking.
 Here I'll list the directions and you can comment on my blog here.

1. Insert the PSX disc in your Burner (NOT the regular CDROM, as chances are it won't read subchannel info)
2. Fire up CloneCD, preferably 4.0.0.0 and up.
3. Click on the "Read to Image File" Button (the one with the glasses)
4. Now select your burner from the drives listed.
5. You'll now see a couple of profiles. We'll need to create a custom one though. Right click on the white area and select "New".
6. Name your new profile "PlayStation Disc" or "PSX Backup" or "PIRACY RULZ!!!111!" or whatever.
7. Input the following settings into the profile:
 Data Read Settings
 Read Speed Data: Max
 Read Subchannel Data from Data Tracks: Checked
 Regenerate Data Sectors: Checked
 Audio Read Settings
 Read Speed Audio: Max
 Audio Extraction Quality: Medium(Fast)
 Read Subchannel Data from Audio Tracks: Checked
 Only Read the First Session: Unchecked
 Error Handling
 Fast Error Skip Settings: Off
 Abort on Read Error: Off
 Don't Report Read Errors: Off
 Intelligent Bad Sector Scanner: Off
 After setting all that, click "Next".
8. Now you name your .ccd file. If you want to have a .cue sheet file, check the appropriate box for it.
9. CloneCD will now make your ISO, or Disc image. Grab something to eat while waiting, or browse for porn, or post at Emuforums, it's up to you.
10. Alright! that stupid clinkety-clink reminder has sounded... Reading has finished. Now get your original disc and put your blank in the tray and close it.
11. Click the "Write from Image file" Button (the one with the pencil)
12. Browse for your file. You can also make the program to delete the image file after a successful burn, just check the appropriate box. Click on Next.
13. Choose the CDRW drive. Click Next.
14. You'll now see a set of profiles for writing. You'll also see the write profile you made earlier, but it's not yet set. Input the following settings:

Write Settings

Write Speed: 4x (yes, 4x)

Weak Sectors: Ignore

Don't Repair Subchannel Data: Checked

Always close last session: Checked

15. Click on Ok. The write session will now start. This will take 20 minutes. Tell me if this is the truth! I have many SHMUPs to play on my LCD TV. Zaniac X Zaniac is $300 and Raiden DX is $100.

Discussion about fallout in PDF here! (2009-02-13 20:45)

Lets talk about what's in it even though it don't matter. I'm bored.

We're running out of Rich People. Ahhh. The end is near! (2009-02-14 15:47)

Margaret Thatcher (former conservative party UK Prime Minister) once said:

"The problem with socialism is that you eventually run out of other people's money."

Senator Bachmann says our very own country is running out of people to tax with a joint income of $100,000+. Maybe Obama should quick do Reaganomics, but he is so insane in charisma and wanting to tell us how bad off we are that we're running out of rich people to tax. Good thing I am not a democrat. We have Glen Beck in our face.

Single Handedly took mega forum Politics Section Offline (2009-02-16 17:31)

Look at those liberal socialists (fucking Canadian poster modulates American politics forum)

After a good deal of time (a month or two) the staff have come to the conclusion to axe the Political section of the forum. Consideration took a few forms. The amount of problems we had to deal with from that area, and its overall necessity in a place like this. Long story short? We don't feel it has a place in this forum, we didn't like what the section had turned into and felt it needed to be shut down.

The staff welcome any topic political in nature if it has relevance to gaming or the entertainment industry. But much like religion it seems that the majority of people have a hard time discussing it maturely, without causing problems.

Thanks for understanding,

PS3Forums Staff. Karma you know is also repetition and karma comes from Buddhism. All the socialist are Buddhist these days. This literally equates to the more karma you have, the more socialist you are. And if you're way up there, then you're a communist! Commies are far left. It used to be the word karma instead of Reputation power.

I released the Wikipedia post as well as the Senator Senator Bachmann audio tape on and the liberals simply destroyed the evidence so we can never convert to conservative deontological attributes. The whole forum wants consequentialism attributes especially the Canadians. Oh yeah I also mentioned the Mexican cartels entering the southern states and that the military had to stand and protect us from them. We have to start sending guns to Pheneox, Arizona to fight these drug cartels. Ron Paul is discussing worse case scenarios if Mexico slowly collapse or if Mexico collapse quicker when there is a wave of illegals coming thru Texas. I mentioned this briefly in the Obama declares War thread. Then I gave them my Ice Police paper (without revealing my name of course)!

If money wasn't issue: Why skipping Geforce GTX 295 (2009-02-19 07:50)

We all know that money is always the issue so in the following paragraphs...money no issue.

The Geforce GTX 295 is especially two Geforce GTX 280s in SLI configuration in the same vein of Geforce 7950 GX2, Radeon 4870 X2, and Geforce 9800 GX2 (had one of those). With a Geforce GTX 280 SLI in my Core 2 Quad PC, 3584 MB of GDDR3 of both Geforce GTX 295 in SLI with 960 stream processors over 480 stream processors in my newest PC is nicer, but not worth the hype when all the games are especially DirectX 9.0c and the 2D apps don't yet have GPGPU support.

The Geforce GTX 280 SLI has quite the longevity. It'll get me to 2010 with Window and since DirectX 11 is backwards compatible with DX10 API, the DirectX 11 games will function somewhat at 1600x1200. GPUs are coming out like clockwork so the ideal GPU would be first or 2nd generation DirectX 11 Geforce. The difference between the Geforce GTX 280 SLI and Geforce GTX 295 SLI is similar to what you achieve with a 2006 Chevy Siverado vs. 2009 Chevy Siverado. The Geforce GTX 300+ is like a Chevy Siverado hybrid and new grill styling. The PC games are sort of levelling out this in 2009, no spikes in performance as in the first five years of the 21st century. Fear 2: Project Origin could run on my Dell Demension XPS from 2003 if it had too and if not that...a older Athlon 64 X2 4800, 3 GB DDR2, and a obsolete Geforce 8800 GTX OC2.

With PC game industry going having their own recession, nobody is investing in new game engines. FEAR 2 is still using the Lithtech: Jupiter EX from the original FEAR in 2005. It got a 7.0 in gameplay so i am not looking as forward to it as maybe console games. There is an updated list in the March 2k8 archive in case I get too Japanese for your taste and scare you away or something...

Speaking of Japanese, guess what? Only 5 Wii games.

MP3 is bandwidth hazard....do something new (2009-02-20 01:56)

I went to cheapass gamer, IGN, Gamespot, and Whitehouse.gov and they all have like 64 kbps *.mp3 files which is pretty pissing me off. Listen, I have a really bad connection and why not free AAC, because FAAC is free! Why not use it? You can get it down to 24 kbps. For example, if I were to download Cheapass gamer CAGcast, it would be 48 MB!

If that was 1 hour long, it would be at 80 kbps or 30 minutes at 160 kbps. If you're afraid of breaking copyright, then there is still 32 kbps Aotuv Vorbis 5.7! CDex is the application for Vorbis. Firefox 3.1, Opera 10, and IE8 has Vorbis built-in

New Horizons probe searching for Nibiru (2009-02-21 15:32)

The New Horizons is a reconnaissance deep space probe launch in 01/2006 with a high-end 1 Gigapixel camera to do what Viking II did. It's primary task is to find the Saturn-sized planet Nibiru in the Kuiper belt. It's secondary mission is to take first close up of Pluto so they can put those pics in textbooks and Wikipedia by 2015. It carries a radiation reactor (supposedly there are infinite atoms floating in space to split). Also it comes with a repeater module to relay the signal back to Earth once near out of range. The reactor can last 35-40 years as it is similar to other Generation III+ nuclear reactors. Nibiru orbits around something gives off heat (ie a star not visible) with a different orbit so it might/might not have oxygen and plant life.

Smells like PS3 Homebrew (2009-02-26 19:32)

Recently, a guy called Tcraw77813, the essential aspect of PS3 has been uncovered. From a stolen encryption arthium has been broken, something better than NES (Nintendo Entertainment System) may be ran on PS3, because the homebrew crew knows now it's SHA1-4096+AES. Wii encryption is only SHA-128-AES.

Think of how many consoles emulators they can port to PS3

FCUltra

SNES9x

NeoRage X

Gens

1964

Virtual Boy Advance

EPSXE

MAME

UAE (Amiga for Linux)

Magic Engine

Saturnin

Exciting Virtual Console for the Playstation. Since 2004, I've been using Action Replay Max Evo Edition to run SNESstation and Pgen on PS2.

The homebrew programmers need to make a modchip emulator and front end for me!

PS3 & Xbox 360 getting "Sega 32x" would make next gen a lot cheaper (2009-02-28 02:54)

Remember the Sega 32x which coupled two Hitachi SH1 32-bit CPU at 23 MHz with Genesis? Should that ideology work for current gen consoles? PS4 and Xbox 720 are coming out in 2011 with DirectX 11-like GFX.

I believe In 2010, either Xbox 360 and PS3 need an hardware addon with another R600 or G84 GPU core and extra 128 MB GDDR3. With this enhancement, Sony can expand to Open GL 3.0 Graphics and it will be a lot cheaper than purchasing a PS4 to do DirectX 11-like. Otherwise you can make them really cheap and have them as a pass thru device with only the new GPU chip and no memory. It'll use all USB ports to get adiquet speed. We don't need them anyways.

Both of these would likely be less expensive and at the same time actually look next generation anyways.

PS2 Slim only took four years, and PS3 slim took only 3 years. It will only make this MP4 viewer cheaper. Great for people who like DirectX 9 graphics. The XDR1 RAM is outdated, the CPU and GPUs are like 45 in fabrication, and 14 companies manufacturer blue laser diodes. United States going to be Internationally controlled by European IMF (2009-03-30 18:37)

The European Union is going to control the US Government and FCC after the G20 meeting in London, England. President Obama will no longer be the Head of State, a IMF head of state will be replacing him and Nancy Pelosi and a Tim Guidner.

Boycott the government while you still can under the US Constitution. Leaked news source. The Europeans are putting America under international authority.

Check the March 30, 2009 episode of Hannity on Fox News Channel.

We can't wait until tax day for those huge Tea Parties that are ready to go all out. Sooner than later. I don't think the Europeans will keep our economy capitalist and free market without smiley face fascism in the long run.

New US Head of State? A French socialist politician named Dominique Stauss-Kahn

Do Tea Parties just because of World government conspiracy. (2009-03-31 20:14)

If we don't organize into tea parties right now our US dollar will be replaced by a international dollar and we will no longer be the World Bank. And it's happening to the G20 summit. They all are trying to make us socialist so nobody can be capitalist. Why? Because they don't want us to have freedom. They want us to be little gullible androids. It is a conspiracy. Obama is the son of a  letting it happen. Do the tea party thing or we'll be the People's Republic of America. The head of State will not have any power, because all the laws are governed by the United Nations with lots of socialist leaders. Teh US President will be a Puppet figure. It'll be like the Majestic 12 or Big Brother. IT'S A WORLD GOVERNMENT CONSPIRACY! TEA PARTY TIME! 2010 the US Constitution no longer relevant. Most people on this forum are socialist and don't want the United States to be sovereignty and doesn't want you to do tea parties. Get with it.

Europeans are all vampire suckers...suck the trillions right out of you! And its done then we're like Russia in the 1990s...depression and GDP is crap! Like we're spending Stop the crazy spendings bills....they're the problems

New mp3 player (2009-04-03 04:24)

The idea dawned on me when Obama sent the Queen of England an Ipod Photo with him uploaded on it. So I got a 40 GB mp3 player for $50 on ebay. It is cheap, because I bought a 20 GB Zen Touch 4 years ago for 4 times that much and it still works. I got 2400 songs on there encoded in LAME 3.98 alpha6 (mp3 in 2006) at 64 kbps VBR. I also have an old Archoes Jukebox 20 Recorder with LAME 3.98 alpha6 at 64 kbps VBR with a proximately same amount of music. Haven't used it since February 2008. I used Mr. Questionman to get that information

Aliens in Human shells (2009-04-04 19:11)

Why do UFO proponents, "contactees," "abductees" and other supporters always seem to depict their aliens as humanoid? Why are they insistent that these alleged life-forms follow the human body-plan?

This goes against our understanding of science and all current biological models of how life evolved on earth, let alone other worlds. Even if the entire process of evolution on earth were re-simulated with all of the original parameters of biological genesis in place, we still wouldn't come out looking the same. So why would a visitor from an alien world look like us?

It's a near guarantee that they wouldn't.

Let me give you one example (out of possible billions:)

Let's start with a world that could serve as a location for our hypothetical biosphere. It's a low-gravity, Titan-like moon with an upper atmosphere saturated in energy rich polymers powered by the radiation and magnetic fields of the central planet. These gradually filter down various strata where assorted types of hunter-gatherer clades develop alongside other more stationary biota. The entire pace of life is incredibly slow and almost frozen in comparison to our earth-like perception of time. Things live for extraordinarily long periods, and evolution itself takes a virtual eternity to run its course.

Eventually, a sentient race emerges. Their biochemistry is based on liquid hydrocarbons, fullerenes, ammonia and nitrogen causing them to appear as a very large and bizarre crab-like or spider-like configuration that only vaguely resembles anything that we could recognize. They move and function so slowly that they can barely be perceived to be living things at all. Their senses are not visual or aural - instead, relying predominantly on sonar-like transmission and detection. (This means no written language or art, but instead similar concepts being employed with geometric configurations and textures conveying the equivalent.)

These beings become the dominant species of the planet and go on to discover space exploration after millions and millions of years of slow advancement.

Incidentally, long distance or sub-relativistic journeys would not be a problem for this species as the passage of time is not really an issue considering their pace of life and perception. Traveling to a distant star system would be no more strenuous to them than sending someone to the moon is for us. Their technology would be based on cryobiology, developed from low-temperature life feeding on Titan-like or Kuiper-belt environments and growing the necessary structures out of polymers, ice and frozen gas. So, basically some VERY exotic stuff. They prefer to compile constructs in orbit or on dead, moon-like worlds without atmospheres.

Their technology, aesthetics, psychology and even architecture would be absolutely mind-bending to behold. If their machinery were put before a population of human beings for examination, almost nothing useful could be extracted from them aside from the fact that they would be quite obviously "alien." Their 'ships' and other components melt, explode or "die" when exposed to earth temperatures and pressures and any 'probes' sent to earth would have to be "custom-made" to adhere to our planet's physical constraints. Their behaviors and methods of construction would be a profoundly disturbing sight to anyone first attempting to make sense out of them, and communication or any relative attempts at contact would be extremely difficult requiring a number of years of careful study.

And that is just ONE example of ONE type of world that life could develop on.

This does not take into account how gaseous, Jovian life would develop if it became sentient. (But it's probably safe to say that they'd probably make the guys I just described look pretty normal in comparison.)

My point is this: Considering the possibilities of life in the universe, how intelligent life developed on earth, and how the mechanism of evolution itself works - the idea of humanoid aliens is absurd.

I can understand what you mean by not look like us, but what I'm trying to point out here is that the mentality is also key to the way that life-forms will look in some respects..

If we take basic logic here and say ok we have 2 planets both are identical! and we let them fester... the same things that happen on one would not in fact happen on the other at the same time "number of factors" wind rain geology ect"..

In fact you could have 2 planets with the exact same thing and one may never have life on it and the other one will.. why is this? because in order for life to happen it must be planned...!!

Now if we scale this up to our universe.. the amount of earthlike planets are good a lot in fact, will like take hold on one of them "well we know that for sure because we are here" would life on that planet evolve humans from the very first spark "well we know for sure it can because we are here" now if we take into account what the earth is made from ect we can say that any earth like planet would hold a good chance of making the same stuff on it.. Tho we don't know the chances of it actually making humans because of meteor impacts ect... but the "basic" blocks are there that give the "chance for it" to happen just like it did on earth and with that world called infinity you can bet your bottom dollar it's happen a lot!!!

Now would aliens look like us from a planet that is not the same "lets say jupiter" well no way would it look close, infact nothing on the planet would come close to any alien that resided on jupiter.. would it have intelegence? well if life is there then the possiblity of it getting or making intelegence is 1 because we have life "prerequisist ofc"...

So with that i can firmly say yes other aliens do stand a very good chance of looking like the way we do.. and some will not "they are the ones who may not visit" infact i find it hard to imagen why they would bother...

now another thing also is Bactira, there is a good possiblity of GIANT bactira aswell that live in the skys of planets.. just like the pretty worms we see floating about in ours, i dont think like is limited to only planets i can imagen life living in space aswell...

dont ask my what the hell it would look like lol but the place in witch we live is VERY odd indeed, we should know this because we are here!! that is odd on its own dont you think.

maybe the aliens are humanoid because that's the most common genetic blueprint for sentient beings. we cannot say for sure because we clearly do not know, so assuming its not is just ignorant (or disinfo).

humanoids have five appendages that extrude from our core; head, two arms, two legs. we have five fingers, and five toes on each hand/foot. makes sense to me. why would a sentient being have three legs and one arm? because that's illogical. i also don't don't know for sure, and neither do you.

so im going to go ahead and believe the eye witnesses over your opinion, which is just an opinion with no evidence to back your claims.

And the Cyber Cold War rages on.... (2009-04-04 19:42)

President Obama has done nothing to straighten up military forces especially Air Force Space Command (aka has USAF Cyber command) on the grim situation that China and Russia now know our entire power grid infrastructure and may use blackouts as social engineering for their defense. So far the trojans/logic bombs haven't done any collateral damage as it has a remote control fuse it seems. The President has been overly cowardly to not bring up this concern as he is too busy trying to make friends with the Europeans. China and Russia have this Asian pact where they give us Intelligence on terrorism, but they make up their loss of sheer political power in the cyber cold war it seems. It could be a social engineering game of cat and mouse with blackouts as severe as the Northeast Blackout of 2003 (caused by UNIX glitch which put the plant into safe mode).

The recent news about GhostNet, the suspected cyber espionage activity of the Chinese government uncovered by The Information Warfare Monitor is alarming news, to say the least. More than a thousand computers have been compromised with apparent ease, many in high-value secure government offices. Researchers revealed that the compromises were so sophisticated, that confidential documents were removed, video cameras and microphones turned on to observe events, and sophisticated key-loggers tracked everything that was typed. According to two of my sources well-placed in government and computer security, this is just the frightening tip of an enormous iceberg. Many will recall my report on the FBI's concern about counterfeit network router hardware being installed in businesses and government agencies all across the nation. Many were concerned that the counterfeit routers contained code that allowed for a broad range of back-doors into secure computer systems, as well as covert kill-switches that would shut-down after receiving a remote signal. Indeed, several analysts found thousands of additional lines of machine code as compared to a non-counterfeit. Since the counterfeit hardware originated in China, the FBI was very concerned, so much so that they responded to my report.

Our work here, together on abovetopsecret, broke that important story to the world.

I've recently spoken to two well-placed computer security experts who firmly believe there is a frightening connection between GhostNet and the counterfeit routers. Their fear is that we are mere months away from a series of significant cyber attacks on key private sector businesses and portions of our infrastructure.

My first contact is a highly experienced computer security expert who often works directly with law enforcement and intelligence agencies. Asking for my assurances of complete confidence in his anonymity, he revealed that there is a great deal of concern, both among his IT counterparts and security experts within law enforcement, that GhostNet is a sophisticated reconnaissance system designed to locate the counterfeit routers. Many are speculating that the gHost RAT trojan (delivered via email and has been in broad use for months) may be triggered by recognizing key attributes of the counterfeit routers, and reports back the details of the exploitable network.

Experts are concerned that the number of infected systems discovered by The Information Warfare Monitor may very well be a tiny percentage of networks that are known to be exploitable, but not yet infected. GhostNet is cataloging potential networks and refining the cyber weapons for the next round of attacks. The activity seen thus far has been proof-of-concept tests of computer take-over software in preparation for larger-scale attacks – a weapons test if you will.

My second contact is an IT manager at a large financial products company who tracked down and replaced a number of counterfeit routers in their network. As their internal security team examined all systems connected to the removed routers, he was alarmed at their findings. Nearly all of the Windows-based computer systems connected to the routers contained some form of malware. In comparison to other Windows computers on their network, only 10-20 % on average had any type of malware. He cautioned that all of the systems on the counterfeit routers were new systems in public-facing installations (branch offices), and a higher-than normal infection rate was expected. However, the 100 % infection-rate was unusual.

Both of these computer security professionals are increasingly concerned about the convergence of these two items that appear to point back to either the Chinese government, or Chinese state-sponsored cyber criminals. The report from Information Warfare Monitor stops short of specifically naming the Chinese government, or intelligence agencies within the government, as the culprit of these attacks. However, we do know that their intelligence agencies and law enforcement units have acted upon information obtained through GhostNet.

My contacts feel we (western nations) are mere months away from the second, more serious wave, of attacks designed to harm key corporations and interrupt vital infrastructure. The hope is that GhostNet is a tool of cyber criminals – after all, if that is the case, we're safe, no criminal would cripple the networks that provide their bounty. What worries them most, however, is the combination of our complete lack of preparation (the U.S. DHS cyber security division is a joke), the stunning sophistication and multi-tiered nature of these attacks, and the disturbing potential connection to the Chinese government. To be clear, they feel a second wave of attacks are not likely to be a national disaster that cripples the nation, that may be reserved for the third wave.

The conspiracy theorist in me observes a number of causes for concern.

- (1) - The mainstream press appears to be working hard to spike or avoid any connection of GhostNet back to the counterfeit router issue.
- (2) - The media, especially US-based media, is typically over-playing the "hacker criminal" aspect of this story so as to avoid concern over state-sponsored cyber warfare – they know we (western nations) are at a disadvantage.
- (3) - The Chinese government has recently made a great deal of noise voicing concern over the US dollar and the need for a global currency. Causing harm to the US infrastructure through a well-placed cyber attack may significantly weaken the dollar and hasten their financial agenda.
- (4) - After all that has happened after September, 2001, especially the increase in sophisticated Internet attacks as well as known state-sponsored cyber terrorism, why has the government let us down?

These developments indicate the Internet equivalent of the 9/11 attacks may very well be on the horizon. And again, we are not only not ready, we're completely clueless

Tea Party Grows (2009-04-06 06:38)

Seattle on Monday. Denver on Tuesday. Mesa AZ on Wednesday. Overland Park, Kansas today. What a week, huh? We got the anti-stimulus, anti-entitlement protest ball rolling — and now the movement, spurred further by CNBC host Rick Santelli's call for a "Chicago Tea Party," is really taking off.

David Hogberg at Investor's Business Daily has a nice piece out today spotlighting the growing taxpayer revolt the rest of the MSM won't cover. He interviewed our registered commenters Liberty Belle Keli Carender, who spearheaded the Seattle anti-pork protest, and HuskerGirl Amanda Grosserode, who organized today's anti-stimulus demonstration against Democrat Rep. Dennis Moore in Overland Park, KS.

I'm happy to report on several new protest events now on the docket.

My friend Michael Patrick Leahy of Top Conservatives on Twitter and his crew are spearheading "simultaneous local tea parties around the country, beginning in Chicago, and including Washington DC, Fayetteville NC, San Diego CA, Omaha Nebraska, and dozens of other locations" for next Friday.

Time: February 27, 2009 from 12pm to 1pm

Location: Chicago, Washington DC, other cities, Twitter

Go to OfficialChicagoTeaParty.com for all the info.

Co-sponsors of the events with #TCOT include #DONTGO, Smart Girl Politics, Americans for Tax Reform, Heartland Institute, and American Spectator Magazine. The tea parties will be "simultweeted" with the hashtag #teaparty. You can find me tweeting here.

There's a Facebook page here for the DC Tea Party. I hear that PJTV will also be stepping up to the plate.

If you are in the Dallas/Fort Worth area, reader Mark Christopher Frimmel has come forward to put a Tea Party '09 event together. He put up an ad on Dallas Craigslist, has contacted local radio and TV, and wants you to be there. The protest will be held on the outside stage at The Cowtown Bar & Grill on Friday, Feb. 27, from 3pm to 7pm, located at 7108 Camp Bowie Blvd Fort Worth, TX. Music, food, and great fiscal conservative company guaranteed.

Are you in Georgia? Reader Patrick e-mails that he's "getting a tax protest off the ground in Atlanta. I'd appreciate it if you'd pass on the word. The blog is <http://atlantataxprotest.blogspot.com>." He needs your help. Calling Neal Boortz!

Here's a snippet from Hogberg's IBD piece to get your motors running:

As unemployment soars and anger over Wall Street bailouts mounts, public outrage will seek an outlet. Populism could go in many directions — and could easily ebb when the economy revives. But if it takes shape as an anti-spending movement, it could revive conservatives much as the 1970s tax protests did.

To be sure, the protest sizes so far are a far cry from the left's anti-globalization and anti-war demonstrations of the past decade. But they appear to have grass-roots origins. The organizer of the Kansas protest, Amanda Grosserode, calls herself a home-schooling mom who is "fed up" with the spending in Washington. She has been a member of Fair Tax Kansas City since last fall.

"My husband and I were feeling frustrated that the stimulus had passed with very little debate and no one had read it," she told IBD. "I said, 'We need to do something.' " She began contacting family and friends, and eventually received attention via Fair Tax Kansas City and local talk radio.

Grosserode received considerably more publicity after e-mailing popular conservative commentator and blogger Michelle Malkin.

"I think the taxpayer revolt is the new counterculture," said Malkin, who has been publicizing the protests on her blog. "People want to stand up and say, 'Hey, I'm paying for that, I do not support that.' "

Brendan Steinhauser has a terrific set of detailed tips on how to organize your own tea party protest.

Don't wait for someone else to do it.

Don't make excuses.

Don't think you can pull one off because you've never done it before? Look at mom-bloggers Liberty Belle and HuskerGirl.

Yes, you can!

I've put together a playlist of tunes for Tea Party USA — and several parodies submitted by commenters and readers. Bailoutmania is apparently bringing out the songwriters in you, too.

I made this up as I watch[ed] the ridiculous, sad, terrifying vote on the Stimulus Package! Thanks for your good work on covering it all!

Sing to "American Pie"

A long, long time ago...

we can still remember

How Ronald Regan made us smile.

And we knew if we had a chance

we could make those Democrats dance

And, surely we'd be happy for a while.

But this February should makes us shiver

With every promise Nancy delivers.

Bad stimulus on the doorstep;

We shouldn't take one more step.

We will remember when we cried

As we read Harry's big fat lies,

But something is foul deep inside

The day responsibility died.

So bye-bye, to our kids piece of the pie.

Obama Drives us to the brink, will leave us all high and dry.

Coburn and the boys were tryin' all they could think

Singin', "You're making our economy die.

you've taken our kid's piece of the pie."

Can we still trust in our gov,

We will need our faith in God above,

If we want to make them go.

Do we believe in principles,

Can we be saved from those liberals,

And can Mitch and John keep their troops in tow?

Well, the Unions are in love with them

'cause they read the same liberal hymn.

They change all the rules.

Now we got those stimulus blues.

We'll end up lonely and without a buck

Just a Green job and a hybrid truck,

Right now, we are out of luck

The day responsibility died.

We started singing,

"bye-bye, our kid's piece of the pie."

Obama drives us to the brink,

will leave us all be high and dry.

Coburn and the boys trying all they could think singing "You're making our economy die.

you've taken our kid's piece of the pie."

Now for two months we've been on our own

Ried, Nancy and Obama have clearly shown,

Their way is how it's gonna be.

They're jesters, jokes and drama queens,
Throwin' cash around like they're seventeen
Not listening to the voice of you and me,

And while they read a book of Marx,
We praise Friedman in the dark
The day responsibility died.

We were singing,
"bye-bye, our kids' piece of the pie."
Obama drives us to the brink,
will leave us high and dry.
Coburn and the boys were tryin' all they could think singin, " You're making our economy die.
you've taken our kid's piece of the pie."

But we can not sign the blues
We will work for happy news,
Freedom is 21 months away.
We must go to the roof and shout "no more,"
Like we did 15 years before,
It is time to put an end to the Lib's day.

For today believers in responsibility screamed,
Conservatives cried, But we still will dream.
Loud words must be spoken;
"Our Liberal government is broken."
And three men to whom we could turn:
Pawlenty, Jindal and Coburn,
From their leadership we can surely learn.

Today, responsibility died.

'Til then we will be singing:
"bye-bye, our kid's piece of the pie."
Obama drives us to the brink,
will leave us all be high and dry.
Coburn and the boys were trying all they could think singing "You're making our economy die.
you've taken our kid's piece of the pie."

Oh Barry, wont you buy me a Mercedes Benz ?
My friends all drive Porsches, I must make amends.
Worked hard all my lifetime, no help from my friends,
So lord, wont you buy me a Mercedes Benz ?

Oh Mr. President, wont you buy me a color tv ?
Dialing for dollars is trying to find me.
I wait for delivery each day until three,
So oh Barry, wont you buy me a color tv ?

Oh Messiah, wont you buy me a night on the town ?
 Im counting on you, Messiah, please dont let me down.
 Prove that you love me and buy the next round,
 Oh Messiah, wont you buy me a night on the town ?

Reader Barry e-mails:

I wrote this parody of "Dixie" to protest the socialistic programs hidden in the stimulus bill...

NIX-FREE VS. FIX-ME LAND

I wish I was in the land of bought 'n'
 Sold; times there were not so rotten.
 Congress say, no delay, take away Nix-free land.
 In Nix-free land that I was born in,
 Clearly I was not forlorn in,
 Made my way, saved my pay, had a say, Nix-free land.

Chorus:

Now I wish I was in Nix-free like yesterday!
 In Nix-free land I took my stand to live and vie in Nix-free.
 Could pray or stray with wayward mouth un-P.C.
 If they hold sway, they'll stay my mouth from D.C.

Obama's massive bill was eager;
 Billions cost but jobs were meager.
 Cooked entree books flambe, took away Nix-free land.
 Just try to get your arms around it;
 Miles of paper haven't yet bound it.
 Ev'ry way, give-away, to create Fix-me land. (Chorus)

Our bucks he takes and brings to scatter;
 Makes you mad but it doesn't matter.
 Took away, won't repay, it's new day, Fix-me land.
 Then slow it down and hatch your babble;
 To Nix-free land we'll rouse the rabble,
 For the range of the change makes a strange Fix-me land. (Chorus)

And here's Woody Guthrie's remake of Tom Paxton's "I am changing my name to Chrysler," which he updated to "I am changing my name to Fannie Mae."

[EMBED]

Oh the price of gold is rising out of sight
 And the dollar is in sorry shape tonight
 What the dollar used to get us now won't buy a head of lettuce
 No the economic forecast isn't right
 But amidst the clouds I spot a shining ray
 I can even glimpse a new and better way
 And I've devised a plan of action worked it down to the last fraction
 And I'm going into action here today

CHORUS:

I am changing my name to Fannie Mae

I am going down to Washington D.C.
I'll be glad they got my back 'Cause what they did for Freddie Mac
Will be perfectly acceptable to me
I am changing my name to Fannie Mae
I am headed for that great receiving line
So when they hand a trillion grand out
I'll be standing with my hand out
I'll get mine

When my creditors are screaming for their dough
I'll be proud to tell them all where they can go
They won't have to scream and holler
They'll be paid to the last dollar
Where the endless streams of money seem to flow
I'll be glad to tell them all what they can do
It's a matter of a simple form or two
It's not just remuneration it's a liberal education
Ain't you kind of glad that I'm in debt to you

Chorus

Since the first amphibians crawled out of the slime (of the slime!)
We've been struggling in an unrelenting climb
We were hardly up and walking before money started talking
And it's sad that failure is an awful crime
It's been that way for a millennium or two
But now it seems that there's a different point of view
If you're a corporate titanic and your failure is gigantic Down in Congress there's a safety net for you

Chorus

Rock on.

SHMUPS (2009-04-10 21:35)

I downloaded some Saturn SHMUPS after playing Radiant Silvergun including Donpachi, Dodonpachi, Soukyugurenta (Terra Diver in United States), and Battle Garegga off Megaupload. Track 5 of Battle Garegga is great. You can play these games in your CD Player, because they're red book WAV! I have it 'modded' for open region play. The best looking one is Radiant silvergun, but Soukyugurenta comes in 2nd. DoDoPachi comes in 3rd place graphically. It's old school! I wanted to play more after Gradius V and R-type Final, because they're all pretty good.

Soukyugurenta story line

After exhausting the Earth's resources, particularly fossil fuel, innumerable trade companies team up with NASA and begin initiating space programs dedicated to finding resources outside the planet Earth. Mining facilities are established in different areas outside of Earth, particularly on large asteroids near the Moon and most especially on Mars. Various resources are found from these areas and distributed to Earth which aid in the world economy. The largest company that is established from this is the Jin-Sei (Exhausting Star) Corporation set in Japan which is worth 1 trillion in New Yen investments, founded by the Miama family.

However, after years of space resource distribution, the separate companies started initiating attacks that would dominate other company's resources. Coupled with this, eco-terrorism was on the rise as out-spoken ecosystem protectionism groups opposed the company's outsourcing of materials. The strongest of these attacks started on Martian colonies established by the second largest company on Earth, Eight Luck Interstellar Development Inc. which banded with smaller companies across Earth including ones in China, England and America. Eight Luck planned on claiming Mars for its own so as to monopolize on the outsourcing of minerals as well as developing terra-formed areas.

In response to these attacks, the Jin-Sei formed a union with the JSDF (known in the future as JDF) and began working on a space fighter program organized by the Defensive Section 2 of the JDF known as the Red Lotus Team (SOQ for short) which utilized a unique laser technology fighting system known as NALS (Non-blind spot All range Laser System) in combat.

Comprised of the best fighters adapted to this combat system as well as innumerable stamina strengthening tests for space travel, the SOQ are sent in to defend company territory from rival companies on Earth and space at all costs.

TR3-B 'Astra' (2009-04-16 12:41)

The TR3-B 'Astra' is a large triangular anti-gravity craft within the U.S. fleet. Black projects defense industry insider Edgar Rothschild Fouche wrote about the existence of the TR3-B in his book, Alien Rapture.

The TR3-B does not depend solely or principally on its hydrogen-oxygen rockets. It is a highly reduced-gravity aerospace craft manufactured in secret "black programs" by Humans. The antigravity field produced reduces the vehicles weight by about 90 % so that very little thrust is required to either keep it aloft or to propel it at Mach 9 speeds, or higher.

The TR-3B vehicle's outer coating is electro-chemical reactive and changes with electrical RF Radar stimulation and can change reflectiveness, radar absorptiveness, and color. This is also the first US vehicle to use quasi-crystals in the vehicle's skin. This polymer skin, when used in conjunction with the TR-3Bs Electronic Counter Measures and, ECCM, can make the vehicle look like a small aircraft, or a flying cylinder - or even trick radar receivers into falsely detecting a variety of aircraft, no aircraft, or several aircraft at various locations.

A circular, plasma filled accelerator ring called the Magnetic Field Disrupter, surrounds the rotatable crew compartment and is far ahead of any imaginable technology. Sandia and Livermore laboratories developed the reverse engineered MFD technology. The plasma, mercury based, is pressurized at 250,000 atmospheres at a temperature of 150 degrees Kelvin, and accelerated to 50,000 rpm to create a super-conductive plasma with the resulting gravity disruption [reduction of almost all of the pull of gravity and effects of inertia].

The MFD generates a magnetic vortex field, which disrupts or neutralizes the effects of gravity on mass within proximity, by 89 percent. The MFD creates a disruption of the Earth's gravitational field upon the mass within the circular accelerator. The mass of the circular accelerator and all mass within the accelerator, such as the crew capsule, avionics, MFD systems, fuels, crew environmental systems, and the nuclear reactor, are reduced by 89 %. The current MFD in the TR-3B causes the effect of making the vehicle extremely light, and able to outperform and outmaneuver any craft yet constructed - except, of course, those back-engineered total-antigravity craft which the government does not admit exist. To see the 13 known antigravity craft of US manufacture

The TR-3B is a high altitude, stealth, reconnaissance platform with an indefinite loiter time. Once you get it up there at speed, it doesn't take much propulsion to maintain altitude.

With the vehicle mass reduced by 89 % the craft can travel at Mach 9, vertically or horizontally. My sources say the performance is limited only the stresses that the human pilots can endure. Which is a lot, really, considering along with the 89 % reduction in mass, the G forces are also reduced by 89 %. The crew of the TR-3B should be able to comfortably take up to 40Gs.

The TR-3Bs propulsion is provided by 3 multimode thrusters mounted at each bottom corner of the triangular platform. The TR-3 is a sub-Mach 9 vehicle until it reaches altitudes above 120,000 feet - then who knows how fast it can go!

The reactor heats the liquid hydrogen and injects liquid oxygen in the supersonic nozzle, so that the hydrogen burns concurrently in the liquid oxygen afterburner. The multimode propulsion system can operate in the atmosphere, with thrust provided by the nuclear reactor, in the upper atmosphere, with hydrogen propulsion, and in orbit, with the combined hydrogen/oxygen propulsion. The engines are reportedly built by Rockwell.

3 stages of Antigravity fields. (2009-04-21 14:05)

The most primitive antigravity technology is electrogravitic. This involves using voltages in the millions of volts to disrupt the ambient gravitational field. This results in an 89 % reduction in gravity's hold on airframes in such vehicles as the B-2 Stealth Bomber and the TR3-B Astra triangular craft. And given the considerable ambient ionization field I observed around the X-22A, it is reasonable to assume that extreme-voltage electrogravitics is also employed with these craft.

The next level up of sophistication is magnetogravitic. This involves generating high-energy toroidal fields spun at incredible rpm's, which also disrupts the ambient gravitational field, indeed to the extent that a counterforce to Earth's gravitational pull is generated. The early British aeronautical engineers called this dynamic counterbary. This may have been used in some earlier American saucers and prototypes, but I have only been told that the secret Nautilus spacefaring craft uses magnetic pulsing, which appears to utilize this technology.

The third level of sophistication, that used in the more modern American antigravity craft, is direct generation and harnessing of the gravitational strong force. Such a strong-force field extends slightly beyond the atomic nucleus of Element 115, an exotic element donated by Star Visitor scientist-consultants to human scientists at S-4, a secret base south of Area 51. By amplifying that exposed gravitational strong force, and using antimatter reactor high energy, and then directing it, it is possible to lift a craft from the Earth and then change directions by vectoring the shaped antigravity force field thus generated. Important information about this third technology is available on Bob Lazar's website. (1) This information is also described on the Bob Lazar video. Lazar worked on extraterrestrial technology at Los Alamos National Laboratory, and Area 51's Site S-4. (2)

Instructor gave me a 114% for being a libertarian in Business Ethics:Test Answers (2009-04-22 14:16)

Example of how Socialism will run out of rich people's money and leave UK bankrupted (Gordon's fault) and why capitalism is the best platform ever made. Most people wish they were us obviously so they attack us. And that constitution for the rest of the world and not the American people ideology is more stupid than the libertarian view. I can see through it. Republicans know what libertarians are good for the country and the President's Cabinet has no libertarians. Libertarians actually know that they're doing. Rein Capitalism in Germany, works, 3rd largest economy in the world.. Libertarians run amuck ...awesome example. I got 100 % on this assignment which is about the fraud ponzi schemes. deontelelogy...not totalitarian views work better.

Today businesses operate in a very complex world; whereby, decisions they make today may have repercussions on changes they need tomorrow. The fact is the world is changing and so are ethical issues. I believe ethical training starts with our youth; where the family and experiences we encounter along the way, provides us with our values; however, our values are only an imprint on us. In the business world, our value imprint takes on another dimension that revolves on ethical standards in the parameter of business. A business ethics program provides a business person with a foundation or decision-making process to identify ethical issues which he/she may face. It also provides the business person with avenues or approaches he/she would take to resolve those issues. In other words, knowledge on ethical issues helps one identify, analyze and resolve ethical issues while promoting ones ethical behavior. An example would be social engineering involving computers. A representative who says he is an outsourced IT repair person and asks for PC specs so he can fix the network problem. The issue taking place here is social engineering; whereby, an attack that relies on deception in order to access a system. The man representing himself as a technician only wants PC specs for unauthorized access to the system. To resolve this situation, the employee must divert the call to the IT center or a simple "no" response would also do the job. Essentially what the employee did for the company was to prevent a breach in business's computer system and comply with the company's policy which says any person who performs system analysis must be redirected to the Information Technology employee in order to prevent phishing. This employee also protected the company from losing the customer's trust which would have a great impact on the company itself.

An ethical business environment needs to have trust established from top management down to every aspect of company's stakeholders. The company should have a pulsating message which encompasses the concept of integrity and honesty that not only provides the benefits for the company, but also for their stakeholders and society as well. Enforcing a positive ethical culture will do the following: Improve day to day operation, increases employee commitment, promotes investors' loyalty through dependability, trust and commitment, and lastly it provides a better profitable picture while establishing a relationship with society. Why study Ethics? An important reason is a good ethical program can enable a business person to make a ethical 'right' choice instead of an unethical 'wrong' choice when confronting an ethical issue and embraces the ideology that the person is responsible for his/her actions which can have an ethical or legal impact on their company as well on how the society views the organization. Another impact on why to study ethics is that it also provides the business person knowledge in order to cope between our personal values and the values of the company.

A stakeholder is anyone who may have a stake or claim in a company, products, operations, markets, industry and outcome. Stakeholders have the ability to influence a company as well as a company has the capability to influence them. Stakeholders can apply their values and standards to many complex ethical issues such as: 1.) working conditions for example health and safety issues, wage issues, sexual discrimination issues. 2.) Consumer rights and product safety, where there may be an issue with safety and quality of a product; where products are recalled or how a customers complaint is handled; therefore, is there a procedure in answering complaints. 3.) Environmental conservation where the issue could be that the company isn't recycling enough or how they are managing their waste or use of electricity that supplies the company. These issues may directly or indirectly affect individual stakeholder's own interests. The company has to maintain a continual open relationship with the stakeholders. Stakeholders can provide resources that give weight to a company's long term success. These tangible or intangible resources are as following: supply of capital from shareholders, materials resources or intangible knowledge from suppliers, revenue supplied by the customer who also may supply loyalty and good advertisement for the company, infrastructure that is provided by the community that the company resides in and the media which may promote a positive image for the company. Stakeholders encourage companies to be accountable, transparent and responsible in the company's day-to-day activities. These interactions between the company and its stakeholders cut both ways. Stakeholders have the ability to withdraw their support or resources and that gives them strength over a business by giving the company negative exposure through media source such as the news, podcast, or withdrawal of financial support.

There are two types of stakeholders that have influence on a company. Primary stakeholders have a direct impact on the viability of a company success which includes the following: employees, customers, investors, government regulatory bodies, community, suppliers, and shareholders. Secondary stakeholders engage with the company indirectly such as special interest groups (GreenPeace, National Labor Union), trade association (Aerospace Industries Association, Airports Council International - North America, American Society of Travel Agents, Nuclear Energy Institute), media (newspapers, radio, TV), and competitors (Pepsi vs. Coca-Cola, Intel vs. AMD, Microsoft vs. Nintendo)

A company, depending on its size, dictates who they believe is primary vs. secondary. Both primary and secondary stakeholders do have an impact on company's ethical decision making process. Corporate government

It should be a requirement for any organization to promote its positive attributes on a stakeholder and to curtail the negative impact. Rather than just thinking and serving the shareholder about profits and delivering profits, I believe businesses today should take a holistic view on how they conduct their businesses. They should also think about the employee, the customer, the supplier and even the environmental activist. The public is looking at a company more holistically; whereby, the character and the quality of the leadership provide more of an impact than the business itself. An example of this holistic view is Home Depot which promotes community volunteer work and provides pay supplements to any employee that goes into the military; whereby, any employee who spends time in the service will always have their job waiting for them when they return. Home Depot believes that is an investment and a responsibility to their employees. They also supplied building materials and volunteers to assist rebuilding the area destroyed by Hurricane Katrina. This company strategy involves the board, senior management, and the employees in the company. Their belief system is to give good will to society for it is just the right thing to do. Business ethical concerns should be part of their foundational values and incorporate their business strategy. Most companies have developed formal systems of accountability, oversight and control known as corporate governance. It is a check and balance system that limits employees and managers opportunities to deviate from policy and strategies and prevent unethical and illegal activities. It provides integrity to the corporate culture. Directors and officers of corporations are both fiduciaries for the shareholders. Their duty is to provide leadership in prudent decisions that prevent unethical conduct not only in themselves and employees of the organization.

There are four levels of social responsibility which are economic, legal, ethical, and philanthropic. Economic responsibility is to be profitable so in order to maximize the stake holder's wealth and value by providing jobs in the community and contributing goods and services for the economy. The next level is legal; whereby, the company establishes compliance to government law and regulations. The third level is ethical where the company follows standards for acceptable behavior as judged by the stakeholder. Finally, the fourth level is philanthropic where the company gives back to society.

Reputation can be the greatest asset to any company in order to sustain a relationship with its investors, consumers, financial analyst, media, and government watchdog groups. Their reputation is created by their actions, choices, and behavior that are consequentially viewed through the stake holder's eyes and to earn their trust. Oil companies may have a negative view by the public, because of the recent gas hikes that happen in the latter part of 2008. People believed they were 'price gouging' the public.

Ethical intensity is the importance of an ethical issue of the eyes of the individual or workgroup in the organization. It is personal, temporal in character to accommodate values, beliefs, needs, perception of a situation. Senior employees and executives have a major role in resolving ethical issue intensity, because they usually take a stance on ethical issues to control these ethical issues until it's a nonissue. The importance of this is unless individuals in a company share a common ground about issues. Top management can affect how an individual perceives an ethical issue. This can be done through rewarding or punishing unethical acts. Individual factors include education, age, and locus of control. It may be perceived that the higher education, the better judgment I have. This may be possible; however, I believe it is the exposure to ethical challenging decisions that make one capable of making a better ethical decision. Age can be a factor. How does one expect a younger employee to make a prudent decision without an experience employee's guidance? Locus of control is either external or internal. It is how one sees himself. External control, the person believes the events of their lives are from uncontrollable forces. In external control these people in this category are the followers. They believe that other situations that luck and chance and powerful people control them. People who use internal control believe their lives are controlled by their own effort and skill and that they influence their environment. The debate is who is more ethical? The followers or the person who forms his/her own destiny. An example is followers who follow the rules and code of conduct. Are they more ethical for decision making? Leadership. The person who forms their own destiny. The Independent. Is it possible that they reinforce the rules of conduct and provide a better decision making policy to enforce ethical standards? Will he/she believe he/she is above it all and believes he/she is entitled to his/her own needs vs. the company. The corporate culture and obedience to authority makes up the organization factors. Corporate culture can be defined as a set of values, beliefs, goals, norms, and a way of solving problems, the members of an organization share. It is the corporate culture of an organization that breeds ethics. It tells its members what the company's vision, values, and goals are and it incorporates policies and rules for ethical behavior in decision making. It also can be said that significant others or coworkers are the major forces in guiding employees in making either an ethical or unethical decisions or behavior in their day-to-day activities. When an employee sees other employees disrespecting rules or policy by getting away with it; is it possible that the employee will see the unethical display as acceptable? Another example is the environment that displays an ethical code of conduct and employees abiding by the rules and management enforcing these rules. The chances are the employee sees his company as more ethical; therefore, the culture improves the ethical standards and the employee is more compliant to those rules. The examples above also open the doors for opportunity factors. The question that needs to be asked regarding as opportunity is the companies' top management enforces the company's policies, rules, and formal codes to the workforce. If the answer is yes then I believe the chances of an employee becoming more ethical are great. Leadership is the answer to ethical conflicts and issues. Leaders need to believe in these vision or goals and they need to believe in their employee's ethical standing. Leaders needs to be ethical themselves and they need to provide good ethical decision making policies, rules, and formal codes and they are the ones that channel it down through managers, supervisors in order to enforce the codes. They also need to provide knowledge to all employees on what they expect from the employees. They are the enforces of the code. A good example would be an insurance adjuster taking bribes from a company that is breaking environmental codes and the adjuster allows them to do business by covering up evidence that could be harmful like chemical spill. If the knowledge of the insurance adjuster behavior is exposed, his or her company should terminate him, because he exhibit unethical behavior and good leadership should expect employees to abide by the rules.

Good leaders should be transparent and actively involved in all the organization's decision making. They should be role models for the organization values. They should have integrity and character in order to be good leaders. As I mentioned earlier in question 2, Home Depot is a good example where leadership has dictated excellent ethical decision making, because their leaders take on a holistic view and have a passion to do right.

5. Moral philosophies are guidelines to determine how conflicts and human interest is to be settled while optimizing mutual benefits for business people as they form business strategies and resolve ethical issues. It also refers to principles people use to decide what is right and what is wrong. Individuals learn decision making approaches through their cultural and social development. These values are dependent on the ability to think critically and accept responsibility for his/her decision. This includes economic value orientations where the act produces more value than its effort. Idealism is a philosophy that has special values of ideas and ideas are products of mind where it refers to a higher order of existence. Realism is a theory where a person is always guided by his/her own self interest. This theory believes that actions are self motivated have a tendency towards negative ethical decision making. Ethical decisions are guided in the workplace by the company's culture and are influenced by others such as co-workers and superiors. People usually don't think of their moral philosophies when making decisions; however, their moral philosophies can be interchanged depending on if they're making a decision in their personal life or in their job. Rules, personalities in the job, may promote an individual to change their moral philosophy to what is compatible in the work environment; where moral rights, fairness, justice, and common good come into play. A company's core values on how it is to make decisions will determine how the individual will use his/her moral philosophy. Most employees don't have the power to use their personal philosophies, because most of these decisions are formed in the complex work environment. An example of cognitive development is the Kohlberg's model which explains how people make different decisions in similar ethical situations dependent on the stage of moral development they're in. The following are the six cognitive moral development stages: 1.) Stage of punishment and obedience. This is the person's response to rules and labels of good and bad which is dependent on a person who has power. For example, a company that requires employees not to receive gifts from others because of their performance. A person may just deny the gift, because of company rules. Another person may take the gift, because he/she believes he/she can get by with it or there is no consequence. 2.) The stage of individual instrumental purpose and exchange is where an individual makes moral decisions based on fairness to him/her. It is a stage where rules and authority figures are no longer relevant. In the US, bribery is against the law; however, in another country such as Russia, bribery is a commonplace; therefore, an individual who wants to start up a company may believe in order to be successful; he will offer money to an official in order to get there. This may be unethical to United States standards; however, in other countries it is a part of entitlement. 3.) This is the stage of mutual interpersonal expectations, relationships, and conformity. In this stage the individual considers the well being of others; where the fairness to the individuals is one of the ethical motives. An example of this is a manufacturing job such as an auto worker where the middle manager obeys the goals of the company and the controls the work force in a fair way in order to achieve productivity. 4.) For the stage of social system and conscience management, the individual determines what duty to society is right due to his/her by respecting authority and maintaining social order. An example is security personnel monitoring a store via camera. They have a duty to protect the store, but they also have a duty to society in who monitors the dressing rooms. It usually is a female monitoring a female dressing room and a male monitoring a male dressing room. 5.) In the stage of prior rights, social contract or utility, the individual is concerned all with upholding the basic rights, values, and legal contracts of society. In this level, the business may promote ethics training for its employees in order to promote good ethical behavior and decision making, thereby, being responsible to society. The final stage is the stage of universal ethical principles which come into play. In this final stage, the individual believes there are inalienable rights which are universal in nature with consequence. A good example of this is Ford making a vehicle called a Pinto in the early 1970s. It had a manufacturing flaw that caused the gas tank to explode in rear-end collisions. This case would argue discontinuing this product, because the public has an inalienable right to life without the fear of injury due to this flaw. In this case, profit doesn't justify the continuation of manufacturing this vehicle.

There are two moral philosophies, teleology and deontology that one may use to evaluate activity of his or her ethical actions. Teleology is an act that is morally right if it produces some desired results. The consequentialist is a today's form of teleology which holds "the consequences whereby the end justifies the means." a particular action that forms a basis for any valid moral judgment for action; whereby, the weight given to the consequences and evaluating the rightness and wrongness of the action.

Egoism is the segment of teleology. Egoists believe that they should make decisions that maximize their own self interest. Their slogan is "Do whatever it takes to help one self." An excellent example of this is Bernie Madoff with his $50 billion dollar ponzi scheme.

Enlightened egoism is taking a long range prospective and allows for the well being of others although their own self interest remains paramount on the hierarchy tree. This category is where whistle blowers. Some whistle blowers report misconduct to the government regulatory agency in order to make themselves look as if he/she are caring people looking out for their company, when in fact they're looking for self interest. It's a double edged sword.

A Utilitarian is also concerned with consequences; however, the utilitarian searches for the greatest good for the greatest number of people. Utilitarian decision making relies on comparison to cost and benefits to all affected parties. A good example of a utilitarian is the animal rights group (PETA). PETA convinced Mobil, Texaco, Pennzoil, Shell and other oil companies to cover their exhaust stacks, after showing how millions birds and bats had become trapped in the shafts and burned to death.

Rule utilitarianism would calculate the costs and benefits in society at large if everyone acted in a particular way. A good example is Ford Motor Company in the 1960s which I mentioned earlier using the cost benefits over safety. They manufactured the Pinto fuel tank knowing it had potential to explode when rear ended. Another example if rule utilitarian is that bribery is wrong where under no conditions would bribery be accepted even if that means a lost of jobs. The act utilitarian uses a specific action itself rather than the general rules governing it, in order to assess the greatest utility. Here, in this example, an act utilitarian would agree that bribery is wrong, but only under certain circumstances. Like I mentioned before, bribery in Russia is a commonplace. Some businesses would be comfortable using the bribery in order to establish their business there or to survive in that society.

Deontology refers to moral philosophies that focuses on the rights of individuals and on the intentions associated with a particular behavior rather than on its consequences. Rule deontologists believe that rules dominate decision making; so his/her team is just as important. Rule deontology is to carry out the duty according to the rules created even if the conclusion is wrong. Act deontologists believe that rules are useless from particular experiences and that that deciding on particular situations as they show up is best. Act deontology requires a person to use equality, fairness and impartiality when making decisions. They believe rules are only guidelines; whereby, past experience weighs more than rules when making decisions. They also are well aware that some of their actions may be perceived as right or wrong. Their act takes precedence over any rule or another way to say it, their actions promotes the greatest balance of good vs. bad. Many internet websites track users while online. This practice offends the public, because they view it as an invasion of privacy.

Nonconsequentialist focus their rightness on the individual, not society. An example of this would be an Admiral of the US Navy telling the truth about a design failure in torpedoes. This man used truth over consequences which eventually relieved him of his command.

Corporate culture can be defined as a set of beliefs, goals, norms, and problem solving methods that employees of an organization share. Corporate culture also involves values and rules that prescribe the behavior for organizational members. Ethical culture reflects whether they have an ethical conscience. Some of the factors in ethical culture include corporate policies on corporate ethics, leadership abilities on top management on ethical issues that influences co-workers and ethical or unethical behavior. The more ethical employees perceive an organizations culture to be, the less likely they are to make unethical decisions. Companies that promote ethical values to enhance the employees experience usually has positive support on the employees commitment to the firm. Obedience to authority is usually why employees resolve ethical issues by simply following their superior. There are two major factors that keep a corporation ethical. Companies produce an ethical climate; whereby, they focus on issues of right and wrong. The ethical climate is the organization's conscience. Organizations can manage their culture with employees who match their own. Together, the influence of organizational culture and their employees may limit misconduct; however, there are two essential factors to promote a positive organization culture; the board of directors and leaders who have character, integrity, honesty, and value the company's mission.

A leader is a person with the ability or authority to guide others towards achievement of a goal and has significant impact on ethical decision making, because he/she has the power to motivate others and enforce the organizations rule and impact. Leadership styles of an organization influence how an employee acts. A leader also should have the firm's vision and values in mind. He should also be concerned about the welfare of the shareholders as well as the employee. Good leaders can promote and achieve positive climate and strong ethical leaders have courage, and knowledge to make decisions that are best in the long run. There are six leadership styles coercive leader, authoritative leader, affiliative leader, democratic leader, pacesetter leader, and coaching leader. Leaders will alternate the style depending on the risk and desire to achieve positive climate. The seven habits of a strong ethical behavior are the following: 1.) strong personal character 2.) Passion to do right. 3.) Proactiveness 4.) Consider stakeholder's interest. 5.) Good role modeling for organizations values. 6.) transparent and active decision making 7.) taking on a holistic view for the firm's ethical culture. An example of a good leadership is a man named Robert Nardelli, CEO of Home Depot, who runs the business in a holistic viewpoint. He believes that all stakeholders are important and they all contribute to the success of the company.

There are two kinds of organizational structures that are important in business ethics, centralized organization and decentralized organization. Centralized organization is what General Motors and Internal Revenue Service use. A decision making authority and responsibility is all top level management. A little authority is delegated to lower levels. Usually centralized organizations are used in routine and efficiency production process. Each worker knows his/her job and has a clear understanding on how to carry out assignments. This kind of organization has formal rules, policies and procedures that are backed to elaborate control systems. In other words, flexibility, adaptability, problem recognition is not emphasized. This kind of structure can lead to unethical acts, because the communication is limited between the employee and top management. A disadvantage to centralized organizations is if there is great risk in the top of the hierarchy that risk may ultimately result in incapacity in leading an organization. The employees will feel less motivated to perform if they cannot share their ideas on how to improve the organization; thereby, becoming more frustrated. This can cause a lack of connectedness, because employees don't understand the overall ramifications of their behavior. Employees may try to transfer blame for their actions on others who are not guilty. You can have decentralization so that this formula will share decision making and overall this is an advantage. Employees can have impact on improving their productivity and lowering inefficient habits. A decentralized structure will free up time as well. Decentralized areas have one weakness which is opposing points-of-view leading to delays. Decentralized organizations could have too many employees handling whatever needed to be done resulting in overstaffing and loss of revenue.

Do I think a person's status within an organization creates an opportunity for unethical behavior...my answer is yes. I have done a good deal for research on CEOs and found that because of their power and flexibility in the company they have more advantage than others in providing unethical behavior such as the ponzi schemes that Bernie Madoff and Tom Petters used to promote their financial status at the expense of others. Another example for unethical behavior is the two CEOs, Thain and Fuld Jr., who used their executive power to promote bonuses and wealth for themselves and others in top management. I also believe they prevented the stakeholders from being knowledgeable of the negative financial status that brought their company to bankruptcy. This was called transparency avoidance. I believe it is the CEOs job to promote an ethical climate in their company for employees to follow; however, their unethical imprint has left their company and their stakeholders with mistrust in big corporations. Having said this, I also believe the little man or employee that has less status has room to make their unethical imprint on a company. This is largely due to the work environment in which he works. If his co-workers get by with little white lies or taking shortcuts when they shouldn't be and it becomes a norm for the environment, then the employees believe they can get away with that sort of thing too. In this case, you have a recycling of unethical behavior that will continue until a manager or supervisor puts a stop to it by relocating or terminating the bad apples. My conclusion to this question is people with power such as top management have more freedom to do unethical behavior if that is what they intend to do; however, every employee can be seen as having potential for unethical acts if the climate is right.

Organizations which develop an effective ethics program have a written code of conduct, an ethics officer to oversee the program, careful delegation of authority, formal ethics training, rigorous auditing, monitoring, enforcement and revision of program standards. For example in Argentina, only 26 % of CEOs use value system of the founder resulting in the most problems. The code of conduct will not solve all the ethical issues; this is left up to the corporate culture to problem-solve. An ethics program can help avoid legal problems with the Federal Guidelines for organizations. The seven minimum requirements for ethics and compliance are as follows: 1.) standards and procedures, 2.) high-level personnel are responsible for an ethics and compliance program 3.) no substantial discretionary authority given to individuals which do misconduct. 4.) Establishment of systems to monitor, audit, and report misconduct, 5.) standards and procedures communicated effectively via ethics training programs. 6.) consistent enforcement of standards, codes and punishment. 7.) continuous improvement of the ethics and compliance program.

An ethics program can require federal judges to increase fines for companies which tolerate misconduct. The Sarbanes-Oxley Act has new requirements for corporate governance to prevent fraudulent behavior. The accounting oversight board establishes financial reporting requirements for instituting a code of conduct. The compliance orientation teaches required conduct while the values orientation sharpens shared values that the corporate culture identifies with.

The code of conduct reports violations, disciplinary action for violations, and structure of the due process. The code of conduct is more akin to the regulatory set of rules and tends to elicit less debate about specific actions. The suggested code of ethic standards that should be included are trustworthiness, respect, responsibility, fairness, caring and citizenship. The support of management, training and distribution are the only ways to have success with these codes of ethics requirements. The people who manage ethics programs are called ethics officers. Ethics officer is a person who has knowledge and experience and helps foster positive ethical values and standards, and assists the leadership and employees of the organization in living up to such standards. They are responsible for assessing the needs or risks, developing and distributing a code of conduct/ethics, conduct training programs, monitoring conduct, taking action on violations, and reviewing and upgrading the code to society standards. They also assist in an organizational culture in which the 'right thing' is frequently communicated and reinforced. Their job is to integrate their organization's ethics and values, compliance, and conduct practices into the everyday decision-making process at all levels of the organization. Ethical officers help organizations see the ethical standards, communicate those standards, integrate into the culture of businesses and hold individuals accountable to those standards. The ethics officer should have direct access to the ultimate leadership of an organization. The ethics officer is the ultimate leader of an organization. In the ideal ethics office structure, the ethics officer would report to the board of an organization with an administrative reporting relationship to a board of directors. High end executives do not have the time to emulate an ethics officer. Two-thirds of ethical officers are full time. Sometimes you want to bring an independent perspective to the culture of the organization. A good ethical officer is a great communicator and a trusted employee who maintains credibility well.

We live in a global economy. In business today, the companies are expanding branches outside their home countries where there are different cultures, values, laws and ethical standards. Cultural differences can be perceived from country to country such as language, communication, body language, timing of an encounter such as setting time limits for meetings vs. being laid back and not setting any specific time in a length of a meeting and finally the laws of their land.

I guess the ethical question that can be asked for any global business is to which country's ethical standard should a business adhere to promote their values, ethic standards, and even laws on members of the other culture? Should it be their own values, standards, and laws from which is formed from their own country or should it be with the country which they are doing business? I believe this issue in itself can make it sometimes hard for companies to establish what is right or wrong in the decision making process. There seems to be an universal concept that honesty, charity, virtue, and beneficence. Some companies such as General Motors, Shell Group, Procter and Gamble had agreed to abide by the Global Sullivan Principles; whereby, these principles encourage social responsibility. I will highlight some of the Global Sullivan Principles which are the following: a business will support universal human rights which includes their employees, the community, where they operate, and to whom they do business with; promote equal opportunity at all levels of the company regardless race, gender, age or religious belief, and operate without unacceptable worker treatment such as the exploitation of children, female abuse; physical punishment; provide a safe and healthy work place; promote fair competition that respects intellectual and property rights; and work with government and communities in which they do business in order to improve the quality of life in those communities.

Public companies that operate on a global scale without any one tie to any one nation or region are called multinational corporation (MNC). Examples of some of these companies are include Shell Oil, Ford Motor Company, Nike, Microsoft, and Cisco Systems. The ethical issues arise, because these companies have a lot of financial power and in many countries, power may take precedence over the country's well being. A good example of the above is a Unocal Oil Corporation, also known as Union 76, that established a natural gas pipeline in Myanmar in Southeast Asia. They were accused by human rights activists who claimed that the company was responsible for forced labor, rapes, and murder that were committed by the soldiers that were assigned to watch the gas pipeline. Unocal's defense insists that they are not guilty, because they should not be responsible for the deeds of the soldiers; however, the company realized that the soldiers had a role in securing the pipeline. In June 2004, the US Supreme Court filed the Alien Tort Claims Act ruling that foreigners could file lawsuits in US Courts to address human rights abuses overseas. Some other human rights suits pending against multinational companies involve abuses in Colombia, Indonesia, Nigeria with poor human rights records such as sweat shops, unfair pay, etc.

Even when MNCs try to make ethical decisions that achieve their own objectives and try to benefit the countries where they manufacture/market their products, they still can be vulnerable to ethical issues. An example of this is when Ford Motors faced liability, because of the Bridgestone/Firestone "assassin tires" have injured and killed Venezuelans. It caused economic damage and 400 Venezuelans wanted repaid damages. The Venezuelans wanted full reimbursement on any tire made by Bridgestone or Firestone.

In Russia, bribery affects multinational corporations. Corruption is 20 % of the country's gross domestic product and 80 % of businesses are involved with some kind of bribery. The Foreign Corrupt Practices Act addresses these issues with the transparency requirements of Securities Exchange Acts and bribery itself. Violators may be disqualified from doing business with the United States government. As a result of FCPA only regulating American businesses, it can put them at a disadvantage in competitive edge of their ladder ranking in the global economy. The best way to avoid FCPA termination is learning and implementing the country's culture and national laws very well national laws. The World Trade Organization is a regulator for many countries which give a common international law to member states and set policies on social issues like banking (to prevent money laundering), food sanitation, and agriculture requirements and indirectly enforce, ISO14001, an international fossil fuel pollution law with controls and limits. The Omnibus Trade and Competitiveness Act enhanced the FCPA so no loopholes remained in the prosecution of bribery. The Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development is a treaty that has consequences for offering fake advantages to foreign businesses. However, giving bribes is a legal practice in countries like Mexico, South Africa, Middle East, India, and Pakistan. Bribery is wide spread or normal occurrence in the developing nations such as Dominican Republic, Nigeria, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Costa Rica, Bolivia, and Venezuela.

Capitalist healthcare great / nationalized healthcare very bad (2009-04-23 16:06)

Medicare Prescription Drug, Improvement, and Modernization Act (MMA) was passed. In addition to adding the prescription drug plan, MMA links premiums to beneficiary income. An increase in government spending, however, will primarily pay for this expansion of Medicare. "third rail" is what the politicians call it.

Since the Seniors will fight to the end on medicare if any politician dares touch it and its bankrupted though as symmental value to it than don't do nationalized healthcare. Barack Obama is starting the administration out like Adolf Hitler in 1933 which he got elected, the German jugistral branch didn't indite him at the golden opportunity, and Adolf changed the rules to his far right communist liking and that's what is happening now in 2009 in America. The President taking the exact same steps as Hitler has done in 1933 - 1936. Nazis started executing anyone who dared go against him much like the driveby media does now. Silencing everyone. We all know that nationalized healthcare is instead of starting at retirement age of 65, it starts at birth. The USSR communists were like a left-wing Nazi party. To make it braindead simple for you all, nationalized healthcare doesn't work with 306 million people with 8 % unemployment and the baby-boomers passing over. The 40 million illegal aliens in this country aren't taxed on tax day nor are they paying for healthcare. That alone makes capitalist heatlhcare far better than doomsday.

MORE than fourteen years have passed since the unhappy day when the German people, blinded by promises from foes at home and abroad, lost touch with honor and freedom, thereby losing all. Since that day of treachery, the Almighty has withheld his blessing from our people. Dissension and hatred descended upon us. .

The misery of our people is horrible to behold! Millions of the industrial proletariat are unemployed and starving; the whole of the middle class and the small artisans have been impoverished. When this collapse finally reaches the German peasants, we will be faced with an immeasurable disaster. For then not only shall a nation collapse, but a two-thousand-year-old inheritance, some of the loftiest products of human culture and civilization.

It's been a long time coming, but tonight, because of what we did on this day, in this election, at this defining moment, change has come to America. For even as we celebrate tonight, we know the challenges that tomorrow will bring are the greatest of our lifetime — two wars, a planet in peril, the worst financial crisis in a century. Even as we stand here tonight, we know there are brave Americans waking up in the deserts of Iraq and the mountains of Afghanistan to risk their lives for us.

All about us the warning signs of this collapse are apparent. .And as leaders of the nation and the national Government we vow to God, to our conscience, and to our people that we will faithfully and resolutely fulfill the task conferred upon us.

The inheritance which has fallen to us is a terrible one. The task with which we are faced is the hardest which has fallen to German statesmen within the memory of man. But we are all filled with unbounded confidence for we believe in our people and their imperishable virtues. Every class and every individual must help us to found the new Reich.

The National Government will regard it as its first and foremost duty to revive in the nation the spirit of unity and co-operation. It will preserve and defend those basic principles on which our nation has been built. It regards Christianity as the foundation of our national morality, and the family as the basis of national life....

Turbulent instincts must be replaced by a national discipline as the guiding principle of our national life. All those institutions which are the strongholds of the energy and vitality of our nation will be taken under the special care of the Government.

The National Government intends to solve the problem of the reorganization of trade and commerce with two four-year plans:

There are mothers and fathers who will lie awake after their children fall asleep and wonder how they'll make the mortgage, or pay their doctor's bills, or save enough for college. There is new energy to harness and new jobs to be created; new schools to build and threats to meet and alliances to repair.

The road ahead will be long. Our climb will be steep. We may not get there in one year or even one term, but America — I have never been more hopeful than I am tonight that we will get there. I promise you — we as a people will get there.

There will be setbacks and false starts. There are many who won't agree with every decision or policy I make as President, and we know that government can't solve every problem. But I will always be honest with you about the challenges we face. I will listen to you, especially when we disagree. And above all, I will ask you join in the work of remaking this nation the only way it's been done in America for two-hundred and twenty-one years — block by block, brick by brick, calloused hand by calloused hand.

What began twenty-one months ago in the depths of winter must not end on this autumn night. This victory alone is not the change we seek — it is only the chance for us to make that change. And that cannot happen if we go back to the way things were. It cannot happen without you.

So let us summon a new spirit of patriotism; of service and responsibility where each of us resolves to pitch in and work harder and look after not only ourselves, but each other. Let us remember that if this financial crisis taught us anything, it's that we cannot have a thriving Wall Street while Main Street suffers — in this country, we rise or fall as one nation; as one people.

The German farmer must be rescued in order that the nation may be supplied with the necessities of life....

A concerted and all-embracing attack must be made on unemployment in order that the German working class may be saved from ruin....

The November parties have ruined the German peasantry in fourteen years. In fourteen years they have created an army of millions of unemployed. The National Government will, with iron determination and unshakable steadfastness of purpose, put through the following plan:

Within four years the German peasant must be rescued from the quagmire into which he has fallen.

Within four years unemployment must be finally overcome. At the same time the conditions necessary for a revival in trade and commerce are provided. The National Government will couple with this tremendous task of reorganizing business life a reorganization of the administrative and fiscal systems of the Reich, of the Federal States, and the Communes.

Only when this has been done can the idea of a continued federal existence of the entire Reich be fully realized....

Compulsory labor-service and the back-to-the-land policy are two of the basic principles of this program.

The securing of the necessities of life will include the performance of social duties to the sick and aged.

In economical administration, the promotion of employment, the preservation of the farmer, as well as in the exploitation of individual initiative, the Government sees the best guarantee for the avoidance of any experiments which would endanger the currency.

As regards its foreign policy the National Government considers its highest mission to be the securing of the right to live and the restoration of freedom to our nation. Its determination to bring to an end the chaotic state will assist in restoring to the community of nations a State of equal value and, above all, a State which must have equal rights. It is impressed with the importance of its duty to use this nation of equal rights as an instrument for the securing and maintenance of that peace which the world requires today more than ever before.

May the good will of all others assist in the fulfillment of this our earnest wish for the welfare of Europe and of the whole world. Great as is our love for our Army as the bearer of our arms and the symbol of our great past, we should be happy if the world, by reducing its armaments, would see to it that we need never increase our own.

If, however, Germany is to experience this political and economic revival and conscientiously fulfill her duties toward the other nations, one decisive step is absolutely necessary first: the overcoming of the destroying menace of communism in Germany. We of this Government feel responsible for the restoration of orderly life in the nation and for the final elimination of class madness and class struggle. . Reich's präsident von Hindenburg has called upon us to bring about the revival of the German nation. Unity is our tool. Therefore we now appeal to the German people to support this reconciliation. The National Government wishes to work and it will work. It did not ruin the German nation for fourteen years, but now it will lead the nation back to health. It is determined to make well in four years the ills of fourteen years. But the National Government cannot make the work of reconstruction dependent upon the approval of those who wrought destruction. The Marxist parties and their lackeys have had fourteen years to show what they can do. The result is a heap of ruins.

Now, people of Germany, give us four years and then pass judgment upon us. In accordance with Field Marshal von Hindenburg's command we shall begin now. May God Almighty give our work His blessing, strengthen our purpose, and endow us with wisdom and the trust of our people, for we are fighting not for ourselves but for Germany.

...And to those Americans whose support I have yet to earn — I may not have won your vote, but I hear your voices, I need your help, and I will be your President too.

And to all those watching tonight from beyond our shores, from parliaments and palaces to those who are huddled around radios in the forgotten corners of our world — our stories are singular, but our destiny is shared, and a new dawn of American leadership is at hand. To those who would tear this world down — we will defeat you. To those who seek peace and security — we support you. And to all those who have wondered if America's beacon still burns as bright — tonight we proved once more that the true strength of our nation comes not from our the might of our arms or the scale of our wealth, but from the enduring power of our ideals: democracy, liberty, opportunity, and unyielding hope.

For that is the true genius of America — that America can change. Our union can be perfected. And what we have already achieved gives us hope for what we can and must achieve tomorrow. This election had many firsts and many stories that will be told for generations. . America, we have come so far. We have seen so much. But there is so much more to do. So tonight, let us ask ourselves -if our children should live to see the next century what progress will we have made?

This is our chance to answer that call. This is our moment. This is our time - to put our people back to work and open doors of opportunity for our kids; to restore prosperity and promote the cause of peace; to reclaim the American Dream and reaffirm that fundamental truth — that out of many, we are one; that while we breathe, we hope, and where we are met with cynicism, and doubt, and those who tell us that we can't, we will respond with that timeless creed that sums up the spirit of a people:

But he's trying none the less. I've been using

I have heard excellent things about blogengine.net.

Is there a way I can transfer all my wordpress content into it?

I have always disliked the idea because of the expenses.

But he's trying none the less. I've been using Movable-type on various websites for about a year and am concerned about switching to another platform. I have heard good things about blogengine.net.

Is there a way I can transfer all my wordpress content into it?

Any kind of help would be really appreciated!

This is happening to people with tinnitus, they have to live with the unwanted sound in their ears day and night.

Avoid instances where you are exposed to loud sounds. For that reason anyone suffering from symptoms of tinnitus would be wise to get a little more information about a product like Quietus before further damage is done. Among the causes of subjective tinnitus are the same conditions that result in hearing loss, such as repeated exposure to noises over 70 db.

O Friend, Where Art Thou (2009-04-25 03:03)

If you have any ideas of how to make long-term friends with someone, do tell! I've done it all. I collected DVDs, Bluray, anime and videogames and it is supposed to work like it has for everybody else. That's all I heard for a few years, everybody playing some game. To everybody I talked too, TV shows in general are uninteresting except for the occasional anime out there. I own the X-files boxset, the Star Trek Voyager boxset, and the Star Trek The Next Generation boxset for there superb sci-fi storylines. The camping trips are ok, but you just cannot make any friends there either. You talk to people in camping trips, but its a once in lifetime and you never see them. I've been on facebook, yet they just don't answer. For example, most people feature all my comments using that checkbox and never ever answer so I delete them. My parents keep telling my dilemma is not a bourgeois vs. petite bourgeois vs. the proletariat class struggle and I'm not poor.

I found some awesome graphics. (2009-04-30 04:42)

Upgrade OS Day Episode III: Post-Linux apocalypse Linux (2009-05-03 08:28)

It was the Fedora 11 Preview x86-64 DVD!

My parents stopped using Fedora 10 Linux, they both think it's a piece of crap, because they can't work it. And since the end of that one and only Linux class which I don't know if it came too late, we've been on 3.x forever and I was on KDE 4.1.2 which seems to come out after hell froze over. Anyway, it was a incredibility long time and Windows 7 comes out in July and should be a lot better. I believe the Linux apocalypse happened in December 2008 says after I downloaded OpenSuse 11.1, but I still had to do a class on it in 2009 thus the Fedora 10 distro. In a nutshell, Windows is so stable in 7.0 that Linux is obsolete, yet they use it for servers becoss of Apache, world's most popular webserver, and Samba, world's most popular file server run on it! KDE 4.2.2 hasn't changed in any way and form from KDE 4.1.2! Linux is evolving in the Post-Linux apocalypse Earth! Windows 7 won!

Podcast #8 aac

Archive.org mirror 13 MB

Nancy, Barney Frank and the banks that give the loans to ppl who couldn't afford them due to entitlement of competition or something. Barney Frank denied the Freddie Mac and Fannie May corruption/bankruptcy scandal long before it was due. Barney is the reason there should be term limits in Congress...he's a socialist too BTW. 10 out of 14 banks are asking for 45 billion dollars of tax payer money! That's just not right. Nancy is a San Francisco socialist democrat and loves to spend in revenge of all those 30 yrs of restraint. Congress can overrule anything that Bush veto. Sometimes he signs the simultaneous, because he fell victim to brainwashing or something. He caved in with poor support. Well what is true here is that the GOP is less evil and smarter than the Democrats. The Democrats don't want nuclear power plants, they release top secret crap for no reason, and the GOP believes that the military must back our epic economy. Democrats want to dismantle missiles in Europe and stop F-22 Raptor production as it is the only way to evade Russia surface to air missile system as well as decommission Gitmo was for evil people presentment. And Democrats want to put terrorists in the USA. Nobody else would take them. You don't want to far left ACLU organization, the most vial law non-profit organization in America to release even more troop photos of water boarding and other interrogation practices. It pretty much releases top secret integration that we use to keep our military in the advantage. When you fight a war, you really fight to win. Not do this propaganda thing that these loonies do for entitlement reasons to make the ratings go up at our country's expense. The American Civil Liberties Union doesn't care about most Americans, they're totalitarian like PETA. They're in this far left intellectual bubble and can't see the significance of the situation. With all this spending our economy doesn't look like it will fully recover in any near time in the future.

Mexico is failing and we should have border security and agree with the Secure Fence act of 2006. 40 million illegals...bad. How about the worst mistake in history, nationalized healthcare. Will reduce the size of the military. Nationalized healthcare will fail, because the government doesn't make money, capitalist healthcare will profit. MEDICARE IS THE WORLD'S LARGEST PONZI SCHEME. IT IS 34 BILLION IN THE RED AND WILL GO BANKRUPT SOON! We spend way too much on our elderly. Why not profit and make it all businesses! The problem is government. Masters of American capitalism, the libertarians are allied with the Republicans. Socialist Canadians 17 % unemployment. Japan is the second largest economy due to capitalism. Rome fell, because of its weak military. Taking care of sick poor is an allusion to destroy most capitalism in the US. China really pulled out of the lending business! Healthcare can be a business. The government can work with them to keep it that way. I don't want to wait 4 1/2 months for my healthcare like the Canadians, and sucks and has a good portion of the economies earnings. The Canadians are miserable, understand? For example, all the liberal states are practically bankrupted and if California goes, the rest of states follow all due to spending too much and states reimbursing failing companies. I believe paying for 20-40 million illegal immigrant's healthcare + poor is going to bankrupt us. Most Americans are pro-Secure Fence Act of 2006. We're all anti-illegal immigrant. Think of Rome, dude. Why would you want to move away from the best constitution on Earth? Nobody has it as good as Americans do. Reaganomics would work extremely well. We should start limiting the elderly's Medicare experiences. They may want it, but it's bankrupting us with the costs for Viagra for example.

We better speak up. California is up to it's neck with Medicare expenses for the elderly. If California goes under, the rest of us goes. Why should the elderly get as much care as they did in the past when were not. Nationalized healthcare would be similar to the disastrous medicare funding that old people are getting away with.

Hong Kong has highest GDP for a city on Earth. That's how the Chinese know how do capitalism well thru the Hong Kong weirdos. Why would I be brainwashing if we're already capitalist, a real superpower without a doubt until the early 2000. They're miserable, because their constitution doesn't begin with "We the People". Not lying here as their government is bankrupting them! Our constitution is light years ahead of theirs. The Canadians are miserable with their nationalized healthcare, and socialist economy, because the the common-wealth is like that. India (former), Australia, and Canada, Bermuda, UK, Jamaica all have socialist leaders. Reagonomics was a result of 200 years of conservative thinking. Just will work! It worked in the 1980s! The 1984 book on the house!

Barrack Obama is Big Brother from 1984 ideology. Don't giving into benevolent fascism is all I or it'll end up with transnational laws. And you liked the movie V for Vendetta on your myspace account meaning you already knew of left-wing benevolent fascism as one of your FAVs.

About the freedom of speech thing. We should have all the vial comments from people in this country not sent out, because the US has a difficulty with freedom of speech as long as they don't do violence. Why an the neo-nazi National Socialists Movement stay in Minneapolis and they've been around forever. The Neo-Nazis have right to assembly also.

Chancellor Obama is going to reduce 0.5 % of the 3.5 trillion dollar budget they released yesterday. The government is also doing a stress test which the FDIC does all the tiem anyway, yet it is a conspiracy to nationalized banks pretty much so they screw us ever more up.

The state legislators do a civil war where the government is taking away our guns in a time where there are illegal immigrants in sanctuary cities, and the state legislators are against it in Montana, Texas and Ohio. This is huge. It protects our 2nd amendment to the right to afford to bare arms in hostile situations. In the 9th and 10th amendment, the states have regulatory rights over the federal government to not tax guns in those states, because of in trust state commors.

Big Brother is releasing the detainees of Gitmo into our communities across the US. These were the guys we knew that were involved in 9/11 and the Government is sending them back where they came from so they can retrain to hurt more Americans.

Abu Zubayadh oversaw training camps of 9/11 terrorists and had $50,000 USD to fund attacks. Meanwhile Hhald Mohammed was Al-Qaeda's top operative and is a mastermind behind the 9/11 crashing of Pentagon and World Trade Center towers. How does closing Gitmo make us safer? The government has no place to put these terrorists and many others like them.

This is war. It's the right war. America is not a socialist country. I won't let it be. I'm an American. Not a pinko commie.

UNIX still kills Linux (2009-05-09 13:11)

In China installs a secure operating system on all military PCs based on Free-BSD 5.3. China appears to be well ahead of the curve, selecting the best OS for the job regardless of vendor influence in the West. US Department of Defense is the target of no fewer than 128 information infrastructure attacks per minute from China, and we discover that China is engaged in working toward 100 % military deployment of security hardened FreeBSD while the US DoD is almost universally using off-the-shelf Microsoft Windows systems, it becomes clear that there's definitely something wrong with US information security policy.

I'm not in the fight so it doesn't matter if I use openSUSE, Fedora or Windows Vista. It's really funny when I asked the government why there is Windows XP and not Red Hat or BSD. The representatives just say it's not of my beeswax. LOL!

The harsh truth of the matter is that corporate influence in government has succeeded in retarding the progress of information technology advancement in US defense policy by weighing down decision making processes with political favoritism!

US Military contractor benchmarks 8-core & 16-core CPUs and gives results (2009-05-15 20:00)

Sandia National Laboratories (owned by largest defense company on Earth, Lockheed Martin) says 8 core is a slight increase from quadcore in terms of performance while 16-cores has a negative benchmarking features (software bug?) over 8-core prototypes. And I was going to service my Core 2 Quad Q6600 to December 2010 until I upgrade. Yikes, Batman. It doesn't sound right, it's probably a multithreading issue. Take the Larabee GPU for example....thing has like 25-100 SPEs and it increase performance with every SPE. It could spell disaster for the CPU business. I'll buy a 8 core Intel one and hope for the best. I don't know, this got me confused. AT least we know that this isn't true with the 32 SPE / 4 PPE Cell Broadband Engine 3 for PS4, because it's going in the new IBM Roadrunner 2 super computers for the US Government and Universities! It just goes for Intel CPUs... AMD versions, I am unsure of. With all the crap Nancy Polisi (the liar of liars) spent (8 trillion)...they got enough for those CBE3 supercomputers...

<http://www.tgdaily.com/content/view/41371/135/>

My solution is of course copy Larabee+SPE architecture for CPUs and the 16 core performs worse than 8 core thing will disappear.

1000 year old spaceship (2009-05-21 20:19)

Joint Soviet/American Apollo 20 mission explored a 1000 - 1.5 billion year old spaceship on the far side of the Moon.

A magazine interview conducted by Luca Scantamburlo was done through a YouTube email account in May 25, 2007. He says his name is William Rutledge, born in 1930 in Belgium. He is an American citizen, but is not accustomed to speaking in English anymore since 1990 when he moved from Europe to Rwanda. He has learned Kinyarwanda and uses French and sometimes German because Rwanda is a former Belgium-German Colony. He said that he moved to Rwanda because of a woman he met. He says, "NASA didn't employ me, USAF did." He worked an area that studies foreign technology, studying Russian items only, like the N1 project, AJAX plane project and the Mig Foxbat 25. Rutledge had previously worked on the Gemini project and the USAF remembered that, so they chose him later for Apollo 20. He says he was chosen, "because I was one of the rare pilots who didn't believe in God." For some reason, he said that little thing was the deciding factor making him an astronaut. Rutledge says that there were 300 people working on the USAF in Vandenberg, California. During this mission there was a Russian-American collaboration to make the mission happen.

Rutledge claims that the Apollo 18 mission was the Apollo-Soyuz project that took place in 1975. Apollo 19 however, had a loss of telemetry for some unknown reason, ending mission data sent back. It apparently hit a meteorite in orbit. Hmm...I believe the odds of a moving object hitting another moving object is far less likely than a meteorite hitting a stationary object, yet this could have been a warning sent from lunar inhabitants. Apollo 18's goal was to send a rover to explore the roof of a ship by climbing on the Monaco hill and entering an opening made by those who explored the ship far before the USAF ever arrived.

When Rutledge was speaking about the alien ship and lunar city on the moon, his descriptions sent ones imagination whirling. "We entered the two ships on the mission. One was a cigar shaped mother ship, the other a triangular-shaped ship. Most the mission fell on exploring the mother ship, which NASA believed crossed the universe at least 1.5 billion years ago. We witnessed many signs of biological life forms inside, like old remains of unusual plants in the section that apparently contains the engine for the craft. Another biological species came in the shape of triangular rocks that emit droplets of a yellow liquid that has medical properties. We found signs of extra-solar creatures. We discovered the remains of many tiny bodies measuring about 10 cm across. These tiny creatures were living in a complex network of glass tubes all along the interior of the ship. The most startling of all the discoveries was when we came upon two human like bodies, one of which was totally intact even after over a billion years on the ship." The one intact EBE was named by Leonov or himself (he was unsure) calling her Mona Lisa. He said the EBE (Extraterrestrial Biological Entity) was female and close to 1.65 meters tall. She had genitals, hair and six fingers. Possibly meaning their mathematics may have been based on a dozen. It was apparent that her function was to be a pilot. She had piloting devices attached to her fingers and eyes, yet had on no cloths. She had two thin cables that ran into here nose area, but note she had no nostrils. Leonov undid the devices over her eyes, causing secretions of bio liquid to shoot out and freeze from the mouth, nose, eyes and other parts of the body. Some areas of the body seemed in unusually good condition for its age. He stated, "As we told mission control, condition seemed not dead, not alive." A thin transparent coating protected her hair and skin. We didn't have a medical background so Leonov and I made a simple test. We decided to take off our bio equipment and attach it to the EBE so that it could send the telemetry back to Mission Control Medical experts. She is now on Earth and she is not dead, but I want to post other videos of her before I talk further about her. We also fund a second body that appeared to be destroyed. We took the head on board. The color of its skin was a pastel blue or blue-grey. The skin had a bit of unusual inscription over the eyes and forehead. There was a strap without inscription around the head. The cockpit of cigar shaped mother ship was full of calligraphy and was made by lengthy hexagonal tubes.

The actual age of the spacecraft was 1.5 billion years old, which was confirmed during exploration. We discovered fragments of the original crust, anorthosite, spirals in feldspathoids, apparently came from the impact which formed the Izasak D Crater. "The density of the meteor impacts on the ship validated the age, also the little white impacts on the Monaco hill at the West of the ship," said Rutledge.

The city that we discovered was actually named on Earth. It was decided that this city would be called Station One, but once astronauts got a close look at it, they realized that it was since long abandoned and turned to worthless piles of scrap, except one taller larger building we called the cathedral. That one seemed intact. (The Cathedral is clearly shown in detail on the video of the lunar city on YouTube). There was a writing or calligraphy deeply pressed into every piece of metal. We believed the ship and the city were similar in age, but it is a very tiny part of the whole. On the rover our telephoto lens makes the alien structures look bigger than normal.

Blame the demoted credit rating / Cap and Trade scandle on President Asshole and his sidekick speaker (2009-05-24 22:12)

Big Brother making us loose our AAA rating for borrowing from China. AA is 2x expensive as AAA. Cap and trade by Big Brother (Obama) is an evil agenda to stop Nuclear Power Plants (19.3 % of the power grid) from producing power by making them declare bankruptcy. Any harm these do is give off Co2. Nothing that photosynthesis can't handle. Then electricity prices will be high...bankrupt the US just in time for Republicans to get into office. People get desperate, keeping voting Labor Party..I mean Democrat..not!

USA has 100 CyberKnives because of Captialist heathcare....not nationalized healthcare (2009-05-28 21:16)

The British are miserable with their socialist healthcare according to daniel Hannan. Hong Kong proves you all socialists wrong. Communism + capitalism won't bring destruction/madness. Think Hong Kong as highest GDP for a city anywhere. The democrats don't understand anything about economics. Obama is crazy that didn't take a crash course on economics. Only the democrats lowering our credit rating as we go down. It's pretty bad if China is worried about the United States. Republicans lesser evil here. . China may be a superpower in 10 yrs. They're trying to be what USA used to be in the 1980s!

The fact of the matter is that socialism won't buy you 90 % of the world's Cyberknives or gamma knives. Your favorite socialist country CANADA only has ONE CYBER KNIFE by August 2008! Sucks to be them! I happen to know that UK doesn't have one. We got 100 Cyberknives and China only got 6. Japan only has 14! If the USA keeps capitalist healthcare like we do now we could afford a lot more Cyber knives and Gamma knives. You democrats might need a cyberknife. What if it costs too much to access? You die.

http://www.askmen.com/top_10/travel_150/195b_travel_top_ten.html

I'll be moving to either Oz or Canada when President Romney gets into office (obviously). All other people have online activities with continuous feedback.

Canadian and Australian citizens must have it so damn easy to get comments on their social networks or blogs.

I realize it's the longitude and latitude that prevents me from getting comments. LOL

I like Ontario, Canada or Western Australia, Australia the most.

Ronald Reagan in France, the same year I was born, the year George Orwell's book predicted President Obama. Ronald Reagan is my favorite president! President Bush is second favorite. Right now, I am looking at places in the capitalist Western world of Reagan administration mirroring Australia to live like Gold Coast (Surfer's Paradise) or Melbourne when I graduate from college in 2010-11, because it's more capitalist. I got nothing to lose moving there...no family to leave behind practically. I was researching, and America looks no worse off than Australia meaning if I had move there I would be taxed no less than in the United States...maybe less! By the same token...I am gambling that Australia's libertarian economy will have better odds than the USA. I could keep my values. I could say I love AC/DC and the tropics and they'd let me become a citizen!

.Who cares about HUMVEE/HUMMER. We got HUMVEE 2.0 (2009-06-02 12:45)

You would think that the US Military and all other militaries in the world has more than enough HUMVEEs to last them 3 decades. It's a good vehicle, abit a little dated due to HUMVEE 2.0 OF COURSE, DUH! This one uses off the shelf Navistar truck parts. Personally, I could care less if China owns Hummer. You know the Chinese love the Jeep Cherokee which is the vehicle that I own.

HUMVEE 2.0 is a lot better than HUMVEE. HUMVEE can sail into the sunset for all i care.

TI Nspire CAS came (2009-06-06 13:09)

I bought myself an Nspire CAS so I could get an A on my Algebra. The book uses a TI-84 and that has the same buttons as a TI-83+. A TI-83+ is for high school students. The TI-89 Titanium and Nspire CAS are for College. Right now, European colleges and some American colleges are using the Computer Algebra system of the Nspire CAS. The TI-83+ has a lot of software for it that can upgrade it to a TI-84+ at Ticalc. I've tried out all three and I like the Nspire the best. I got an 95 % on week 8 in this class. Online is the way to go, because I would've gotten a C if I took it at school. I'm like most people. On the TI forums, people said how they're talking college courses with the TI-83 and that's because they either are better at algebra anyway or they don't care. I cared enough to upgrade it my grade reflects it.

Videogames are better than Magic the Gathering (2009-06-16 08:24)

"The game has an important social aspect to it!" : Would anyone really want to socialize with people that openly discuss dragons and mages over brunch? Would you honestly want to go barhopping with someone who wears a cloak and carries plastic deck holders? The only reason why Magic players aren't systematically executed beat downs is that you have to be careful they're not carrying Lord of the Rings replica weapons. Its better to pick on Trekkies...there's no way those dorks can shiv you with a toy phaser...

"I collect the cards for the artwork!" : Seriously, you're fucking kidding right? Sure some talented artists worked at airbrushing a wizard and shit, but if you're looking to explore art than why would you pay three bucks for a stack of pictures that take up half a card. I enjoy art, but you don't see me dorkily toting around Monet's on 3.5x2.5" pieces of paper. I mean do you realize how stupid you would sound? "Hey guys! Check out this sick holographic Picasso I got, can't wait to put it in my avant-garde deck. Man this is gonna fuck up Dab's post-impressionist deck and nullify that retarded Van Gogh's Ear artifact of his!" ...never mind, I would probably play this...Dabs call me...I have an interesting business proposition for you...

"The game demands strong reasoning skills as it has a strategical/mathematical aspect to it!": This is just stupidity on a gargantuan scale. Are you really going to sit there with a straight face and tell me that you play Magic for the strategy? You're tapping and untapping collectable cards that you purchased! The nerdy dipshit with the most money gets an unfair advantage, where's the strategy in that? Why not play Chess, while depicted as geeky in nearly all films, at least Chess is honorable. If I wanted to engage in a hobby where money corrupts fair competition, I'd run for an election or follow professional sports. Strategy my ass! And math? You're going to defend a games importance because it's mathematical? Fuck that, if you like math go freshen up on your calculus or something. Exploring L'hopitals rule and assembling a paper troll army are two different things.

"You just don't like Magic because you suck at it!" : No, I don't like Magic because it's a pointless waste of money. I do suck at it don't get me wrong, but there are a million things that I'm terrible at that I enjoy doing...like women. Now that I've preempted these ridiculously pointless arguments, I can get down to business. Based on my extensive research, playing Magic the Gathering is similar to being doused with radioactive waste; the longer the exposure, the more harm is done to your social life. I wrote this Rant to sell my Exposure Theory. With that in mind I fashioned up this nifty little chart. Thanks to people at Homeland Security for giving me something to base my chart off from. I can only pray my threat levels turn into the overblown media fuckfest that yours were...

No Exposure: Pretty self-explanatory. It has been scientifically proven that exposure to Magic and success in life are inversely related. These people will live normal happy lives ignorant to the scourge that is Magic the Gathering. They're likely to have sex four to five times a week and make six figures.

Low Exposure: If Magic the Gathering is volcanic eruption of senseless rules and mindless fantasy than people with low exposure are the tragic, ash coated victims of Pompeii. These poor saps played Magic once or twice because everyone else was doing it...an ill thought decision that is likely to haunt them for the rest of their lives. Whereas those severely exposed and highly exposed accept Magic into their lives on some level, a low exposure case has shunned the game but still wears it like a brand of shame. When asked about Magic, it is very possible that they will lie, turn away in dishonor, or simply break down and cry. The harsh truth that they have once handled this abomination is nothing short of traumatic.

High Exposure: This category is composed of people who have played this ridiculous card game for years, but somehow manage to appear normal...science is still searching for an explanation. If people severely exposed to magic are scum-sucking vampires forced into the dark depths of night to avoid societies blinding light of ridicule, than those highly exposed are the daywalkers. A common side effect of high exposure is living a double life. Those highly exposed may have lied their way into relationships, may pretend to be average employees, and may possibly be members of your own family...everyone is suspect. These people live a normal life until they run into another Magic player, and then violently undergo a werewolf-like transformation into card geek. Wanna see if someone you know is at risk? Hold a rare card in front of their face for 20 seconds. If they start to twitch or foam at the mouth, you're looking at a high exposure case. It's not too late to save someone in this scenario, but extensive rehab is needed Severe Exposure: A person who is severely exposed to Magic the Gathering still plays this pointless paper game today and will defend it passionately...if not violently from the slightest criticism. People in this category have most likely made two to three of the arguments I touched base on in the beginning of this Rant. To them, Magic is a lifestyle that's fits neatly between work, weekend LARPing expeditions, and public ridicule. People in this category will openly discuss the benefits of assembling particular decks with anyone who will listen, and generally are seen socializing with people ½ their age as young children are the only demographic naïve enough to pay attention to their mindless drivel. They generally appear unkempt, and oftentimes smell like a truck stop bathroom as showering is a minor concern when orcs and goblins are lurking everywhere. It is without question that the only boobs people of this category will see are those drawn onto their paper obsession; on a side note, these people are the number one purchasers of fleshlights and pocket vaginas, as living in an imaginary world their whole life has condemned them to imaginary sex with plastic genitals...they probably fantasize about fucking an elf something.

At any rate I feel as though I've dragged this out long enough, but I believe I've at least made a solid argument for why Magic the Gathering sucks. Sorry to half the PtP readers for this Rant...well not really...it just seemed to be appropriate after being such a dick...

Qubit processor in Desktops and consoles by 2019? (2009-06-20 22:23)

MIT developed a 8-Qubit Quantum processor which is just like a old school 8-bit NES CPU in functionality. When do you think they'll get to 32-QuBit CPUs so we can run GUIs on them? I hope it's by 2019! Microsoft Windows 10 runs on 32-Qubit/64-Qubit CPU made by AMD and Intel. QRAM blueprints were invented in 2007! At least we know that bits in evolutionary theory still apply to Quantum computers. Rumor is that D-Wave Systems claims to have produced a 128 qubit computer chip D-Wave Systems claims to have produced a 128 qubit computer chip <http://nextbigfuture.com/2008/12/dwave-systems-128-qubit-chip-has-been.html>

Even the Soviets said it right, America can only be on top of the world as a capitalist representative republic (2009-06-22 15:27)

Over the past two decades, Washington upped the ante, encroaching on Russia's borders and encircling it with it with NATO/US bases clearly designed for offense and to block the spread of democratic freedoms to former Soviet Republics. "Diabolical propaganda" made it work by projecting imperial America as a colonial liberator bringing "free market" capitalism to the East. It succeeded as "long as the United States was the world's largest economy and American dollars were in demand as (the) de facto world reserve currency...." For decades, America "portray(ed) itself as the beacon of liberty for newly independent nations of Africa and Asia," as well as former Soviet Republics and Warsaw Pact nations.

Yeah, the soviets were right, we were on top of the world with capitalism, and they got debunked. Then Russia turned capitalist themselves. We turned Japan capitalist so they would trade with us and hopefully would lead to less wars with the Asians unless Korea declares war on the USS John McCain upon boarding like Kim said he would. We could be dominant economy when our economy is large enough to be the leading economy like the Communist party stated. Totalitarian Barack Obama wants to put back in the dark ages! Don't listen to him, he's smiley face fascist that lures the American people with false statements mentened in previous posts. Government can't get it right. Australia is the proof. Their libertarian economy (as seen on Swank Australia on CNBC) has 8.3 % unemployment (US has 9.7 % unemployment) with much much lower population ratio/debt then we do. It's the god awful truth! CNBC likes socialist Kevin Rudd, I believe. I dunno the details. He doesn't act as a socialist when it comes to recessions I know. Libertarians don't side with the democrats, only the conservative party.

Australia increasing military budget to combat the PLA, and the the Obama Administration is decreasing military budget and putting in cap and trade (a large scandle) and nationalized Obamacare. This should be a smoking gun for our Commander in Chief bonehead! This was even socialist Kevin Rudd's idea. He knows capitalism funds military. Big Brother wants state monopoly capitalism. He gave a speech of Gordon Gecko's Children (Gordon Gecko was a Democrat) relating this to a democrat's mess

Government destroying Millionares at home? (2009-07-07 10:47)

Great Recession? What recession? The world's millionaires and billionaires — now totaling 10 million — saw their overall wealth jump 18.9 percent last year, to $39 trillion.

The surge in the stock market in 2009 restored many people back to the ranks of the rich as the financial crisis abated. The number of people with at least $1 million in assets beyond their homes and household goods climbed 17 percent, according to a report on the world's wealth by Merrill Lynch and Capgemini, a Paris-based business consulting firm.

Their total wealth approached the 2007 peak of $40.7 trillion, after a 20 percent plunge to $32.8 trillion in 2008.

“We are already seeing distinct signs of recovery, and in some areas a complete return to 2007 levels of wealth and growth,” Sallie Krawcheck, president of global wealth and investment management at Bank of America, said in a statement. As expected, the most millionaires could be found in the United States, where their ranks rose 16.5 percent, to 2.87 million, last year, according to the report. Their total wealth in North America rose 17.8 percent, to $10.7 trillion. I don't know what this tells you, but for me this means that the same clueless jerks who got us all into the current mess have gone back to their irresponsible lending, borrowing, paper-pushing practices. Why is nobody discussing the very distinct possibility (which by now has become a strong probability) that these losers will get us into a new round of this economic crisis petty soon?

"Grey Alien" DNA found in Skull (2009-07-10 16:20)

- Half as heavy as a human skull
- Half as thick as a human skull
- Twice as durable as a human skull

- Back of skull is flattened
- No sinus cavities
- 200 cm larger than the average adult's brain

Scientists say this is a Grey Alien's skull! You know the one that is famous being amputated at Area 51 or Area S4. It had large eye sockets, barely a nose, a large, round head that is flattened in the back, and an extremely short neck.

Power Grid Trojan/Logic Bomb implanted by 'Cyber Cold War Opponents'. (2009-07-10 20:42)

President Obama has done nothing to straighten up military forces especially Air Force Space Command (aka has USAF Cyber command) on the grim situation that China and Russia now know our entire power grid infrastructure and may use blackouts as social engineering for their defense. So far the booby trapped trojans/logic bomb haven't done any collateral damage as it has a remote control fuse it seems. The President has been overly cowardly to not bring up this concern as he is too busy trying to make friends with the Europeans. China and Russia have this Asian pact where they give us Intelligence on terrorism, but they make up their loss of sheer political power in the cyber cold war it seems. It could be a social engineering game of cat and mouse with blackouts as severe as the Northeast Blackout of 2003 . (caused by UNIX glitch which put the plant into safe mode)

The recent news about href="http://www.nytimes.com/2009/03/29/technology/29spy.html?hp=&page-wanted=print"> class=Spelle>GhostNet , the suspected cyber espionage activity of the Chinese government uncovered by The Information Warfare Monitor is alarming news, to say the least. More than a thousand computers have been compromised with apparent ease, many in high-value secure government offices. Researchers revealed that the compromises were so sophisticated, that confidential documents were removed, video cameras and microphones turned on to observe events, and sophisticated key-loggers tracked everything that was typed. According to two of my sources well-placed in government and computer security, this is just the frightening tip of an enormous iceberg. Many will recall my report on the FBI's concern about counterfeit network router hardware being installed in businesses and government agencies all across the nation. Many were concerned that the counterfeit routers contained code that allowed for a broad range of back-doors into secure computer systems, as well as covert kill-switches that would shut-down after receiving a remote signal. Indeed, several analysts found thousands of additional lines of machine code as compared to a non-counterfeit. Since the counterfeit hardware originated in China, the href="http://www.fbi.gov/pressrel/pressrel08/finch050908.htm">FBI was very concerned, so much so that they responded to my report. Our work here, together on abovetopsecret, broke that important story to the world. I've recently spoken to two well-placed computer security experts who firmly believe there is a frightening connection between GhostNet and the counterfeit routers. Their fear is that we are mere months away from a series of significant cyber attacks on key private sector businesses and portions of our infrastructure. My first contact is a highly experienced computer security expert who often works directly with law enforcement and intelligence agencies. Asking for my assurances of complete confidence in his anonymity, he revealed that there is a great deal of concern, both among his IT counterparts and security experts within law enforcement, that GhostNet is a sophisticate reconnaissance system designed to locate the counterfeit routers. Many are speculating that the gHost RAT class=Spelle>trojan (delivered via email and has been in broad use for months) may be triggered by recognizing key attributes of the counterfeit routers, and href="http://www.scribd.com/doc/13731776/Tracking-GhostNet-Investigating-a-Cyber-Espionage-Network">reports back the details of the exploitable network. Experts are concerned that the number of infected systems discovered by The Information Warfare Monitor may very well be a tiny percentage of networks that are known to be exploitable, but not yet infected. GhostNet is cataloging potential networks and refining the cyber weapons for the next round of attacks. The activity seen thus far has been proof-of-concept tests of computer take-over software in preparation for larger-scale attacks - a weapons test if you will. My second contact is an IT manager at a large financial products company who tracked down and replaced a number of counterfeit routers in their network. As their internal security team examined all systems connected to the removed routers, he was alarmed at their findings. Nearly all of the Windows-based computer systems connected to the routers contained some form of malware. In comparison to other Windows computers on their network, only 10-20 % on average had any type of malware. He cautioned that all of the systems on the counterfeit routers were new systems in public-facing installations (branch offices), and a higher-than normal infection rate was expected. However, the 100 % infection-rate was unusual. Both of these computer security professionals are increasingly concerned about the convergence of these two items that appear to point back to either the Chinese government, or Chinese state- class=Spelle>sponsored cyber criminals. The report from Information Warfare Monitor stops short of specifically naming the Chinese government, or intelligence agencies within the government, as the culprit of these attacks. However, we do know that their intelligence agencies and law enforcement units have acted upon information obtained through GhostNet .

My contacts feel we (western nations) are mere months away from the second, more serious wave, of attacks designed to harm key corporations and interrupt vital infrastructure. The hope is that GhostNet is a tool of cyber criminals – after all, if that is the case, we’re safe, no criminal would cripple the networks that provide their bounty. What worries them most, however, is the combination of our complete lack of preparation (the U.S. DHS cyber security division is a joke), the stunning sophistication and multi-tiered nature of these attacks, and the disturbing potential connection to the Chinese government. To be clear, they feel a second wave of attacks are not likely to be a national disaster that cripples the nation, that may be reserved for the third wave. The conspiracy theorist in me observes a number of causes for concern. (1) - The mainstream press appears to be working hard to spike or avoid any connection of GhostNet back to the counterfeit router issue. (2) - The media, especially US-based media, is typically over-playing the "hacker criminal" aspect of this story so as to avoid concern over state-sponsored cyber warfare – they know we (western nations) are at a disadvantage. (3) - The Chinese government has recently made a great deal of noise voicing concern over the US dollar and the need for a global currency. Causing harm to the US infrastructure through a well-placed cyber attack may significantly weaken the dollar and hasten their financial agenda. (4) - After all that has happened after September, 2001, especially the increase in sophisticated Internet attacks as well as known state-sponsored cyber terrorism, why has the government <http://online.wsj.com/article/SB123844579753370907.html>>let us down?

These developments indicate the Internet equivalent of the 9/11 attacks may very well be on the horizon. And again, we are not only not ready, we’re completely clueless electromagnetic fusion containment engine (2009-07-15 16:24)

Then someone threw a switch and activated a hoist attached to some cables that were attached to a big tarp. The tarp was lifted straight up, and sitting on this huge steel platform was a giant electromagnetic fusion containment engine! And I immediately knew that, because its configuration was similar to mine but it was the size of a Greyhound bus. Mine was about the size of a large watermelon!

The Electromagnetic Fusion Containment Engine, because they are so fast. There is nothing like it. The liquid fuel and solid propellant engines are like Model Ts compared to a Lamborghini. This thing took off so fast. It went from zero mph to 8,754 mph in about 4.6 seconds. It was so fast that you couldn't even see it.

You can recognize engines that are comparable. If I had an internal combustion engine taken out of a Model A Ford and had it sitting on the ground and you pulled an engine out of a Viper today and placed it alongside, you would recognize that they operate on the same principle of internal combustion. However, the difference in performance between the two is unbelievable.

It was the same situation with my little engine and this thing they had stored underground. They both ran on the same principle, the same configuration, but the level of sophistication is like that of the Model A compared to the Viper engine. This thing they had was so powerful. There were so many design features that I didn't recognize, for reasons that became clear.

So how is my shadow showing up on this thing? And stranger still was that the shadow moved about a half a second behind me. That really got my attention. And I thought, "If this is what I think it is, a heat sensitive recognition alloy." And then I realized we don't have [any] known material that could do that. So I looked up at the engine and I asked for permission to climb to the top because I wanted to see the damaged area. The thing had a hole about four feet in diameter in the side of it, and this was the area that most interested me. Now, think of a figure eight, and right where the two circles cross each other is the eye of the hurricane. That's where the damage was located on this engine. Knowing my own engine, I was assuming that this thing had experienced some kind of breach in the electromagnetic flux field that acts as the containment wall that harnesses the power of the reactor engine.

These engines basically function like a magnetic bottle or sphere, and inside you have contained the power of the Sun or a hydrogen bomb continuously detonating. It's not impossible to figure out how this works, because it occurs all the time out in space. Black holes can suck an entire galaxy full of suns into their point of singularity. Obviously a black hole has no problem containing that fusion energy.

What I did was mathematically figure out a way to artificially create a synthetic black hole. And because it is based on a figure-eight design, once it has stabilized it will always implode and consume itself without pulling everything around it in. But this engine at Area 51 had lost its stabilization in the figure eight, and that's why I was so curious about the hole.

Anyway, when I placed my hands on the engine to pull myself up, I began climbing up the exterior of the engine, which was designed with an exoskeletal structure. The best way to explain this is to look at the designs of H. R. Geiger; he is the designer that created all the sets of the Alien movies.

They looked almost like fibre optic cables filled with some kind of fluid. They were very small tubes the size of angel hair pasta. There were millions of these things cascading over the hull of this engine. And I thought, "Boy, these patterns look familiar." Then it dawned on me: they looked like neural synaptic firing patterns. There were millions of them going out everywhere on this thing. So I thought that maybe the engine was designed with an exoskeletal brain.

It was warm, which didn't make any sense at all. It was so cold in that hangar, you could almost see your breath. I looked around on the floor and saw no power lines. And I asked myself, "How in the world could this alloy be staying warm?" And it was really hard. It was the hardest material I have ever touched. It didn't give anywhere. The surface cohesion tension on it felt more like a baby's skin. It was supple, but hard and warm.

I continued to climb up until I reached the centre area. It had these vertebrae that branched off, cascading, fibre-like. They looked almost like fibre optic cables filled with some kind of fluid. They were very small tubes the size of angel hair pasta. There were millions of these things cascading over the hull of this engine. And I thought, "Boy, these patterns look familiar." Then it dawned on me: they looked like neural synaptic firing patterns. There were millions of them going out everywhere on this thing. So I thought that maybe the engine was designed with an exoskeletal brain. And at that point, I reached out and grabbed some of the fibres and found that they were really tough and that there was fluid in them. And wherever I touched, no matter what I touched, there would be a reaction to it like a tremor of visual lights.

Before I came out of that damaged area, totally pissed off. Because when I got down in this thing, they told me to make it brief. So I got down and looked in the area. Man, there was some incredible-looking technology up and down this engine. And I couldn't get more than three feet into it before I came up to a wall. And this wall. It was like the iris/shutter on a camera lens. It had lots of interlocking fans that contract or expand - and I've always thought that would make the coolest door. Well, there was this little round pod-thing there, and I just put my hand on it; and when I did, the wall just shuttered open.

It could have been. I have no idea. But I got to look deeper into the engine. And what I saw in there was fascinating. It was such a trip being there because whenever I worked on my fusion engines, everything was so small; some parts I even had to machine under a microscope. Now, here was a replication of my basic design that was big enough to walk through. But man, this thing that I had manufactured to achieve a certain function in my engine, this thing would have something else in its place. And this something else would be stuff I couldn't begin to recognize. There were these crystals that were facing each other. They were fabulous-looking crystals. And they were integrated into this plasma duct type thing.

And so I assumed that the reaction they were seeing hadn't happened for them, because wherever I touched it there were these really amazing blue and white swirls moving down through the hull of this thing. It looked like wavelengths that you see on an oscilloscope.

And in my engine, I had such a hard time getting a cyclotron to curve the blast waves I needed for propulsion. This thing had some kind of venting system that allowed them to flush their plasma out through an area that looked like the gills of a shark. The whole thing was so organic looking. It looked like a living machine - both organic and inorganic incorporated together. It was an oxymoron. How do you explain something like that? So anyway, I just got to see a lot of stuff in there that I couldn't believe.

Tax (Cap) and trade slows economy to screeching halt (2009-07-19 11:26)

This global warming commie bill is a clone of the BTU tax that Al Gore tried to pass thru congress in 1993 and most democrats voted against due to the disasterous conquences and thank goodness it did not pass, because it is 4 trillion plus the infinant healthcare reform that is another 2 trillion. We were so much better without it. Then liberal congress has to bail out Californai, because that state is bankrupted under their own creations (San Fransico is 33 % of the problem)...Barney Frank wants that. And then we're the EU. Michael Steele calls Democrats insane, cashing out monopoly money. The tax and trade is flawed, it'll make the green companies rich. It costs 2 real jobs for one green job according to Spain and they have a socialist economy that is having huge debt problems and relatively high unemployment. This is not the time for the democrat party to become a Labor party in my opinion though Democrats seem like totalitarians so they will do tax and trade anyways. They never liked nuclear power plants anyway, and no other foreign liberal hated nuclear nearly as much because they were happy to have the technology. This UN tax and trade on fossil fuel plants is specifically to drag our economy down due to it being the largest tax increase in American history. And then we have the smiley face fascist president trying to sell us this toxic product known as tax and trade that is 800 billion dollars or more. I know I do this, because I won't have much of a second opinion. NASA even admits that the sun does the heat and that global warming or successor to the phrase is BS (ie: Gallialo's sun spots theory). NASA did this when their budget is decreasing due to the dystopian Obamacare when Barney Frank admitted this on O-Reilly Factor. I fear that Michael Jackson died just in time for the ATSC network to stay mostly quiet about this topic until it was signed and passed yesterday. Journalism is dead, but that is nothing new. We should have a national debate on it to exploit how dumb it is. European Union tried tax and trade and they're borrowing heavily as a result of being dumb. President agrees with the former Clinton political advisor Morris, so the Democrats are rushing this thru the chamber before people find out...nothing new to us.

US needs 100 more nuclear/hydrogen power plants before 2030! (2009-07-19 11:27)

United States needs to construct 100 new nuclear reactors by 2030 – doubling the nation's current number of 104 plants – if it is serious about slashing carbon emissions while still producing enough electricity to keep up with American needs. We haven't built a nuclear power plant since 1977 and China is building a lot right now. One of primary driving forces, if not the primary force, of Americas GDP growth was cheap energy, something the communist state capitalist (socialist) Democrats are taking away from us! Remember 2 good jobs disappear as result of one green job in Spain and a further amount of national debt. You could apply the same money to nuclear power plants and they pay for themselves, because they're producing a lot with so little material.

Now BIG BROTHER or the MESSIAH closed Yucca Mountain Nuclear storage construction which is supposed to be done in approximately 2020 if on time, BECAUSE HE IS ROTTEN TO THE BONE, maybe a little insane! Now, I'll have very high energy costs for the rest of my life thanks to "THAT ONE". So you see the craziness of the Democrat party? They screwed us, because they live a lie which is global warming. You know? Sunspots and Sun flares. They want the UN to have that IMF International Dollar? So they got what they wanted at the cost of making US a United Socialist States of America and downsizing our military spending for no clear logical reason except to make people vote for Labor Democrats or CPUSA Democrats more often. A solution to tens of thousands of tons of nuclear waste piling up at reactors across the country WAS YUCCA MOUNTAIN and Reprocessing of spent Uranium! IT was going to be completed by 2030 when we're supposed to have 100 more plants built or have severe energy shortages and blackouts. I remember that the blackout in 2003 cut electricity for North East states USA, Pennsylvania, and Nova Scotia, from a simple UNIX error. Which community wants their electricity to cut out all the time!

Think of our solitary New Yorker on the Upper West Side as a 1,400-watt bulb that never sleeps—that's the national per-capita average demand for electric power from homes, factories, businesses, the lot. Our average citizen burns about twice as bright at 4 pm in August, and a lot dimmer at 4 am in December; grown-ups burn more than kids, the rich more than the poor; but it all averages out: 14 floor lamps per person, lit round the clock. Convert this same number back into a utility's supply-side jargon, and a million people need roughly 1.4 "gigs" of power—1.4 gigawatts (GW). Running at peak power, Entergy's two nuclear units at Indian Point generate just under 2 GW. So just four Indian Points could take care of New York City's 7-GW round-the-clock average. Six could handle its peak load of about 11.5 GW. And if we had all-electric engines, machines, and heaters out at the receiving end, another ten or so could power all the cars, ovens, furnaces—everything else in the city that oil or gas currently fuels.

Think later, build now. Use Stimulus money for building them. Nuclear or Hydrogen power plants pay for themselves! Then we have to pay for all the illegal immigrants who don't pay for electricity costs, all 40+ million of them who come in here. I rather have hydrogen power plants over nuclear power plants, because it's more bang for the buck. You know fusion has much greater output than fission. Our population raises 2 million every year, and our current nuclear output on the power grid is 19.4. It would sustain that much. I'm afraid the green power plants won't either. I don't think we have time to wait for ITER based hydrogen power plants to be perfected. I could be wrong, but I fear Congressmen/women are pending way to long than our safety net with allow. It could be a catosphery. In other counties both liberal, conservatives, and socialists all support nuclear power? There is something wrong with the Democrats, of course they're insane, but retarded too? God help us. The movie "China Syndrome" with Robert Redford and Jane Fonda was 30 years ago, lets start a hydrogen economy revolution spark before history books say superpower falls due to nutty politics that refused to harness the atom for energy. We're bankrupted right now, California is bankrupted due to the improper savings measures, the 49 states are paying for it soon enough. I just don't want be the inevitable domino effect. This is the only way to get back onto a more common sense road.

The Labor Party of Australia would never decline building fossil fuel power plants for its citizens. They're not stupid you know. If Big Brother was trying to copy Kevin Rudd some ways, why resist that simple aspect of it? No Cap and trade (BTU tax) regime makes any sense either (ie: Bankrupts fossil fuel power plants)! BTU is a hoax to depress us Americans! Say no to smiley face fascism!

Progressive churches rule Wisconsin = Democratic majority (2009-07-28 09:20)

The reason why St. Croix County is progressive is the county has a lot of progressive churches. Evangelical Lutheran Church in America owns the Wisconsin synod and thus Democratically elected Senate and State Assembly majority of elections. Union backed Evangelical churches.

The Aurora spaceship went to Mars already (2009-08-26 15:04)

The Aurora is a moderate-sized spacefaring vehicle. The late National Security Council scientist Dr. Michael Wolf of NSC's unacknowledged Special Studies Group subcommittee, (formerly called MJ-12), has stated that the Aurora can operate on both conventional fuel and antigravity field propulsion systems. He further stated that the Aurora can travel to the Moon. Wolf had also disclosed to me that the U.S. has a small station on the Moon, and a tiny observation post on Mars. Thus I doubt that Dr. Wolf would characterize the Aurora thus, unless it was a vessel already used in making such trips. He disclosed additionally that the Aurora operates out of Area 51, (Groom Dry Lake Air Force Station), at the northeast corner of the Nellis AFB Range, north of Las Vegas, Nevada.

If Auroa went to Mars than why do we need a The Orion and the Ares 1! Maybe it is like the Confederate Airforce where NASA needs to keep up the human technology spacecraft spirit alive.

Speex 1.2 vs. Aotuv Vorbis 5.7 podcasts (2009-08-28 16:14)

I actually knew about Speex for as long as I was playing with this one encoder for 3 years now. Speex is Vorbis below 32 Kbps. At 32 Kbps Speex sounds more distorted with annoying clipping than Vorbis and saves 5 KB. Think of the old LAME 3.84 or Blade or Xing encoders in 2000 and Speex is exactly like that at low bitrates. I tried it in Firefox 3.5 and no support yet.

As far as my knowledge to achieve aotuv vorbis below 32 kbps, you must convert the podcast to 16-bit PCM first and then Vorbis can compress it down to 16 kbps with a front end GUI. That kind if erases the need for Speex at 16 kbps. This AlexSBrown does his speex at 8 kbps in narrowband, but I cannot get mine to sound nearly as good.

I am wondering if anyone would prefer future podcasts at 24 Kbps Speex instead of Vorbis? If I don't get an answer, I will take it as a no.

Update OS day Episode IV: Why not? (2009-09-01 17:45)

Puppy Linux 4.3 beta 3, Linux Kernel 2.6.30

Even I know about PS3 firmware ;) Cos I'm just that smart!

I thought why not?...the Linux apocalypse is over since Update OS day episode III earlier this year. Isn't KDE, 4.3.1 a looker! There are bugs, for example I had to install Nvidia drivers. I got Computer Garage to download me the latest Milestone for $15. The final version comes out Nov. 15. At last, GRUB has EXT4 support so the bootup process can be in EXT4. In Fedora 11 [since May], it used ancient EXT3 file system for bootup. I also have Gnome 2.28 installed. Episode V should be around November 15, 2009.

Some annoying bugs [for my reference] grub and bootsplash still use 11.1 artwork

HAL may crash, leaving XOrg without keyboard and mouse (Bug #537452), work-around: update with 'hal' package from Base:System

License information on install is displayed in German (Bug #533026)

GNOME live system asks for root password to mount file system (Bug #537343), work-around: just "Cancel"

GNOME YaST Control Center cannot be started (Bug #537470), work-around: zypper in yast2-qt;yast2 -qt

The PackageKit permanently requires authentication (Bug #538353), work-around: just "Cancel"

Intel 4965 wireless is completely broken (Bug #537112)

Holy Hell! Win2003 and IIS is easy to crack. (2009-09-03 08:47)

I am getting a MCSE and Security+ degree. O_o. I've only taken 3 Linux class in my life time. I don't think that Win2008 R2 (kernel 6.1) would make too much difference from Win2003. This is why pros need the latest OS due to 'security holes'. I won't care unless this means my job, it'll probably come to that too.

I still believe Windows Vista/7 is great for gaming.

7. The Melancholy of Haruhi Suzumiya

I was late to the bandwagon with this show – the initial hype during its airing passed me by, and it wasn't until a few seasons later that I attempted the show. It's probably just as well that I waited – Haruhi came at a time when I was just discovering the world of ongoing series and downloads

6. Tengen Toppa Gurren-Lagann its just a very feel-good series that wants to do nothing more than entertain you. And by god was I ever entertained! TTGL takes you on a rollercoaster of emotions, once you've committed to the series you can't stop yourself from going along for the ride. Full to bursting with awesome larger than life characters, epic speeches, eye-popping action and a plot that kicks reason to the kerb

5. Code Geass / R2

The whole Fabulous package of Code Geass seems to be custom-made to appeal to me – its got the pretty CLAMP character designs, smooth stylish Sunrise animation, roller skating mecha, anti-hero lead with magic eye powers, fantastic voice cast, and brilliant music; really there's nothing more I could really want out of a series! Code Geass caught my attention with its very first episode,

4. Cowboy Bebop

Unlike so many shows that are hailed as 'must-sees' Cowboy Bebop actually delivers on its claims – its just a remarkably well made series from beginning to end. I'm not a fan of slice of life or episodic shows, which is why I kept putting off watching Cowboy Bebop, but this is how you do episodic right

3. Death Note

I know that Death Note is over-rated and flawed, but fuck it – I love the series to bits! I had read the manga a while before the anime started airing, so knew the story and what twists to expect. Despite this I was still gripped by Madhouse's adaptation. Really, the direction and animation that this series displayed was something special – completely overblown (eating crisps and writing in a notebook will never be viewed the same way again) but absolutely perfect for building the tension required to make Death Note work

2. Shiki

I can't even begin to tell you how much time I spent thinking/writing/talking about this series; its a very rare series that gets me that completely obsessed with it. Anime that are truly chilling are rare, but the latter half of Shiki had some of the creepiest, most disturbing scenes that I've ever seen animated – the horror tag is well earned.

1. Fullmetal Alchemist / Brotherhood original FMA was my first taste of the series, and even though it was mostly anime original, it was a very well crafted show and excelled at creating believable drama. However, the recently finished FMA: Brotherhood series, completely blew the original out of the water on nearly every level.

Why Canada is Better (2009-09-09 14:40)

To many Americans, war is the best thing ever. It's CNN filming explosions, leading to the story where a soldier's sacrifice teaches a nation about courage, starring Bruce Willis. In fact, war brings out more emotions than the Super Bowl and AIDS combined. With a good enough war, executives could put somebody in an Uncle Sam outfit singing the National Anthem to kick off the NAACP Image Awards, and there would not be a dry eye in the house.

hat said, the U.S. is 3-2-1 since its inception (not including the Civil War, which would have added a win and a loss to the record). Note that I am generously not including the current Iraq war in those statistics. Because, really, who knows how that one is gonna turn out? Meanwhile, Canada is 5-0-1 during the same period, including a 1-0 record against the Americans (1812). Moreover, while the Americans were deciding what color panties would look best on J. Edgar Hoover, the Canadians were ass-deep in the two world wars from the very beginning, completing every lousy job the Allies could throw at them.

Perhaps more to the point, many Americans, their chief executive included, probably couldn't pick out Canada on a map. If we Americans tried to invade Canada, we would end up mobilizing to Minnesota or somewhere and declaring victory after bombing the hell out of the Mall of America. Which reminds me—Canucks torched the White House once when we were passing through D.C

This is going to hurt for you to hear, but American beer is a laughingstock. I'm not trying to be a snob here, but even if I lost my sense of taste in some sort of firecracker incident, I still wouldn't touch the questionable slop that passes for beer south of the border. There's an old joke all Canadians are taught at a young age: How is sex in a canoe like American beer? They're both fucking close to water.

I can say is that many Americans don't wish to be identified as such. While traveling throughout Europe, I encountered literally dozens of people with Canadian flags sewn onto their backpacks. As it turned out, just about all of them were Americans posing as Canadians. This is apparently a very common tactic of American travelers. Why are young Americans ashamed to be recognized as such? You'd never see Canadian travelers sewing the stars and stripes onto their belongings, after all.

In case my arguments are insufficient, there is actually a scientific, internationally-acknowledged way to tell which country is better.

Tell me which country has been ranked highest 10 times. In case history's not important to you either, check out the most recent Index. Canada ranked 4th, while the U.S. finished a dismal 12th, behind nations like Japan and France.

That's right. A bunch of midget, panty-obsessed salaryman drones and a nation of wine-sipping collaborators enjoy a higher standard of life than you.

Canadians live in a climate that makes them impervious to pain, Canadians are better educated, and their donuts and beer are clearly superior. And I haven't even touched on Canada's low crime rates, relaxed drug laws, or universal health care (without supersize military funding of course).

And finally, it's Sega Dreamcast's twelve American birthday. I was excited at the time to own one to play Soul Calibur (10/10).

AMD Bulldozer 12 core in 2011 (2009-09-16 07:47)

This is going to be a long stretch from the Intel QX6700 (3 GHz) and the new Bulldozer 12 core processor in 2011. I doubt there will be more than one DirectX 11 game that I want throughout the next 2 years. They'd all be DirectX 10. I have two Geforce GTX 280s, well enough to play any game at the highest settings until 2011. I tried out hardware acceleration and Windows 7 is very, very fast on an mediocre Athlon 64 X2, 3 GB of RAM thanks to a Geforce 8800 GTX. The Geforce GTX 280 SLI has 4 times the stream processors and almost 3 times the memory. AMD is always cheaper than Intel, only that Intel had a Quad core CPU at the right price in 2k7. 32 nm CPU so power it uses less voltage than my current quad-core. All my DirectX 11 games could very well be Xbox 720 if I even care to play.

In 2011, you still probably see all these new DirectX 9 games. The game developers said on gameindustry.biz that the current generation won't end until 2011. Then what's next? I say a DirectX 10 and DirectX 11 dual spec'd games? A technology I had since November 2006! Not to worry, I'll have DirectX 11 GPU by December 2012 in THE PC (not counting Xbox 720) when there is an awesome DirectX 11 game worth having. By then the AMD R800 core GPU will be very affordable. My next PC is probably due 2011 or 2012 depending on both money flow, and worthy software. If the word crazy enters your mind, just remember that the 16 core is due in 2011 around the same time and that the 1st gen of 12 core CPUs is due 2010.

I had my new PC just before the White house called it an official recession.

That's my Intel Core i7 980x from Christmas 2010

F-22 Raptor (2009-09-16 15:14)

The F-22 Raptor advanced stealth fighter is built by a joint effort of the Lockheed-Martin Skunk Works and Boeing's Phantom Works. In crude imitation of extraterrestrial starcraft, the guidance system of this aircraft incorporates special Artificial Intelligence (AI), meaning that Star Visitor genetic material is incorporated into the semi-alive and autonomously-functioning guidance system mated with the aircraft. In addition the F-22 has antigravity field propulsion capability, which is exercised selectively by the pilot who is in mental connection with the AI guidance system, which activates the antigravity propulsion as needed in coordination with the F-22's conventional jet engine thrust, to effect the maneuvering of the F-22 Raptor. I have personally witnessed a F-22 stop on its tail in mid-air and dance slowly and gently about without regard for gravity's pull

Why I cheated and ignored the Zune HD (2009-09-19 07:22)

...because I bought a Creative Zen Touch 40 GB for 1/4 the asking price it (Zune HD = $299). LAME 3.97 still sounds decent. Now I have 3 working mp3 players, two 20 GB, and one 40 GB and i don't use them all that much. The Zune HD is supposed to be better than the 3rd gen iPod Touch due to better battery life. Zen Touch would have the same battery life as the Zune HD.

Quad layer Bluray and 2 HVDs to choose from: Worth it (2009-09-23 14:18)

LOL, even though I have a bluray rewritable installed, I still use single layer DVDs a lot at home. I written to bluray only for my music collection which only took up 1 SL-BDR. Now there is going to be 3 HVDs from GE, 100 GB one from Optware and

[[General Electric]] Global Research Center have made a [[HVD|holographic disc]] which is the same size of a DVD/CD, yet can hold 500 Gigabytes of Data. It is going to be released onto the market in less than four years. General Electric has been working on their HVD for six years. Their technology is compatible with CD, DVD, and Bluray. Still Handling Homeland Security With a 9/10 Attitude (2009-09-23 15:27)

The feds rejected the imams' attempt to shake down the airline with a discrimination lawsuit. But three years later, law enforcement officers are still battling the flying extortionists. Political correctness remains the handmaiden of terrorism.

Over at the Justice Department, Attorney General Eric Holder is committed to eliminating racial "disparities" in law enforcement. His anti-profiling allies at the ACLU and something called the "Rights Working Group" are working to end Bush administration counterterrorism initiatives, "including FBI surveillance and questioning, special registration programs, border stops, immigration enforcement programs and the creation of 'no fly lists.'" The ACLU and RWG have appealed to the United Nations to intervene through the "U.N. Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD)" – which they say is empowered to require sovereign governments "to review national, state and local policies and amend or repeal laws deemed to be creating or perpetuating discrimination."

Now, add anti-gun activism and stubborn union squabbling to the mix. As I reported two weeks ago, the Obama administration has quietly gutted the nation's most highly trained post-9/11 counterterrorism rail security team. According to multiple government sources who declined to be identified for fear of retribution, the Office of Security Strategy and Special Operations' East Coast and West Coast teams have not worked in a counterterrorism capacity since the summer. Their rifles were put under lock and key after Amtrak Vice President for Security Strategy and Special Operations Bill Rooney and Amtrak Inspector General Fred Weiderhold, who played an instrumental role in creating OSSSO's predecessor at Amtrak, the Counter-Terrorism Unit (CTU), were pushed out by Team Obama.

Amtrak confirmed to me last week that the elite members of the specialized OSSSO no longer carry long-arm weapons, which played a vital role in the unit's show-of-force patrols. Government sources blame anti-gun hostility inside Amtrak for the move. Amtrak also confirmed to me that West Coast members of the rail security unit – most of whom come from Special Forces, counterterrorism and other military service – have been denied police credentials. According to OSSSO sources on both coasts, the rival Amtrak Police Department, in conjunction with the local police union in California, have stymied the process over labor issues (OSSSO members are non-union).

"Amtrak fully expects to have a resolution in the near future," I was told by the rail agency's press office last week. In the meantime, according to a high-ranking homeland security source, Amtrak's unionized police chief has taken over and makes counterterrorism deployment decisions based on pay squabbles. The rail agency is still dealing with grievances filed by Amtrak police officers over compensation during the Democratic National Convention in Denver. Says my rail security source: "The deciding factor is overtime, not security."

Nautilus traveling to space station (2009-10-04 15:38)

The Nautilus is another space-faring craft, a secret military spacecraft which operates by magnetic pulsing. It operates out of the unacknowledged new headquarters of the U.S. Space Command, deep under a mountain in Utah. It makes twice-a-week trips up to the secret military-intelligence space station, which has been in deep space for the past thirty years, and manned by U.S. and USSR (now CIS) military astronauts. The Nautilus also is used for superfast surveillance operations, utilizing its ability to penetrate target country airspace from above from deep space, a direction not usually expected. It is manufactured jointly by Boeing's Phantom Works near Seattle and EU's Airbus Industries Anglo-French consortium. During travel to Washington State several years ago, I had a conversation with a former Boeing executive who worked in their Phantom Works, Boeing's black projects division, (roughly the equivalent of Lockheed's Skunk Works). The executive confirmed what I had earlier learned from an intelligence insider: that Boeing had teamed up with Europe's Airbus Industrie to manufacture the Nautilus.

Going Next Generation November 27st (2009-10-06 00:47)

I'll just pick the Geforce GTX 380 SLI when it comes out November 29th. Radeon HD 5870 crossfire doesn't work in a SLI board.

First internal cards are based on A1-stepping and feature 1024MB of GDDR5 memory, with all the memory chips located on front of the card. There are also cards with 2048MB, but we were unable to confirm the codename for the 2GB board. Oddly enough, the 1GB card has a codename fitting nicely in the current line-up, even behind one upcoming dual-GPU single-PC part, which would imply that nVidia has the cards for several weeks now.

According to the German site Hardware-Infos, the sample boards now come with a higher GPU clock. The alleged GT300 A1 silicon ticks at 0.7 GHz, with 512 cores working at 1.6 GHz. GDDR5 memory was upped to 1.1 GHz QDR or 4.4 GT/s [billion transfers per second], resulting in memory bandwidth of massive 281.6 GB/s. According to information we had, nVidia firstly clocked the at 1:1 ratio with GeForce GTX280 for a baseline comparison. If the leaked information is true and those clocks remain final, that would mean GTX380 missed its targeted clock by a double-digit percentage. Still, a beast nevertheless.

If the figure of 1.6 GHz for 512 shaders is final, then the chip can achieve 2457 GFLOPS, e.g. 2.46 TFLOPS. This is a very good jump from 933 GFLOPS on the original GTX280. But the dark horse here is not the single-precision score, but rather the efficiency of dual-precision format. If our sources were true, GT300 chip has radically improved way of calculating dual precision operations and should bring anywhere between 7-10x improvement in performance. ✖

<http://www.driverheaven.net/reviews.php?reviewid=842 &pageid=14>

It'd be funny if both the Playstation 4 and Xbox 720 had a Radeon HD 5780 chip, because by then it would be the one of the cheapest DirectX 11 chips on the market. It seems to me the G60 didn't work out for PS3, because Geforce 6800 GTX couldn't do 1080p while the G70 barely could. It is amazing they can do 1080p with only 256 MB VRAM on PS3 too.

President Bush and Amitai Etzioni (2009-10-11 10:02)

Overall, President George W. Bush was somewhat liked by conservatives even though he was a medicare supporting neo-conservative which obviously goes to young and elderly due to no private insurance making a profit on them. One of the people that G.W. Bush associated himself with was Amitai Etzioni. Amitai Etzioni graduated from George Washington University and was a communitarian. Amitai said that he was trained by Martin Buber in Jerusalem. Amitai said that communitarianism has its roots from ancient Greece and the Old and New Testaments Communitarianism is very similar to Third Way. Communitarians explore such as the balance between rights and responsibilities in society, community justice, multiculturalism, the community's moral voice, and developing global society." The program was a successor to G. H.W. Bush's "Thousand Points of Light". G.W. Bush sought rather than officially designating Communities of Character, use heroes to tell the story.

Communitarianism calls for balancing the rights of the individual with the rights of the community. The government-sponsored neighborhood associations are being used to create the illusion of community buy-in. The government wants citizen buy-in, but they actually manage it by creating their own government-sponsored neighborhood associations and then manufacture consent.

RIP Geocities, Archive.org has most of my pages on their server. (2009-10-15 17:14)

I logged into my account at nightwalkers101 and noticed that Geo-cities is going down on October 28. I sent Archive.org all of my site's links within the last week. Hope they archive in time. My site was one of the better looking, because it was done in namo webeditor5. My bandwidth is exceeded. Damn that was a cool site. Videogame pages on it rocked, and was relaxing.

This was the place for webpages before there was Angelfire Myspace or Facebook.

My power tool and utilities collection! (2009-10-19 08:26)

See, I collected power toys as well as videogames. I mow the lawn and execute wood. Nothing to fancy, and I'm not like spending too much on these toys. I don't have black and decker or john deere lawn mowers. All these are used powertools I got off Ebay so they didn't break the budget! I bought the tractor used from an anonymous homeowner USED. In this economy, you never know when you'll come across a diamond in the rough.

OpenSuse 11.2 mini review (2009-10-22 22:50)

The downside to OpenSuse 11.2 is that there aren't as many games as there was, and some even crash! I don't get Revolution's Software Beneath a Steel Sky or Penguin Command or Super Tux anymore. I'm using it to download the full version of Windows 7 Ultimate (7600) with Kget and the part file is a life saver. One thing I like is the stupid login screen won't appear at night erasing downloads which is again the only brilliance OpenSuse 11.2 has. Why do I have to go to a OpenSuse FTP and look up a *insertprogram*_11.2_x86-64.rpm everytime I want something new to work? Ubuntu 7.1 recognizes every program, but then they won't load for some reason.

Applications 7.0 - where are all the games? And why do I not have a FFMPEG decoder on the DVD yet? Either is very disappointing.

Stability 8.5 - some programs refuse to load like GNU chess...all are games.

Usefulness 10.0 - Got me Windows 7600 free.

Installation 7.0 - had to use the repair installation twice due to kernel panic after the first repair job.

Technology 10 - state-of-the-art EXT4 and OpenOffice 3.1.1 is compatible with DocX.

Overall 8.4 - Leaves enough to be desired. No FFMPEG Where is WINE on here...unchecked at Installation? Who knows. The NV drivers are so/so. The official video drivers are a lot faster.

Stable Suse 11.2 review

OpenSuse 11.2 review.

I know I gave the beta a 1 star. I've been playing with Suse Linux 11.2 since November 2009. It saves your butt on laptops. When the Ubuntu 9.1 DVD stalls and Windows 7 giving you HDD errors or DVD-ROM errors during installations; Suse Linux 11.2 will install all three KDE, Gnome and XFCE that almost dead laptop HDD that was formatted on too many times. When that Windows partition really sucks, you can format the NTFS partition in BTRFS in Yast! Oh yeah, OpenOffice 3.1 is already compatible with DOCX, and the Crossover Linux RPM works without dependency hell problems like Ubuntu can! This is my favorite Linux distro! It is as stable as Windows 7 and Linux kernel wont be attacked constantly, because it's Linux! Fedora 12 had dependency problems with Crossover Linux, I had to use the shell version on Fedora....

10 out of 10! Puts Ubuntu 9.1 to shame. Didn't have any of those kernel stalling on OpenSuse 11.2 unlike Ubuntu 9.1. Servers should go with Ubuntu, because they have long term releases and the kernel is like 2.6.32-25. 25 means it's really "Debian grade stable". The British really know how to do Linux SERVERS. The Germans know how to make it desktop grade!

We are currently looking for feedback and people who share a common interest in either anime or video games (if not both). Part of our feedback is finding out from the gamers which games they play? Also if they've ever played competitively for any game, and if so, which games? Thank you so much for reading this and we hope to hear a response from you soon.

US Dollar: The Yuan's Nemesis (2009-11-17 09:21)

China deflating the yuan, and Chinese politicians don't admit it. The US Mint job is to level it out by printing non-gold backed banknotes. That's why China wants to move to a IMF currency or mixture of currencies so the United States can't balance out their inflating yuan. China buying a lot of gold reserves from other countries. They also want to release a "golden yuan" so that it can replace the US Dollar as a world currency. The US of course wants to win the war in Afghanistan so US doesn't want the yuan be used as the peg currency. I don't believe China would fight terrorists or any war except the Cyber Cold War. See, I just admitted it!

DirectX 11 takes a lot of memory. (2009-12-04 19:12)

DirectX 9

I'm officially braced the DirectX 11 future with a version of Windows 7 Ultimate and a GPU. The reviews said the card was fast, yet only first gen of DirectX 11 cards. My card does 4.64 Teraflops, more than quadruple the Geforce GTX 280. At the moment, the only DirectX 11 benchmark is Battleforge, a real-time strategy game. The directX 9 games all run past 150 fps at 2650x1600 resolution. DirectX 10 games have an average frame rate of 150 fps at 1920x1080.

This is really fast for me, I usually stay with the old school thought where 60 fps was fluid and anything more was faster than the human eye could process. This old school thought came from 2D fighting games like Marvel vs. Capcom 2 for Sega Dreamcast. That's a 2000 era thought.

DirectX 11 API (Battleforge, EA 2009)

Yeah, I asked for a XFX Radeon HD 5970 Black Edition for Christmas along with a TB hard drive to get rid of the RAID5. I didn't wait for the Geforce GTX 380 this time around, because it had 1.5 GB GDDR5 memory. From what I hear the Catalyst drivers are very buggy, so I should see a 12-15 fps increase in 6-7 months in the future with better drivers. My card also supports OpenGL 3.2 so that API beats DirectX 11 graphics a little. IT DOES ABOUT 5/8 a IBM ASCI White SUPERCOMPUTER IN 2000 (7.226 TFLOPS).

Card intelligently underclocks chips and RAM when not doing 3D graphics.

Unemployed Joyseekers Need not to Apply? (2010-01-07 11:49)

One of the scarier tendencies that have surfaced in the job market as a result of the current economic crisis is that many companies are refusing to hire people who are unemployed, irrespective of the reason for the unemployment:

In a current job posting on The People Place, a job recruiting website for the telecommunications, aerospace/defense and engineering industries, an anonymous electronics company in Angleton, Texas, advertises for a "Quality Engineer." Qualifications for the job are the usual: computer skills, oral and written communication skills, light to moderate lifting. But red print at the bottom of the ad says, "Client will not consider/review anyone NOT currently employed regardless of the reason." In a nearly identical job posting for the same position on the Benchmark Electronics website, the red print is missing. But a human resources representative for the company confirmed to HuffPost that the The People Place ad accurately reflects the company's recruitment policies.

Read more about this completely insane and self-destructive tendency here.

I have to leave right now but I will blog soon about my analysis of what this tendency means for us and where it is likely to take us. In the meanwhile, feel free to leave your own interpretation of this troubling phenomenon in the comment section.

Been in Melbourne, Australia (2010-01-09 03:11)

I was in Australia for one week. Looked at all the landscape. It took me a year to fund this vacation. My cousin at the Yokosuka Naval base said Australia was one of his favorite places, and he's been to Melbourne. It was one of the top tourist places. It's subtropical. I've already been to Florida twice.

The best, most secure, most working, Linux ever (2010-01-10 08:37)

Codeweavers Crossover

To make the best Linux ever, you need to download Ubuntu 9.1 and Kubuntu 9.1 Live CDs. Install Ubuntu 9.1 onto the hard drive. Go into the terminal and type "sudo apt-get install kubuntu-desktop".

Normally, I was too lazy to put into that one line so I kept downloading RPM based Fedora and OpenSuse, because I'm only human.

That other distro I'm using since 2003. It's American.

Joyriding Galaxy (2010-01-10 08:42)

Imagine all of your classmates are on a fieldtrip. They have traveled to Earth from the Centaurus Arm of the Milky Way. Introduce them to your corner of the Milky Way.

Centaurus Arm has the largest group of 26 Red SuperGiant stars known as the RSGC2 cluster. Then the RSGC1 cluster has 14 SuperGiant Red Stars only a few hundred light years away from RSGC2. We don't have many Red SuperGiant stars in our neighborhood. It is in the region where the Centaurus Arm connects to the central bulge of the Milky Way. Since all these stars are near death, all turning into supernovas. Astronomers don't know anywhere else in this galaxy with so many Red SuperGiants. You can see properties of stars that are ready to explode. Despite RSGC2 having all these old Red SuperGiants, it also has a gigantic cluster of new stars that are less than 20 million years old. The dust glows red with all the yellow-colored Red SuperGiants stars with a blue patch, a stellar nursery of newborn stars. The supernovas would appear to be pink outlined blue ovals in the sky.

What is it like "in your neighborhood" and how is it different from the Centaurus Arm?

The Solar system is in the Orion Spur, a minor arm. The Solar system is also in the local bubble of this Orion Arm which was formed by a supernova. This bubble has prevented flows of cosmic radiation and gas. Even though the solar system is safe now, it is moving towards the Local Fluff, a interstellar cloud with impact within 50,000 years. It has twice the gas of the local bubble Solar System is now in. Gases stronger than Solar wind can inter the solar system and affect Earth in a bad way. The Orion Spur has many nebulas including Cygnus area like North America and Pelican nebula. Then there is the Orion nebula, and Crab nebula (pulsar). There are stars including Orions belt, Polaris, Rigel, Deneb, Betelgeuse, kCas, uCap, pCas, yCyg. and SCMa. The outer edge of the Orion arm is the Gould's belt that is 150 light years. Gould's belt has many young stars in it and also has the largest stars in the belt similar to RSGC2 and only 30 million years old. Gould's belt looks yellow on top, red in the middle and bluish on the bottom. Gould's belt was created when a gas cloud full of dark matter collided with some Milky Way disk.

How would the neighborhood change if your solar system started moving toward the core of the Milky Way Galaxy? The neighborhood of the solar system would change when it was near the Galactic Center of the milky way, because it be closer to a super massive black hole. One parsec away from the supermassive black hole would be a collection of a million stars. The stellar density would be 100 million times larger than our solar neighborhood. This would allow frequent close counter collisions. There would be a large interstellar cloud of dust. Life as we know it on Earth should cease to exist when radiation and gas become greater than the solar winds can handle. The Galatic nucleus would have more X-ray and gamma ray activity that is 1033 watts (ie: million times that of the Sun). The sun would eventually start orbiting the supermassive black hole. The supermassive black hole in the galactic center already has the gravity required to separate clusters of stars. The local bubble would separate as it moves towards the galactic center for certain. Unless you're in a molecular ring which is filled with young stars, the more inside the solar system goes, the older the surrounding stars systems would become. The observers on Earth could see the galactic center better. When the Solar System moves to the galactic center, you would see a more dense display of brighter stars full of color. There would be more gases and star clusters near our solar neighborhood and life would be different with it breaching the solar wind.

Privatization of electricity is better combined with geothermal (2010-02-08 22:02)

Should the state take over public utilities? no. For decades, electricity prices have only gone one direction - up. Now, in those states that implemented true deregulation, prices have actually fallen - in Pennsylvania by up to 30 percent - due to competition. Exempt from the provisions of our flawed restructuring, they were not forced to sell their power plants or to give up long-term contracts, but they were able to make huge profits selling power to the rest of the state.

Everybody should have a geothermal heatpump and furnace inside their business and home. Heat pumps paid for themselves in 8 years. Geothermal is cheaper than gas! Gas is only needed if I live in Canadian/Alaskan climate when a miniature electric furnace is my failsafe.

Favorite place to live outside US? (2010-02-20 15:38)

I know that President Clinton was eating dinner at the Salsa Bar and Grill in Port Douglas, Australia during 9/11, yet I also hear that the cost of living is really expensive as that's where the rich and famous live.

Esperance, Australia is pretty nice too for poor people like me. If I can't live in Esperance; Broome, Australia is pretty nice. I hear all the Americans move to Perth, but they should have moved to Broome instead.

Well I narrowed it down to Perth, Esperance or Broome.

Emily Dickinson III (2010-02-23 05:57)

Poetry is an artistic portrayal of language. It originally evolved from the rhythm of the voice, rooted from the oral tradition, into a written text with its "extraordinary [...] selection of words it uses and in its metrical rhythms." (Muller,Williams, 2003, p.48)

In a sense, poetry has the power to provoke feelings that move hearts, win minds and inspire people into action.

With this in mind, Emily Dickinson wittily defines poetry as such:

"If I read a book and it makes my whole body so cold no fire can warm me I know that is poetry.

If I feel physically as if the top of my head were taken off, I know that is poetry.

These are the only way I know it.

Is there any other way?" (Mulvihill, 2013)

Even today, Intrigued readers see Emily Dickinson can still baffle and create challenging expectations in what a poem is all about.

Her writing style has captivated her readers with her title-less lyric poems that are not only literary innovative, but captures impressions of particular moments, scenes, or moods that focuses on nature, love, immortality, death, faith, doubt, pain and the self.

In the following paragraphs, some of Dickinson's writing characteristics will be illuminated through her poetry, along with her biography. (vcu.edu, 2013)

It was not until 1955, when Thomas Johnson published Dickinson's complete works and attempted to reform its true manuscript vision, that the reader had the opportunity to be graced with her writing style.

Until then, there has only been seven or so poems printed in her life time; the ones that were printed, were never prepared for publication.

The poem that were published, the early editors took the liberty in alternating her poems in the traditional nineteenth century style by giving them titles, rearranging the poem's syntax, normalizing grammar, capitalization, while deleting her famous elliptical lines and dashes into a more readable conventional nineteenth century expectation.

In other words, they felt uncomfortable with her unique writing technique, and could not appreciate her gem-like imagery and unexpected metaphors that penetrated her poems. (vcu.edu, 2013)

Born December 10,1930, in Amherst, Massachusetts, her prominent and prosperous family resided at the 'Homestead' with her paternal grandfather, Samuel Dickinson, one of founders of Amherst College.

Samuel Dickinson had a temporary financial collapse caused by the expenditure of the Amherst College and loss the Homestead.

At nine of age, along with her younger sister, Lavina, her older brother Austin, and parents moved to a house on North Pleasant Street in Amherst.

Emily spent most of her happy adolescence and young adulthood at North pleasant until her father repurchased the Homestead 1855.

There she remained until her death, May 15,1986. (english.illinois.edu, 2013)

All the Dickinson males were lawyers with political ambitions; whereby, her father eventually became a congressman. Her home was a center of Amherst society and the site of annual Amherst College commencement receptions.

Growing up in an academic family, Emily's father Edward, made sure his children had a well rounded education, however, he was very strict what type literature was allowed in the home.

Walt Whitman, was one example, was not allowed and considered 'inappropriate'.

With this said, Emily never new in her life time, that she, along with Walt Whitman, were actually paving a path to modern day poetry. (english.illinois.edu, 2013)

During Emily's youth years, Calvinist revivals became popular and swept the nation.

Initially, it was exciting to be part the religious gathering, but over time she realized that she no longer wanted to be a participant, worshiping became more satisfying at home.

The privacy and relationship with God, were instead expressed in her poetry. (english.illinois.edu, 2013)

As very independent, vibrant, hopeful young woman, Emily felt her calling for poetry.

She discovered works of William Wordsworth and Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Tutored by her father's friend and lawyer Benjamin Newton, he encouraged Emily's passion and writing of poetry.

Newton died from tuberculosis while Emily was still young. (english.illinois.edu, 2013)

Emily seclusion became gradual.

Deaths

and departures of mentors and of friends had taken away some of her emotional spirit.

When her mother's health began to fail, Emily became more and more home bound.

Withdrawing further in conclusion, made Emily more productive in her poetry writing.

The added conservatory to the Homestead and having her room also made it advantageous for her year round gardening, letter writings and rewriting of her poems. (english.illinois.edu, 2013)

In addition to her confidant friend and sister-in-law, Susan Dickinson, Emily Dickinson had only one other critic in her life time, Thomas Wentworth Higginson.

He not only was an American minister, author, abolitionist and soldier, he also wrote a piece encouraging new writers in the Atlantic Monthly.

Emily began sending many of her poems to him to critique, knowing from his past writings he was sympathetic to female writers.

He ultimately became her mentor. (english.illinois.edu, 2013)

Dickinson's subject matter could be best reflected on her life's experiences, education, and her wonderful imagination.

Her simplified life that dealt with doing without actually meant doing within her creative mind.

We presumed reading the Bible, Shakespeare, and seventeenth century metaphysical and natural sciences may have come from the family library, allowing her to bring individuality to her observation of nature for itself. (english.illinois.edu, 2013)

Reading Emily Dickinson's poems out loud, one can hear the rhythm and sound that Dickinson might have heard in her time from musical forms such as ballads and hymns.

Dickinson's poems usually slows down, speeds up, interrupts itself, holds its breath and sometimes trails off.

The reader is guided through the poem by her stanza forms, typically quatrains and her unusual emphasis on words either by capitalization or line position.

Some of the common forms of hymn meter (counts syllables only, not feet) that Dickinson used are common meter (a line of eight syllables followed by a line of six syllables, repeating in quatrains of an 8/6/8/6 pattern).

Unlike ballad meter , quatrains are typically closed, meaning the first and third lines will rhyme as well as the second and fourth.

Dickinson took liberty with the meter, many time she used 'enjambment' where one line of poetry runs over to the next without stopping.

A good example of this "I cannot live with you" Dickinson writes the second stanza in the following:

The Sexton keeps the key to - Putting up

Our Life - His Porcelain -

Like a Cup -

("I cannot live with you", 2006, p. 105)

In the poem "I cannot live with you", the above stanza Dickinson breaks the first line after a preposition and before a direct object; in both places one would not punctuate with a comma, semicolon, or a dash, and there would be no pause.

Dickinson syntax is problematic, try filling in the blanks, the poem are so compressed.

She also uses dashes often stand for the reader to pause or for punctuation, or bridges between sections of the poem.

Both the uses of dashes and the use of capitals to stress and personify common noun is one method that Dickinson uses with all her poems.

In most Dickinson's lyric poetry, the speaker single speaker is identified as I, the reader has to be careful, her poetry does not speak for the poet herself.

It could be a spirit such as in "I heard a Fly buzz- when I died-" ("I heard a Fly buzz- when I died-", 2006, p. 103)

Sometimes poems use slant rhymes and sound rhymes, as an example as in Dickinson's "A narrow Fellow in the Grass": the end rhyme of the second and fourth lines in each stanza, where the line are too short to create much of the sense of repeated beginning sounds, therefore, slant lines are nearly, but not exactly the same sounds such as "rides" and "is", "Seen" and "on", "Corn" and " Noon", "Sun" and "gone". Finally Dickinson is a master for metaphors.

Dickinson's poem

"A narrow Fellow in the Grass" uses similes such as "narrow Fellow" is a snake, or " The Grass divides as with a Comb-". ("A narrow Fellow in the Grass", p.107).

Emily Dickinson indeed intrigues readers while baffling and creating challenging expectations in each poem.

Her writing style is captivating, innovative, and captures impressions of particular moments of the human senses.

Emily is by far an intelligent independent woman poet of her time.

Tell tell the truth, but tell it slant -

Success in Circuit Lies too Bright for our infirm Delight

The Truth's superb surprise

As Lighting to the Children eased

With explanation kind

The Truth must dazzle gradually

Or every man be blind -

("tell the truth, but tell it slant", p.108).

Moderate and conservative Americans demand "Population Redistribution thru private sector", not wealth redistribution (2010-03-11 13:50)

DEMAND A BALANCED BUDGET: Begin the Constitutional amendment process to require a balanced budget with a two-thirds majority needed for any tax hike.

STOP THE TAX HIKES: Permanently repeal all tax hikes, including those to income, capital gains, and death taxes, currently scheduled to begin in 2011.

COMMIT TO REAL GOVERNMENT TRANSPARENCY: Every bill, in its final form, will be made public seven days before any vote can be taken and all government expenditures authorized by any bill will be easily accessible on the Internet before the money is spent. (Proposed by: Steve Kulik, Gonzales, Texas; and Steve Hollis, San Francisco, Calif.)

PROTECT THE CONSTITUTION: Require each bill to identify the specific provision of the Constitution that gives Congress the power to do what the bill does.

PASS REAL HEALTHCARE REFORM: Greatly improve affordability of health insurance by permitting all Americans access to all health insurance plans sold anywhere in the United States through the purchase of insurance across state lines and allow small businesses and associations to pool together across state lines to buy insurance.

ENACT FUNDAMENTAL TAX REFORM: Adopt a simple and fair single-rate tax system by scrapping the Internal Revenue code and replacing it with one that is no longer than 4,543 words – the length of the original Constitution.

END RUNAWAY GOVERNMENT SPENDING: Impose a statutory cap limiting the annual growth in total federal spending to the sum of inflation rate plus the percentage of population growth.

LET US SAVE: Allow all Americans to opt out of Social Security and Medicare and instead put those same payroll taxes in a personal account they own, control, and can leave to whomever they choose.

PROTECT INTERNET FREEDOM: No regulation or tax on the Internet.

GIVE PARENTS MORE CHOICES IN THE EDUCATION OF THEIR CHILDREN: Improve American education by reforming the broken federal role through eliminating ineffective and wasteful programs, giving parents more choices from pre-school to high school, and improving the affordability of higher education.

PASS AN 'ALL OF THE ABOVE' ENERGY POLICY: Authorize the exploration of proven energy reserves to reduce our dependence on foreign energy sources from unstable countries and reduce regulatory barriers to all other forms of energy creation, lowering prices and creating competition.

PROTECT FREEDOM OF THE PRESS: Prohibit the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) from using funds to reinstate the Fairness Doctrine in any form, including requiring "localism" or "diversity" quotas.

RESTORE FISCAL RESPONSIBILITY & CONSTITUTIONALLY LIMITED GOVERNMENT: Create a Blue Ribbon taskforce that engages in a complete audit of federal agencies and programs, assessing their Constitutionality, and identifying duplication, waste, ineffectiveness, and agencies and programs better left for the states.

PROTECT PRIVATE PROPERTY RIGHTS: Block state and local governments that receive federal grants from exercising eminent domain over private property for the primary purpose of economic development or enhancement of tax revenues.

REJECT CAP & TRADE: Prevent the Environmental Protection Agency from implementing costly new regulations that would increase unemployment, raise consumer prices, and weaken the nation's global competitiveness with virtually no impact on global temperatures.

STOP THE PORK: Place a moratorium on all earmarks until the process is fully transparent, including requiring a 2/3 majority to pass any earmark.

NO CZAR REGULATION WITHOUT REPRESENTATION: All "lawmaking" regulations must be affirmatively approved by Congress and signed into law by the president, as the Constitution requires for all laws.

AUDIT THE FED: Begin an audit of the Federal Reserve System.

NO MORE BAILOUTS: The federal government should not bail out private companies and should immediately begin divesting itself of its stake in the private companies it owns from recent bailouts.

STOP CAREER POLITICIANS & CURB LOBBYIST POWER: Begin the Constitutional amendment process to require Congressional term limits. No person shall be elected to the Senate more than twice or to the House of Representatives more than four times.

SUNSET REGULATIONS: All regulations will be "sunset" after ten years unless renewed by Congressional vote.

LET US WATCH: Broadcast all non-security meetings and votes on C-SPAN and the Internet.

Inferior F-35 is stupid now (2010-03-14 09:18)

Usually when Lockheed Martin make an fighter jet, it is superior to the previous jet (F-22A Raptor). The Obama administration decision to scrap a proven aircraft in favor of a supposedly cheaper, more flexible replacement is proving to be an expensive mistake. Gates also announced he is withholding $614 million in fees from the prime contractor, Lockheed Martin. F-35 is six months behind schedule. The only thing it has that the F-22 doesn't have is the short take off and vertical landing (STOVL) technology. Pentagon should have produced more F-22 Raptors and sold F-22 Raptors to other countries.

RIP: Facebook killed MSN (2010-04-10 11:29)

This protocol used to be very lively between 1999 - late 2007. I remember using this all the time, now there is little point. The college is using MSN as a network messenger. I did VoIP through this protocol. Now-a-days, nobody at Facebook (the true successor to MSN) wants to do Google talk. In the industry, VoIP already revolutionized years ago. AT home, in codec complexity only. I heard of War-crack (World of Warcraft), but facebook-crack! Never regressed to such a lowly site that keeps you cybered with Stockholm syndrome. Actually, I'm a freelancer from Mars, nobody knows me. Remember, I was cut off from a early adult age doomed to listen to Winamp while researching gamerankings all while finishing my associate degree. And that's average joe stuff. Many friends and family were going in the navy, I was absolutely right about enlisting in this branch. I purposely failed the navy SAT, because I realized what I got myself into in the middle of the test. Maybe it was a better decision, because now I get to go in network admin and computer forensics. And all my uncles and cousins, their parents are on Facebook and it's like social engineering. I read knew that the Jabber protocol is essentially facebook and that Empathy has the old facebook plug-in.

Always like this.

The Change You Want In Your Life? (2010-04-15 16:31)

As a blogger you are at times more open with your thoughts and feelings online than you might be in person, even with your closest friends and family. Despite knowing that thousands of people read this blog every day, I find it easier and I'm much more succinct, when I share my thoughts and ideas here, at least when it comes to certain subjects.

One of the wonderful, if surprising at first, experiences as a result of being open with people through a blog is that eventually you gain some kind of notoriety for being good at something.

Eventually my perception online became that of an "authority" in my niche, at least to a small sub-segment of the population. I became a "someone" rather than an audience, in one little corner of the universe, in this case as a blogger who talks about entrepreneurship, marketing, and personal development.

This is a great event for all kinds of reasons, but the most important reason, and be sure to underline this, is that with authority, more people actually read what I write. With the attention that authority gives me, I enjoy the privilege and honor of being able to influence people. This is power and it's something you have to be very careful with as power is trust, and you don't want to abuse people's trust.

What's a little strange for me is that I've not really done anything to earn my position other than tell you what I think and do. I haven't been officially trained to do this in any way, I didn't go to school to learn to blog (I started one instead), nor was I instructed along the way about the right way to do things. In reality I'm pretty much exactly the same as you are right now, except I've spent the last five years sharing aspects of my life through this blog over and over again, week after week.

The Challenge That Is Changing Yourself

One of the most interesting subjects, one that I'd like to tackle with you now, is the concept of whether it is really possible to change, especially in a proactive, self-determined manner. This isn't about fate or destiny, this is going after and getting what you want.

When I say change, I mean real change. I mean the kind of change that takes you from where you are now, to where you really want to be, although using a phrase that relates transition to a destination or a time isn't quite complete. What I'm really talking about when I say "be" is the state you are in. It's the change of state, the way you think and consequently act and thus experience, that I refer to when I mean change.

This is the kind of change where you feel like you're not the same person you were before, and everything around you has changed as a result of this. You might be living in a different place, associating with different people, you might have a different lover, or several, you might be financially wealthier, or maybe you've lost or gained weight, or you no longer do something you wanted to stop, like drinking, or smoking.

All these things are symptomatic of change, to say they are the change isn't quite accurate. It was something about you on the inside that changed, that caused a physical change to manifest in reality. It was YOU who changed.

When you experience this kind of change you know it, because when you realize the change you stop yourself and go "wow, I'm actually feeling what my previous self wanted to feel back then". I'm living what I previously wanted to live. I am what my past self wanted to be in the future, if we include the element of time. I am now where I wanted to be back when I was somewhere else, if we include the element of location.

It's this idea of change, and it's change for the better that we want, or at least what we perceive as desirably better today (it may not actually turn out to be so, but we assume it is for now since we don't know yet), that intrigues me. The idea that you are in charge of your own "personal development" is powerful. Imagine being in charge of claiming what you want in your life?

Yeah, it sounds good doesn't it, but let's state a truth – change is hard.

Significant change takes effort, and often so much effort that by the time we get what we wanted or arrive where we wanted to be, our value system has changed too, so you may not even want what you were working so hard to acquire. That I believe is a clever built-in motivation tool nature has given us so that we're always striving for more. If we got everything we wanted instantly and easily then the value wouldn't be there and we'd stop striving to make ourselves better.

Consequently, the lessons we eventually take away from any dramatic change in our lives are these, which many people come to understand as universal principles if they live long enough...

We should live in the moment,
enjoy the journey, understand that what we want isn't what we really want and, that we will always want more until we decide we don't.
Tricky isn't it.

Is Change Even Possible?

I remember as a child listening to my mother on the rare occasion she hosted a party at her house. My mother is not the most social person and while she loves sharing ideas with other people, she's closer to hermit than socialite. That doesn't stop her from talking her mouth off when she's had a glass of wine and the people around her are saying things she feels a need to respond to (nowadays she doesn't need any alcohol to get her started!).

One of her favorite subjects as I recall, is whether change is even possible in the first place. She steadfastly believes people can change on a fundamental level, and we are talking about the tiniest of individual personality details, all the way up to global consciousness. Some people didn't agree with her, they argued that no one could truly change, which is why as humans we will always have the problems we have, in some shape or form.

I remember listening to her passionately explaining her viewpoint on this subject, although from my recollection as my mother's son, I felt more uncomfortable that here was my usually soft-spoken mother becoming more animated than usual, resulting in me wanting to be somewhere else (parents are, like, so embarrassing!). I generally preferred to find a way to be in another place when adults were drinking and talking loudly, but no doubt my mother's viewpoint on change has impacted my own perception of whether change is possible, so credit where credit is due.

I Haven't Quite Mastered This One...

As I stated at the start of this article, sometimes as a blogger you have to get personal. It's one of the most powerful tools we have to engage our audience. However, in the case of this subject, I have to admit I don't feel quite as comfortable as I'd like to when talking about my own perception of how to change.

Normally, as the authority, it's smart for me to assume a tone in my blog posts that I know what I'm talking about, and to a certain degree with many subjects that relate to marketing, I do, at least comparing my own skill level and knowledge with my audience's. I know just enough more than my readers so that I can provide value.

Marketing in so many ways is a science. Talking about how to make money, or relating a story of how you did something to get a result is simple enough. The concepts we are dealing with there are straight forward, like pieces of a puzzle you just have to arrange in the right order.

Concepts like change are much more fluid and complex. Most personal development subjects are that way because we're dealing with some of the fundamentals of life. As a result, I'm best teaching by revealing the aspects of my own journey, even though I may not have figured it all out. Writing an article like this isn't just for you, it also helps me, as I come to a greater realization of my own place by sharing with you. As they say, the best way to learn is to teach.

Here, discussing how you can go about changing your life for the better, I feel the need to make note of where I'm personally at with the topic because, well, I'm not quite there yet. At least I'm not where I want to be, so there is still more change to make.

I expect this is likely the state I will remain in for most of my life because as far as I can tell, no human ever masters change or remains content with how things are permanently, unless they are enlightened or dead. I don't exist in a perpetual state of enlightenment (nor am I convinced that's what life is all about if you consider the practical world, not just the spiritual world, although they can overlap if you become self aware enough), so I can only imagine what it is like.

For the sake of making this applicable to you, I'm going to assume you still have a strong desire to make changes in your life too and you're not quite enlightened yet either. At least we're coming from the same place :-).

This is part of the reason why this subject is so compelling. Being comfortable that life IS change is one thing, and I'm all for going with the flow, but taking a proactive interest in determining what changes in your life is a different story. You want to be the driver in your life, even if you can never be sure where the road is taking you or what you will pass through on the way.

Why Creating The Change You Want Is All About You (2010-04-17 16:28)

Next we're going to continue to build on the concepts introduced in the previous article, which are -

1. Confidence can be created through training, repeating processes so you build on your results
2. Raise your self awareness so you can be master of your universe, rather than your perceptions mastering you
3. You must continue to move forward regardless of how you feel or what conditions you face because it's not always going to be a smooth ride

These ideas focus on you being the catalyst for change, so let's take a deeper look at how much power you really have to create the kind of results you want in your life...

A Hard Lesson: You Can't Control Everything

Potentially one of the most depressing moments in your life, especially as a young person, is coming to grips with your own limitations. I'm all for creating a strong base of self esteem so you feel like you can achieve anything, but it's necessary to realize that you're not going to be the best at everything and some things you won't ever be able to do.

We're all born with gifts, natural abilities, and strengths, but conversely, there are things we're not good at and other elements that impact our lives, which are based on the "luck of the draw" that is the lottery of life. Your genetic make-up, where you are born, what era you are born into and all kinds of things can hinder your ability to create the change you want in your life.

Your environment has a huge impact on who you are, how you think and what you do. You can expand your universe by taking in new inputs, but you're limited to what inputs are available (hence the phrase you don't know what you don't know). Although you live in an infinite universe, for most of us we can only function within a finite universe or, well, your head might explode, or at least you won't be able to function within the framework of the society you call home, or the body you operate within.

Despite having your own unique set of circumstances based on your environment, physical make-up and ever expanding consciousness, there are universal principles that you can apply to help you create what you want in your life, regardless of your limitations. In the end, as is always the case, it comes down to the choices you make.

You've been given the power of freewill, which means in all circumstances you can make a choice. This is a wonderful gift, but dangerous in the "wrong" hands, so it pays to put some effort into ensuring you are making smart choices - that's smart in relation to what you want of course, which is going to be different from person to person.

Let's take a look at a basic framework of ideas you can use in order to help you make the right choices. Like the previous article in this series, I'll draw upon other blog posts I've published as source content for the ideas. Please read the source articles too as they will enhance your understanding of each concept.

4. Make Smart Choices (Stop making it hard for yourself and don't just follow the herd)

Source: How To Combine Your Brain And Willpower To Break The Pattern Of Average Results

When faced with a situation where you're simply not good at something or there is a barrier that is completely out of your control stopping you from achieving something, it's important that you see reality for what it is.

Of course we can choose to see things in a different way, to put our positive glasses on, or perhaps simply not think about or perceive something at all because it serves us better that way. However, fooling yourself to believe you can fly and consequently jumping off a building causing massive injury is not the kind of positive thinking or awareness change we are after here.

The article on using your brain and willpower to create change introduced a logical idea when faced with a world of inequality: You need to accept the conditions you operate within now and do the best with what you have been given. This is actually more critical than you might think. It's not just about accepting that you will never be tall if you are short, it's important that you make choices that allow you to develop what you are naturally gifted at (in the height example, you do things that short people have an advantage doing).

There are people in this world who prefer to take on challenges that they are handicapped to perform in some way. That's fine, and I'm not going to argue against this, but for the greater majority of people on this planet, making your life harder than it already is, is not a smart choice.

We're looking for the path of least resistance, and the lowest hanging fruit.

Make choices that leverage skills, talents or abilities that you were born with or have developed over time to give yourself an advantage. It's usually much more fun and gratifying to do this, you earn greater rewards because you put more into it and do it for longer, and on a global scale, generally you give more back to the world too.

Don't fight what you can't control and gravitate to areas where you can provide effortless value. When I say effortless, I don't mean it won't be work, but the process of work is enjoyable even when it's frustrating, painful or exhausting. You're developing aspects of yourself that were meant to be developed, rather than struggling to do something you're not good at.

This makes complete sense right?

Yeah, sure it does, but for many people on this planet they consider it a pipe dream to do what they want, and here's why...

1. You don't know what you're good at or "meant to do" or how on earth it could help you make money, or if it even should
2. You've made less than smart choices and find yourself in a situation where you feel trapped doing something you don't like
3. You live in a society where you don't even have your basic needs met, so thinking about what you might be good at doing rarely even crosses your mind, making enough food to survive, or finding a place to sleep that is warm, are the only challenges you deal with on a day to day basis

The fact that the third point is even relevant is particularly sad, in terms of a reflection of who we are as a people. It's safe to say that if you're reading this you're dealing with issues one and two and have risen to the point where your basic needs are met. Although at one stage I'd like to more thoroughly review some things we can do to help eliminate that third condition, that's a topic for another article on another day.

So, assuming your basic needs are met, in most cases to create the positive change in your life, the big mistake you are making right now is bad choices, choices incongruent with what you want. Every day you wake up and repeat activities that reinforce what you don't want, which are born from thinking in a way that doesn't take you to where you want to go, or to who you want to be.

This is an easy mistake to make because most of society is doing exactly the same thing. In order to break out of this pattern you essentially have to be "weird", which in context is not doing what the majority think is accepted behavior. The problem is that you are a herd animal and it's uncomfortable enough just to even bring up the subject of making changes that most people will criticize you for, let alone to actually do it. This is why it's critical you start to connect the dots and realize that –

- A) You're going to have to be different to most "normal" people if you are to go after what you want
- B) The perceived normality is, however, just an illusion, brought about because everyone thinks in a certain way and thus acts in a certain way, which doesn't make them happy, often causes other people as well as themselves to suffer and worse still, usually damages the planet too

If you can break the illusion simply by choosing not to partake in the accepted behaviors and thought processes, then you're on the way to making a difference.

This is not a situation of black and white choices of course, so you're going to have to make some decisions based on what you believe is right given what you want to change. I reiterate, you need to do the best with what you have been given, which is not usually doing what everyone else does or doesn't do.

You're going to face ridicule (all entrepreneurs and revolutionaries know what this is like), but the fact is, if you just keep doing what everyone does, you're going to get the same results. Break the pattern, stand out from the crowd, start making smart choices and people will look at you funny at first, but once they see how big an impact it has on your life, they're going to start looking at you as if you are some kind of genius. You may even become a leader – now that's a scary thought isn't it!

What's particularly powerful about this shift in awareness and behaviors, is that at first sure, you're doing it for your own self good, but it can go much further. It's when one individual starts making smart choices – let's call them "enlightened choices” – that the run-off effect is an impact on people around you, who may as a result of observing you, start to make similarly “unusual” choices. Like a good pyramid scheme, if enough people do this, then the world can change for the better, as these two fellows certainly understand –

Daisaku Ikeda (Japanese peace activist) said – “A great revolution in just one single individual will help achieve a change in the destiny of a society and, further, will enable a change in the destiny of humankind.”

Gandhi said – “Be the change you wish to see in the world”

Although you may be looking to create positive change to aspects in your life, making smart choices can have a ripple effect that can change the behaviors of the entire human race. The great thing about this is all you need to worry about is making what you perceive as the right choices given what you want to change. It's not always easy, but becoming aware of your power to make the choice and not simply go with the status quo, is a huge first step.

If you've managed to raise your self awareness to the point where you understand you are master of your own interpretation, you're focusing on changing the internal dialogue with yourself for the better, you're seeing the world in a much more positive light, you're committed to working on something long enough to get a result and you realize that it's not always going to feel 100 % perfect along the way, all that's left is to figure out what the right choices are, and then make them.

Let's take the next step and look at how we can determine what the right choices are...

5. Follow Success Patterns (Don't reinvent the wheel)

Source: How To Find The Courage To Change By Raising Your Awareness

Much of this source article focuses on raising your awareness to the point where you realize what you want, a recurring theme in this series on positive change too. There's a very relevant point to extract from towards the end of the article, which can fill in one of the final missing ingredients to create the change you want in your life.

It never fails to amaze me how many people don't figure out this very simple idea. I've had people come up to me and ask for my advice on how to do something and in so many situations, even if I know absolutely nothing about who they are, what they are good at, or even the area they are focused on, this advice still applies.

Replicate What Works

If you don't know what the smart choices are to get what you want, or even just the next step, or you're not even sure what on earth you are meant to do, that's okay because you're not alone on this planet. You don't need to figure everything out for yourself.

All you need to do is find people who have done what you want to do, or who are living how you want to live, and then learn what you need to know from them.

This concept applies universally to all forms of change, there is always some form of help available. If you want to make money doing something, find someone who's figured out how to do that. If you're about to face a new challenge, like becoming a father or mother for the first time, there are other people who have been through this experience before you. If you want to start a revolution and eliminate a great injustice, or stop a global catastrophe, or just figure out how to change your fashion style so you will be more attractive to the opposite sex, aspects of how to do all these things is learnable because it has been done before.

Even if you are doing something completely new in a completely innovative industry, or you're attempting to break new ground, there will be success principles that other people have used that will apply to what you are doing. You're learning some now just by reading this article. All you have to do is get out there and find the right people or the right information to start filling in the blanks to figure out what your immediate next step is, what the smart choices are.

You might need a coach or mentor, or perhaps you can study a guru or just read a good book. Maybe a structured course, or even a full degree is the answer. Maybe just a conversation over a cup of tea will give you what you need, or perhaps taking a hands-on training program is what you require.

In most circumstances, to learn what you need to know is a holistic process. To determine what steps you need to take and to undertake the necessary personal growth you require to get where you want to go, it is necessary to collect input from all kinds of sources, some that you proactively seek out, others that just show up at the right time (more on this later in the series).

In my own experience to create the change I desire in my life I usually go with a combination of experimentation (mandatory for most change to occur), with passive observation of people who have what I want, combined with active study of materials from experts and when possible, some personal time spent with people, some who just came about at the right time and taught me something they may not have even realized they were teaching, and others who I sought out to solve a particular problem.

As Mulder constantly reminded us in the X-Files, the truth is out there, you just need to go looking for whatever truths will help you to create the change you want.

What If You Don't Know What You Want?

As one final piece of advice before I end this part of the series, if you're not even sure what you want, consider things you might like to have, or what about you or your immediate environment that you want to change, and then start looking for alternative choices you could make today to take you towards that reality.

You have to understand that making smart choices is not an absolute endeavor. You will never know the "right" decision beyond what is best for what you want to be in a given moment. This means that what is right for you will change constantly, it's part of the growth process that is the evolution of your consciousness. In order to help you get closer to figuring out your truth, you will need to sample and experiment.

Follow success patterns based what you think and feel might work for you, or focus on making changes that eliminate what you don't like about your life right now. Sometimes a process of elimination will lead you to what you want, but that doesn't mean all the principles you have learned up to this point are not relevant. They apply equally the same. You will always have the power of choice and it's up to you to figure out what you want, no one else can decide this for you. That's why raising your awareness as a basic concept is so important, it will give you the insight to know that change needs to be made in the first place, triggering the cascade of decisions that will lead you to greater clarification of what you really want.

Coming Up Next: Where Does Change Really Originate From?

The puzzle is looking a lot more complete. You now have some strong foundation concepts that can help you to realize the change you want, namely -

1. Confidence comes from training
2. Become self aware so you can use your perception as a positive force in your life
3. Work consistently regardless of external conditions and their effect on your feelings
4. Make smart choices based on your own strengths and what you want, not what everyone else does
5. Follow the success patterns that are all around you, ready to be learned whenever you need guidance

Most of these ideas reflect on you as the center of your own universe, which is certainly true, but we've left out a key point - everything is connected.

I touched on this idea when I talked about how you changing yourself can result in changing others around you, but it goes much further than this.

Everything you do influences other people, just as what other people do influences you. There is a mass interconnected web that you must learn how to operate within if you want it to help, rather than hinder you from experiencing the positive changes you desire.

Once you are aware of what I will cover in the next article you may even begin to question where change comes from or what you even are. We are heading into uncharted waters, so stay tuned, there's more to come yet!

Getting What You Want... (2010-04-20 16:29)

Here Is What I Know So Far

I've proactively changed many aspects of my life for the better, especially in the past five years. The key word here is "proactively", which could be interchanged with the word consciously, or intentionally. The point being that I decided I wanted something and then went to work to create the change necessary to have what I wanted. It wasn't just hoping, dreaming, or thinking about the change, it was all of those things AND focused action designed to take me there.

The end outcome of achieving what I set out to is usually different to what I expected, and of course as per the universal rules I talked about in the first article in this series, the process, the journey of creating the change turned out to be more valuable than actually arriving at the outcome.

Although we are motivated by changing certain physical circumstances we exist in, often it's the internal shift, the growth we go through on a personal level, that turns out to be the most valuable outcome. The physical benefits are like having the cake, while the real change is learning how to cook, something you can take with you long after you finish eating the cake.

Although many of the stories I'm about to tell you relate to a personal milestone, event or challenge from my life, the cornerstone of the story is the lesson learned as a result. Luckily for us, I've been chronicling many of these lessons by revealing the stories here on this blog, so together we can go on a trip through the last ten years of my life and extract some of the most important and powerful revelations as they apply to creating positive change.

I've included a link to the original articles that recount in more detail the situations and the key learnings. I strongly recommend you read these articles too, as they will greatly reinforce the messages of this article series.

This is some of the most powerful content in this blog in terms of helping you change your mindset, increase your own self awareness and achieve what you want. I say this in confidence because they are the benefits I gained by living these experiences.

Here we go...

1. Personal Congruency (Confidence through training)

Source: Personal Congruency... At 21? How To Be Confident At Any Age

Way back during the first year of this blog I talked about my trip to Seattle to play in the 1998 Magic world championships (a card game that has a competitive tournament series, sort of like poker, but geekier). During this trip I was able to meet some of the stars of the game, and play against the best of the best. The result of this once-in-a-lifetime experience was a change to how I perceive people who are considered famous and a deeper understanding of how they got there.

People who are exceptionally good at something get there because they repeated processes over and over again in preparation for an experience, or in an attempt to qualify for the experience. They then had the experience, which helped them become more confident heading into the next similar experience. This is why in professional sports or competition of any kind it's usually a huge advantage to have "been there before" as you're not intimidated by what you don't know.

This opens up the idea that expertise and success comes to people who choose to go after it. Yes talent, gifts and luck play a part, but the greater your "courage of conviction", the more likely you will be successful. If you build the tools to create the courage through hard work, then you are more likely to succeed, even if you have never had the success you are striving for before.

It's worth reading this article because I wrote it when I was 26. I'm 30 now and a lot happened during those years. I wrote that article having had minor financial success in my life at the time, but feeling confident about where I was heading because the positive signs were becoming very consistent and I truly began to believe I could have what I wanted, at least financially, because of what I was doing. I was starting to become proof of the concept I was writing about. I was starting a process of change, just as I was starting to build this blog.

2. You Control Your Perception (Interpretation is half the battle)

Source: The Key To Happiness

I read a book called Learned Optimism by Martin Seligman. It's a really interesting book, and one of the most enlightening ideas I took away from it was this - Optimistic people do not see reality. Instead they contort their interpretation of what they are experiencing to see it as positive, regardless of what is really happening.

Pessimistic people have a much firmer grasp of reality and as such often see the negativity in what is happening to them and other people around them.

Optimists are essentially fooling themselves so they feel better. They manufacture hope and as a result live longer, happier lives. Pessimists see a form of truth, which you might say is more accurate than the optimists, but they consequently suffer more.

So do you want to be the happy fool or the sad realist?

When I was in my early twenties clearly my mind had decided that it preferred to see the negative in what was going on around it. It became so good at this, that the body it had control of started to malfunction.

My mind created so much fear that I started to get panic attacks. Even when there wasn't a large predatory animal trying to hunt me down, which is a more typical reason for my body to react the way it did, as if it was preparing to fight or run away from the danger, I was feeling these sensations. It was horrible.

I created danger and fear when it wasn't there and it was because I had learned how to think about things the wrong way. I distorted my interpretation of reality to the point where I suffered physical pain. I call that a form of insanity, but I did find a way out...

As a result of this experience I became a very, very good listener, and this has nothing to do with listening to other people. I started listening to, or perhaps it's more accurate to say I started to observe my own thoughts, and wow, were they broken.

Back when I wrote the key to happiness I was at a stage where I observed my thought process for the sake of becoming a better thinker. You can call this cognitive behavior therapy if you like, but it's not that complicated, all you really have to do is "watch" how you talk to yourself. Once you do this you start to realize, at least this is the case for many people, that you really don't like yourself very much. You spend your entire day being insecure about pretty much everything.

My god was this a turning point for me! I couldn't believe how mean I was. I thought I was a good person before this, in fact I thought I was so nice that I deserved better in my life, but I was wrong. I was an absolute bastard to the person that mattered most – myself. I spent nearly every waking moment judging myself, and the world around me, and 90 % of the time I was negative.

From the seeds of your worst moments, come your greatest strengths. Becoming aware of my own internal dialogue was a massive gift and has positively influenced my life since then. The awareness born from actively listening to how I talked to myself, and then making a very conscious choice to change how I interpret the world around me and thus how I talk about experience to myself, gave me the toolset I need to, well, be happy.

I can't really put it any better than I did at the end of the article, so I'll repeat it here...

Happiness is ultimately not in anyone else's hands or controlled by any external element at all. It's purely a choice you can make. As often as I can I choose to be happy. It's not always as easy as that but by undertaking to change the way you think and create an ongoing positive dialogue with yourself you are both working towards the same goals – that's you and your little voice – both aiming for happiness.

Once you gain the power by becoming self aware of your own voice inside your head and how you perceive the world around you, half the battle is won. You are in control and that will always be the case no matter what happens to you or your environment.

Creating positive change in your life begins with how you interpret life itself. If you want things to change for the better, the first step is to make the choice to see the world in a way that is beneficial, on the inside. The outside world is always open to interpretation, and you will never know the real truth, so why not create perceptions that help you? The key take away from this article is self awareness is the first step towards creating the change you want, in fact, it is all you ever need if you really drill down to it. You are the master of your own universe.

3. Work Ethic (Do it even when you don't feel like it)

Source: How To Remain Productive When You Feel Like Giving Up

This is still one of the most popular articles on this blog with almost 250 comments as I type this, I wrote the article because it is clear people need encouragement. Heck, I need encouragement too, so I wrote this just as much for myself as I did for you.

Your mind is your strongest asset and your weakest link, and can be a very clever saboteur. It has a huge influence on your emotional state, and your emotions are the fuel that feed your creativity, or stifle it.

If there was a lesson that every blogger, entrepreneur and athlete knows well, it's the importance of consistence and persistence. I wrote about this in some depth in my very first free report – How To Start An Internet Business – and it's safe to take this on board as fact.

To be successful you're going to have to work hard, over a long period of time and there will be stages, many of them, where you just don't feel like it. If you want to change, learning how to work through periods of lack of motivation, depression, feelings of loss, confusion, or any state brought upon by negative thought patterns, requires that you learn two things -

1. Your thoughts are choices of perception that you are in control of entirely (the previous section discussed this)
2. You can choose to just do it (credit to Nike) regardless of how you feel

As you probably know from experience, sometimes even when you are aware of your inner voice, and even despite telling yourself all kinds of positive and good things, you still feel like crap. The reason for this is you don't believe in what you are saying to yourself, which is often very hard when you're still on the journey to change, because your physical reality hasn't become what you want it to...yet.

A true master of self awareness chooses their emotional state because they are in complete control of their internal configuration and have need for nothing in the external world (like totally zen). For most of us, the outside world has, and will have for our entire lives, a huge influence over us because we want something from it. As long as you have a sense of attachment to anything, and this is especially true for attachments to people, you're going to suffer (go Buddhism!).

This happens to me too, and although I can say it's not as pervasive as it once was, I still feel lousy sometimes when I'm not getting what I think I want, when I want it. This is especially the case when you are working to change something that requires you have an experience you have never had before, or where you have attempted to have the experience, yet failed, perhaps multiple times, reinforcing the belief that you will never attain your goal.

Chances are if you are reading this blog, one of the things you are attempting to do now is make money online, and you're not there yet, so you're forced to do things to make money that you don't like (e.g. a job), and you feel bad about it. This is a classic situation where you need to push through and keep going, even in the face of emotional adversity, and as I outlined in the article, often simply making the decision to act even when you don't feel like it, will pull you out of the negative mood.

The important point here is that you need to realize your process to come to a change is going to involve feeling all kinds of emotions, many of which will not help you change in the direction you want to. The greater the change you desire, the longer the journey, and the more you are going to experience along the way. It's your job to pilot the ship forward no matter what the conditions, with the belief that your destination is always moving closer, even when you feel like you are going backwards, and you are never certain of when you will arrive.

Coming Up: Taking It To The Next Level

I've introduced you to three principle concepts required to realize positive change in your life -

1. Confidence through training helps you create a foundation for growth
2. Self awareness - You choose your perception of reality
3. Working regardless of inner or outer conditions is the path to what you want

You can no doubt see how all three of these concepts are very interrelated and impact each other. As you continue through this series you're going to see that all these concepts are governed by universal laws, and in the end there is only one variable that really matters when it comes to making change. That variable is you.

Coming up next we're going to look even deeper at how you are the greatest agent for change there is today. Although your focus right now might be to change aspects of your own life, by the end of this article series you're going to see how important it is that you go through this process, because if you can truly grasp this, you will see that you're also the key to changing absolutely everything that you perceive as wrong on this planet.

But let's not get too deep just yet. First we need to understand what's governing the process of change, how your own behavior dictates results, what drives your behaviors and how simple it really is to change behavior if you just tie it all into the right mindset.

Update OS Day V-2: OpenSolaris 2009.06 impressions: (2010-05-01 09:18)

I installed OpenSolaris on an Athlon 64 X2 with 3 GB of RAM and it took an 40 minutes to install CD. After it booted up, I had Gnome 2.26 of course. It feels a lot like Linux, yet is smoother when I move around windows. I believe this has something to do with the 850 MB the kernel uses while OpenSuse 11.2 Gnome uses like 490 MB with nothing open. OpenSolaris 2009.06 is the only OS I can find on Ebay. The new release comes out in June. Solaris 2009 06 recognized my Dlink 108 Mbit Wifi connection and my NTFS slave drives, my Windows 7 partition and thumb drive. I asked the forum if developers could make a KDE and Gnome combo DVD like OpenSuse would.

There is no OpenOffice 3.1 so I was looking for a Wine emulator on Rapidshare, Megaupload, and others. That's what Linux has advantage with presently.

ZFS is a lot better file system than EXT4 and even BTRFS. ZFS is even more advanced than Microsoft's NTFS or Disturbed File System . It has more features than NTFS for Windows 7 on it.

My rating of OpenSolaris 2009 06 is an 7.5 out of 10. I knew I should take off 20 points for no office suite and no Wine. Stability is perfect however. It also doesn't come with any problems at all, just the bare bones! -5 points right there. It would make an awesome server with the stability. I don't think infiltrated Ubuntu's base, because Open Solaris came out in mid-2008 and wasn't great until 2009.06 release due to the improvements to ZFS features and ZFS tools integration into the Gnome GUI.

The GNU is complaining that it's inferior is compatible with OpenSolaris, but the OpenSolaris code isn't backwards compatible with their license. Having the ZFS file system in Linux is all the rage, but they can't due to GPL 3.0 incompatibility. That and Linux is still less stable even though you can't tell with Ubuntu and Fedora! UNIX is up 365 days. Linux is up 362 days a year. OpenSolaris could seriously overtake Linux in the future, because OpenSolaris has the best of both worlds. Linux only has one world and thus inferior. This answers the question that Linux passed UNIX solely do to the GNU and free was behind it. Even a professor would tell you that Linux was implemented as early as 1999 to cut costs and wiped UNIX off the map until Opensolaris was publically available.

Bad thing about OpenSolaris is you must have two boot loaders. You must always parition first, install Windows first, OpenSoarlis second and OpenSuse third; otherwise the GRUB menu only shows OpenSolaris and Windows and no OpenSuse. Even then I had to load into OpenSuse and select SDA3 on my yast boot loader and name SDA3 "OpenSolaris". I have to do this every time now. Fortunately, it doesn't create bad karma of OpenSolaris 2009 06 with me.

Solaris ZFS offers a dramatic advance in data management with an innovative approach to data integrity, tremendous performance improvements, and a welcome integration of file system and volume management capabilities. The centerpiece of this new architecture is the concept of the virtual storage pool which de-couples the file system from physical storage in the same way that virtual memory abstracts the address space from physical memory; allowing for much more efficient use of the storage devices. In ZFS, space is shared dynamically between multiple file systems from a single storage pool, and is parceled out from the pool as file systems request it. So, physical storage can be added to or removed from storage pools dynamically, without interrupting services. This provides new levels of flexibility, availability, and performance. And in terms of scalability, Solaris ZFS is a 128-bit file system. Its theoretical limits are truly mind-boggling—2128 bytes of storage and 264 for everything else, such as file systems, snapshots, directory entries, and devices.

VASIMR engine for Mars mission (2010-05-09 01:20)

The Variable Specific Impulse Magnetoplasma Rocket (VASIMR) Mars engine would send astronauts to mars in 40 days. It uses radio waves to ionize and heat a propellant and magnetic fields to accelerate the resulting plasma to generate thrust.

Franklin Chang-Diaz set up the Ad Astra Rocket Company in January 2005 to begin development of the VASIMR engine. Later that year, the company signed a Space Act Agreement with NASA, and were granted control of the Advanced Space Propulsion Laboratory. In this lab, a 50 kW prototype was constructed, and underwent testing in a vacuum chamber. Later, a 100 kW version was developed, and this was followed by a 200 kW prototype. After a long period of rigorous testing in a 150 m3 vacuum chamber, the latest configuration was deemed space-worthy, and it was announced that the company had entered into an agreement to test the VF-200 engine on the International Space Station, in or before 2013.

modding attempts successful. (2010-05-29 20:30)

You might have known that I have most of the Cave Shoot em ups for PS2, but I play it in a emulator called PCSX2 and SSF which in itself is clever piece of coding. Now I finally have the know-how, comprehension to mod two consoles, the Sega Saturn and PS2, because the chips are plug and play. I don't think I get kudos/karma for this, but who knows! This is the fourth hit on google.

And I also bought one Memor 32 modchip "firmware modified" memory card, so if I plug it in than I can read all the CDRs and DVDrs for PS and PS2 similar to a modchip. It's soldierless. That's even better than the DMS4. This is so much more less hassle than the DMS4 and costs $5 less! Only $60 with tax!

I found this program for Windows while looking at the Ubuntu Christian edition review. One of the modules is the free New English translation (NETfree) and another module is NetNotesfree for footnotes. There is the King James Edition module, but i don't like it. It is only useful for searching for text that would be hard in the book. It reads to you.

It is useful for throwing random quotes out during flame wars. I think there is a exorcist module. The forum members will think you're a Champlain and/or exorist!

Why Solaris went open source: to not get compensated over by cheaper RedHat's ALC_FLR.3 ! (2010-06-22 13:39)

Researching OpenSolaris 2010, a free System V UNIX, I come across a website that explains that in order to compete against Red Hat Linux in Government security requirements, they had to make the price point equal Red Hat's with only the customer service charges. So Red Hat was the first and one of three Linuxs to get EAL4 Augmented with ALC _FLR.3 including RedHat Linux, Oracle Linux, Suse Linux which is why the US Government is the largest buyer of Red Hat Linux. It only took OpenSolaris a year to be created after Red Hat accomplished this. The question is which one would you pick if customer service and patches were comparable with the latest Red Hat Enterprise Desktop? OpenSolaris has ZFS. I'm using OpenSuse BTW! Northrop Grumman likes Suse Linux too.

I use OpenSolaris since its 1st release in 2008 and I love it! I think no linux distro has enough technologies comparable with it. ZFS is better, SMF is easier, network virtualization is great! Why the hell use linux?

I know. Crossover isn't for UNIX yet! Damn good reason.

Mall of America (2010-06-25 12:09)

Walking around the MoA is funny in 2001 and 2010 by the Persian kiosk. "excuse me sir, can i ask you a question", "beautiful wife sir, beautiful wife, can i speak to you for a second", "wow look at this couple, come over here for a moment, let me show you something"... then when you ignore them they say "Have a GREAT afternoon" (f off)

Last time I was at MoA in June 2001, I got a laser pointer, Daytona USA Dreamcast. 9 Years later, I only took pictures of the place for guests.

HBO's A Song of Ice and Fire (2010-2014) (2010-06-29 10:07)

HBO now doing something very cool such as bringing the best fantasy novel series to television. Peter Jackson must've messed up. These are done in seasons with the first season "Game of Thrones" (book 1). Then a new book comes out in 2011, 2012, 2013, and 2014. The books won Locus, Nebula and Hugo awards. The Song of Ice and Fire storyline must be pretty liberal for HBO to turn it into five miniseries.

Looking forward to it.

OpenSuse 11.3 review (2010-07-27 22:06)

OpenSuse 11.3 is the first release with the BTRFS file system (alt name: ReiserFS 5). That was unstable so I continued EXT4 with the more EXT4 stability patches that went into Ubuntu 10.04 (installed that on a laptop and works great). Unfortunately, OpenSuse 11.3 does not like Crossover Linux and enjoys crashing with Winamp or sometimes with the NTFS drivers that came with Crossover Linux, would freeze itself up. It won't crash running Crossover Linux apps in Gnome or XFCE.... only KDE. I know OpenSuse 11.2 should handle [stable gameplay] Crossover Games, but I can't imagine OpenSuse 11.3 handling Crossover Games with Unreal Tournament 2k4, Half-life 2, Monkey Island SE, Elder Scrolls III Morrowind playable.

I like OpenOffice 3.2 as much as OpenOffice 3.1 (Opensuse 11.2) where I do my homework. The games are just as fun. It uses about the same RAM. My old Athlon XP PC from 2003 doesn't like the installation DVD and will shut down upon boot. I'm stuck with KDE 3.5.5 and Gnome 2.18 for that PC.

I installed the 64-bit DVD onto my Sempron 64 PC and it worked without crashing. The install finished the first time. WinApps were stable running on Crossover Linux. All the programs worked. The Sempron 64 PC is as fast as my Pentium IV PC. I used the Pentium IV PC for PC games until 2006 when I got a Athlon 64 X2 PC with a Geforce 8800 GTX.

OpenSuse 11.3 seems to install okay on Turion X2 Laptops since I installed it free for a cousin. WinVista crashed so OpenSuse 11.2 / 11.3 worked. Windows apps didn't yet crash on his laptop to my knowledge.

I finished installing OpenSuse 11.3 on two other 32-bit PCs (Pentium IV and Athlon XP) and the OS installed completely. I own the 32-bit and 64-bit version. Crossover Linux works without crashing for VLC and Winamp on the 32-bits. I prefer KDE.

I like OpenSuse 11.2 a bit better. Requests OpenSuse 11.4 not to crash [on mine] as much with Win Apps emulating! Fortunately, EXT4 rebuilds itself to the desktop shell with any crash. I have proven Crossover Linux crashes only on the Athlon 64 X2 PC. I give it an 9.0 out of 10 for being impressive.

Nice benchmarks for openSUSE 11.3!

Great Pyramid of Giza was an alien Microwave-based Emergency Beacon (2010-08-10 18:54)

According to some websites, the Great Pyramid was built by Extraterrestrials who used it to create Microwave energy so that it can be a beacon to show intelligent life. The Soviet KGB have found extraterrestrial bodies in the Great Pyramid pg Giza in 1990. Many pictures and symbols resemble UFOs and aliens. The great pyramid also served as a power plant. Underneath the Great Pyramid of Giza is supposed to be an 2600 year old extraterrestrial spaceship with an computer and lightspeed technology. <http://www.ufo-blogger.com/2011/03/egyptian-archaeologist-admits-pyramids.htm> I

Laser to get Sun's energy for heavy duty electricity? (2010-08-21 20:23)

<http://www.foxnews.com/story/0,2933,522857,00.html>

Japan's doing it too! All this time, I thought the Gov was against nuclear energy like they are with nuclear power plants. I always thought we needed more nuclear power plants before today.

We should stick with building nuclear power plants or ITER power plants or HiPER power plants. I know a energy source called Hydrosonic pump that outputs more energy than it takes to make it, and it is a lot less expensive to make!

Solar panels will help you manage your bills. It's like you are having the electricity for free. It's eco-friendly too.

Iain's Smashing Good Blog Site (2011-07-24 14:38:35)

Screw Eco-friendly. It's Karl Marx trying to do dictatorship of the proletariat on the nuclear power plants - that's just stupid. It's the eco-socialist manifesto! Power plants are businesses you know.

The Kyoto Accord doesn't work! Canada says it failed! USA hasn't been touched yet.

Image backup better than Ghost these days (2010-08-25 02:48)

For image backups, I have used Acronis True Image Home 2010 for Windows XP Pro and Vista. It won't backup a Linux partition, yet I would install a new Linux after major releases. Acronis has compression and archive splitting. It'll make a backup partition to put your image on or some other media such as DVD, USB HDDs, and another SATA hard drive. The Arconis 2010 is good for Vista. It works with Windows 7, but the taskbar seems to crash.

I have my music on DVD, and external hard drive. That's the only thing valuable on PC.

Nintendo never surrenders to Sony/Apple/Microsoft (2010-08-26 15:12) even if N64 & GameCube are considered failures sales-wise, the fact is those both made $ $ $ for Nintendo from day 1 onwards. So even if they didn't win, they still made hundreds of millions whereas someone like Microsoft made record-breaking losses. It will never surrender its right to produce hardware, not until the very last desperate opportunity to continue has been explored. Its recent failure to furnish its hardware platforms with sufficiently awe-inspiring games has been a mistake. It may be that Nintendo is eventually forced out of the hardware business. Nintendo does not believe that to be the case. .pre-price reduction and it sold over 200,000 units in FOUR days in Japan. Nintendo makes profits aren't through conquering but more like staying in one place. If you don't acquire or invest in new projects, obviously you will make more profits. That's why Nintendo always tries to do new stuff, because they don't ever make a base and go from there, it's always a gamble

Central Committee comes from 'Comrade File Cabinet'? (2010-08-30 12:32)

In 1922, Joseph Stalin was General Secretary of the USSR. Joseph created departments of the Central Committee and other organs at lower levels that were responsible for the registration and appointment of party officials. That's the only Bolshevik thing the Republican Party and Democratic Party should do.

Lutherans never had a stable value system to call their own. They borrow values from Catholics and act like Catholics.

This book reestablishes the Lutheran value system for the ELCA Catholic defector.

Brilliant book, yet it has been four years since the editors updated the notes on this bible. I know the editors were working on "The Apocrypha: The Lutheran Edition With Notes" (also own / also brilliant) so I am giving them both 5 stars. I wish LCMS had these books when I went to confirmation. Church was using the 1987 NIV Study Bible Concordia edition which I had to buy at Northwestern Book Store in 1999.

RedHat/Canonical Ltd team up against Sunwah (2010-09-18 08:52)

China, which likes to take the cheapest way out, has ran its entire economy on Sunwah and to a lesser extent Red flag. The US Government is using both Redhat and Ubuntu just to meet China's benchmark.

Linux is more secure than MAC and Windows. Maybe its time to dual-boot Linux?

EASEUS Partition Master 6.1. seemed to work on every Windows box I come across. I run OpenSuse for myself and Ubuntu for family who don't like OpenSuse.

Bought Archos 7 8GB Home Tablet with Android 1.6 (2010-09-19 00:37)

I bought one of these yesterday, because I didn't like the price $500 price of the Apple iPad 16 GB. It was only $149 with tax.

All Archos 7 plays Youtube and flash videos if you use the Skyfire browser.

Of course, there are drawbacks. I wouldn't give it a low rating, because it's missing features that only come with $500 tablets.

- The screen is resistive, and occasionally doesn't register your tap. This improves with time, if you turn on the click-on-tap sound setting.
- You download Android applications which are free / cheaper than iPads.
- The chip is supposedly slower to lower the pricepoint. I haven't noticed this much.
- Android runs on Linux kernel.

It plays AVC, DivX, Xvid, Quicktime, JPEG. Now for whatever reason if I go to a coffee shop, I can look good. On my 'date' in Caribou Coffee in mid-2005, I brought a PSP just to show JPEG slideshows to her, but we didn't become friends. She was in Physics and had nothing in common. PSP is all I have portable-wise other then a 32-bit Core Duo Acer laptop with Ubuntu 10.04.1 since 2006!

I can keep this in my vehicle and socialize it as people would do iPad, and get similar reactions. It's cheaper to replace than a lost laptop.

Best community award (2010-09-22 21:37)

The award goes to Gamespot, because this gaming website has the entire gaming blogging community who won't troll on your page, and cannot say anything personally negative; else they're banned like I was four times! At least for right now. Facebook and Twitter don't have the users on-board who care enough about your page and I'm one of those people. Gaming seems to be a pre-req for IT. Anyone can have the first relies in the least amount of time compared to any forum of any non-college genre. Facebook is dieing as we speak, beginning to look as discerted as Myspace. Overall this all makes Gamespot look ahead of its time. Gamespot's best days aren't behind it.

Lets Dispense  Really high gold prices....SCAM! (2010-09-27 14:00)

Ready to bet on the price of gold? If you think it's going to head upwards you might want to stop by your local Gold Bar dispensing ATM machine and make a withdrawal.

The Gold ATMs look like a standard ATM, standing at approximately 6 feet tall, but unlike your standard ATM with these machines you either insert your bank or credit card and purchase gold in 1 gram, 5 gram, 10 gram and 1 ounce units.

Okay so only 35 machines are expected in the U.S. by the end of 2010, but it shows how strong gold prices have become during the current economic climate.

Each ATM will be internet connected and will be updated with gold prices in ten minute increments, ensuring the latest gold prices are honored when you make your transaction.

Were there any TV ads when gold prices were low. Of course not. They're doing them when gold prices are super high. i say don't do it. The US needs the dollar anyway. People will buy into this scam!

Fantasy Football vs. Deathmatch vs. Capture the flag (2010-10-09 11:52)

I think my Uncle is casual about fantasy football. I just told them that people play Madden NFL. It's a clever marketing for their game (inside it you know), but my Uncle is doing it off Yahoo so he's non-hardcore. I watch the Vikings and Packers tomorrow on TV. Say if I had a girlfriend, it wouldn't be fantasy football excuses. I sure hope he knows Fantasy football has become what it's supposed to be: building a team entirely out of best players, and "guiding" them to victory. There isn't anybody stupid enough to use their original weapon in deathmatch or capture the flag in Unreal Tournament 3? You instead go for the flak cannon or rocket launcher or sniper rifle and who cares about the other weapons. You get fragged more with the other weapons.

Watching the real NFL sport prevents stupidity. Sports games are not necessarily smart either, because I never actually enjoy beating Madden due to everything randomly generated. Gears of War III, or Resistance 3, or Bulletstorm or Unreal Tournament or Team Fortress or Battlefield 3 or Modern Warfare are a better option for multiplayer, because you're never stupid when highest on the ladder. In real life, you even have bragging rights. I used to play well on Unreal Tournament and Unreal Tournament 2003 LAN parties in middle school, high school, and 2004 before LAN parties were defunct. All my print screened ladder scores were lost over the years.

That's what makes fantasy football both exciting and frustrating at the same time--the luck factor.

Let's privatize roads! (2010-10-12 20:16)

President Obama's stimulus plan, the government will spend billions of your dollars building new roads and fixing old ones. They say they'll do it efficiently. ush hours from hell are not natural phenomena. They're manmade - more precisely, politician-made. Private companies did a profitable project in California on Highway 91. Instead of building a brand-new road, a private developer added two lanes in the median strip of an existing highway. Many people are horrified by the idea of leasing roads to businesses.

More toll roads are a must to generate money for both companies and government. They both have their share of poll roads. It'll be like freight trains paying tolls.

The republican party needs to build more toll roads for us. Construction companies need to further develop tolls not in the government budget. It's common sense. Time is money.

China will pass us by if US won't expand toll roads.

Selecting your first Motorcycle (2010-10-18 00:08)

In a motorcycle market where motorcycles for the street are more specialized than ever, there is one category of motorcycle that is strangely under represented compared to, say, forty years ago. That category is motorcycles best suited to the beginning rider.

When I started riding, there were many new and used street bikes in the 80-125cc and 150-250cc classes well suited to beginning riders. All of the big four Japanese manufacturers (Honda, Yamaha, Suzuki, and Kawasaki) offered such bikes new, as did several smaller Japanese and Italian makers. Triumph had their 200cc Cub, and even Harley-Davidson, through their Aermacchi subsidiary, offered small displacement motorcycles for the beginning rider.

In the 1960's and 1970's, 50cc to 125cc motorcycles were considered "small," the 150-250cc motorcycles were intermediate, the 350cc to 500cc motorcycles were midsize bikes and 600cc and larger motorcycles were "big" bikes. Today, a 250cc motorcycle is considered small and a 600cc motorcycle mid-size. Even a liter bike (1000cc) is no longer considered "big" in a world of 1250-2000cc heavyweight motorcycles. I have read articles in the motorcycle press about the Yamaha V-Star 1100's, calling them "middleweight" cruisers!

This escalation toward bigger motorcycles has benefited older and more experienced riders, who now make up the largest share of the market, but it has left the beginning rider seeking to purchase his or her first motorcycle with fewer and fewer choices. An illustration of the problem is that the lightest weight and smallest displacement motorcycle Harley-Davidson makes in 2010 is the (approximately) 550 pound, 883cc Sportster. It is purchased by many entry level riders.

When I started riding, the 883cc Sportster was the hottest motorcycle you could buy, the ultimate ride for the experienced rider. This illustrates how skewed the market has become. While there are many faster and more powerful motorcycles today, I assure you that an inexperienced rider can get into big trouble very quickly on an 883 Sportster. Recommending 600cc and larger bikes to beginners is like sending children out to play on the freeway and the results are both predictable and (often) tragic.

There are still motorcycles that are suitable for the beginning rider and I am going to take a look at some of them in this article. Cruisers and standards are usually a better choice for the beginning rider than sport bikes. Modern sport bikes do what they do extremely well (which is go around corners—or a racetrack—at high speed), but they are often not very good for much else. Cruisers and standards are more versatile, at home on city streets, country lanes and the interstate. They are suitable for commuting, weekend rides, the occasional longer trip, are generally easier to maneuver at low speed (where a tip-over is most likely) and are a little less likely to encourage overly aggressive riding.

Low maintenance shaft or belt drives are advantageous on any motorcycle. Cast aluminum wheels, tubeless tires, triple disc brakes and self-adjusting valves are other worthwhile features found on some of the motorcycles discussed below. Self-canceling turn signals and anti-lock braking systems (ABS) are important safety features that should be standard on all street bikes; unfortunately, neither is offered on most entry level motorcycles. I will try to mention the above features where applicable.

My opinion is that small to medium displacement (125-250cc) motorcycles are most appropriate for new riders. They are generally lighter and easier to maneuver, easier to balance, cheaper to repair if damaged in a spill and less likely to get the beginning rider into trouble. It might be worthwhile to pay attention to the seat height figures given for the motorcycles below, as it is reassuring for most inexperienced (and also experienced!) riders to be able to put both feet on the ground when stopped. Light weight is an advantage, as is a low center of gravity, particularly for low speed maneuvering.

Unless otherwise noted, all of the motorcycle specifications used in this article were taken from the Cycle World Buyer's Guide. More detailed specifications on most of the bikes are available on the various Motorcycles and Riding Online "Motorcycle Comparison Charts." The motorcycles specifically mentioned below are examples of suitable motorcycles in various displacement classes. They are not the only possible choices, so if you find a similar machine from a major manufacturer that is not mentioned below, it is also probably a satisfactory first motorcycle.

The bikes listed below should be reasonably available on the used market and your first motorcycle should definitely be a used bike, unless you simply have money to burn. Your first bike is how you learn to ride, it is NOT supposed to be your dream bike or your ultimate ride. Virtually no one, despite their best intentions, keeps their first motorcycle for a long time, so it might as well be purchased used to minimize the cost of later trading it in for something else.

A beginning pilot would not expect to learn to fly in an F-16 fighter or a wide body jetliner, so why do beginning motorcyclists expect to learn to ride on a 600cc sport bike or a heavyweight cruiser? Ideally, I would like to see beginning riders buy a standard 125cc motorcycle for their first street bike. There is a reason that so many Motorcycle Safety Foundation courses maintain their aging fleets of 125cc Hondas for their entry level classes.

These bikes are especially well suited to beginning riders of smaller than average stature, limited upper body strength, or limited confidence in their ability to master this new activity. Even very experienced riders find use for a small bike. One good friend of mine owns (at last count) seven motorcycles, including a couple of Harleys and a couple of hot sport bikes, but his daily "in town" ride remains a 30 year old Honda 90 trail bike.

A 125cc street bike can accelerate briskly off the line, is fast enough to keep up with city traffic, will cruise at 50 mph and handles like a "real" motorcycle, not a scooter or a trail bike. If it falls onto its side, most riders can right it without assistance. In military aviation terms, a 125 makes an ideal primary trainer.

Of course, few riders will be satisfied with a 125cc machine in the long run. However, for the new motorcyclist's first few thousand miles, one of these lightweight machines will make a fine commuter and primary trainer. No matter what motorcycle a new rider buys first, within a year or two he or she will want to try something different. Most riders own several motorcycles before they find the bike they like best. Burn those last two sentences into your brain. Your first motorcycle is a trainer, not a "keeper," no matter what you buy! Unfortunately, Harley-Davidson, Victory, Moto Guzzi, BMW and Triumph offer nothing in this class.

The discontinued Honda CB 125S was just about the perfect first motorcycle. The CB 125S was produced for many years. A friend of mine used to let me ride hers, which was a late 1970's model. This lightweight standard looked and handled like a real motorcycle, which it was. It was powered by a 124cc four-stroke single cylinder engine and the final drive was by chain. The wheels were laced. Stopping power was provided by a front disc and rear drum brakes. There was even a helmet lock. Top speed was about 67 mph. The last year I can find it catalogued in the Motorcycle Price Guide was 1984. That year it cost $898 brand new.

Unfortunately, only Kawasaki (with their Kawasaki Eliminator cruiser) among the Japanese "Big Four" has recently imported a 125cc street bike into the U.S. (It is no secret that the big profits are in big bikes.) The Eliminator's decent suspension allows it to handle and corner well. It is powered by a 124cc air cooled, single cylinder motor. There is a 5 speed transmission and chain final drive. The brakes consist of a disc in front and drum for the rear. The seat height is 26.8 inches and the dry weight is 290 pounds. Top speed is about 60-65 MPH. The gas tank holds 3.4 gallons, enough to go a long way on this economical motorcycle.

With the demise of the 150-200cc class, the next step up in displacement is now the 250cc class (15 cubic inches). Today a 250 is considered a "small" motorcycle, but I am old enough to see them as "middleweights," which they truly are. Ideally, a 250cc class motorcycle is what the rider who has learned primary riding skills on a 125 should move up to. In military aviation terms, a 250 is your basic trainer.

A 250 is a versatile machine, fairly powerful, moderate in weight, acceptably fast. If necessary, it can cruise on the freeway at 65 mph for reasonable periods of time. A 250 is not a touring bike, although I once rode one from Eugene, Oregon to Los Angeles, California (a round trip of nearly 2,000 miles). A person can get into a lot of trouble on a 250, but for the beginning rider of average size, strength and confidence it can be an excellent trainer. A 250 street bike (not a dual sport) is just about the ideal size commuter bike for any rider, regardless of experience; it is fast enough to stay out of trouble and easy to handle and park.

The major American and European makers have not offered any street bikes in this class for a long time, but the Japanese have. In a sport bike there is the Kawasaki Ninja 250. There are good numbers of Honda Nighthawk 250 standard and CMX250C Rebel cruisers available on the used market. Suzuki is represented by the GZ250 cruiser. From Yamaha came the sharp looking Virago 250 cruiser. All of these 250's have four-stroke motors and all rely on conventional telescopic front forks and chain final drive. The average weight of these bikes is about 300 pounds. All are available in reasonable numbers and at reasonable prices on the used market.

For the aspiring sport bike rider, the Kawasaki Ninja 250 is the obvious, and often only, choice. It has a high revving, dohc, 248cc inline twin engine and a six-speed transmission. The rear suspension is provided by a mono-shock. (All of the other 250's discussed here have conventional twin rear shocks.) It also comes with cast wheels, disc brakes front and rear and a full sport fairing. The gas tank holds a whopping 4.8 gallons. The Ninja's dry weight is 304 pounds. It is the fastest and best handling of the modern 250's, with a top speed of about 100 mph. It's 29.3 inch seat height and sport bike ergonomics will be the main drawbacks for most beginning riders.

For the person who wants the versatility of a standard motorcycle, the Honda Nighthawk 250 is about the only choice. The Nighthawk is attractive and practical. Its 234cc sohc parallel-twin engine and 5-speed transmission gives it adequate performance. Its laced wheels and drum brakes front and rear should make it economical, but its list price was actually somewhat higher than the other 250's, $100 more than the Virago and $400 more than the Ninja. The gas tank holds 4.3 gallons, enough to go a long way on a 250. The Nighthawk's seat height is the same as the Ninja's and taller than the other 250's, at 29.3 inches. It weighs 287 pounds.

The best selling motorcycles today are cruisers, which explains why there are three recent cruisers in the 250cc class. The Honda Rebel was that company's entry. The same engine and transmission that powers the Nighthawk powers this mini cruiser. Strangely, the Rebel cruiser has a shorter wheelbase than the standard Nighthawk, but weighs in 19 pounds heavier (at 306). It gets a disc brake in front, which is a real improvement, and laced wheels. Fuel capacity is 2.6 gallons. The seat height is only 26.6 inches and the center of gravity is lower than the Nighthawk's.

The Suzuki GZ250's 249cc sohc single cylinder motor gave it a reported top speed of 76 mph; I would expect a little more horsepower from the Honda 234cc inline twins, and the Yamaha 249cc V-twin. However, there is no denying that singles are fun. A disc in front and a drum in back provide braking and the wheels are laced. The GZ250 cruiser weighs 301 pounds and has a generous 3.7 gallon gas tank. Seat height is 27.8 inches.

To my eyes, the Yamaha Virago 250 was the best looking of the 250 cruisers. The overall visual impression is of a true middleweight motorcycle. Its 60 degree sohc V-twin motor and five speed transmission provides adequate thrust and a little more character than the Honda and Kawasaki inline twins. A V-twin usually has a lower center of gravity than does a vertical twin. The Yamaha came with laced wheels and a disc brake in front; like the other cruisers, it has a rear drum brake. The Virago's gas tank holds 2.5 gallons and the bike weighs 301 pounds. The seat height is 27 inches.

With the nearly complete demise of the 350-400cc class, 500cc (30 cubic inch) bikes are now the next common step up in displacement from the 250's. To again put it in military aviation terms, a 500 is analogous to an advanced trainer. A 500cc street bike used to be a large middleweight motorcycle. Marlon Brando rode a 500cc Triumph Speed Twin in the seminal motorcycle movie The Wild Ones, which was inspired by the Hollister incident back in the 1950's. Not many outlaws today ride sweet 500cc twins!

Once the most competitive class in sporting street bikes (much as the 600cc class is today), the 500cc class has become sort of a sales backwater. Nevertheless, there is a reasonable selection of both new and used bikes available.

The typical 500 has most of the same advantages possessed by the 250's, only more so. A 500cc bike offers more of everything compared to a 250, including greater weight. The adult beginning rider of average or larger than average size, strength, and confidence will be well served by a 500cc machine as long as he or she has a reasonable amount of self-control. The average weight of the 500's discussed below is 388 pounds, 88 pounds more than our average 250. A 500cc bike is fast enough to run with the big boys, although it will be working harder at any given speed than a 600cc or larger displacement motorcycle. This is very attractive to most prospective buyers, but bear in mind that a beginner can also get into trouble more quickly than he or she would on a 250. Until 2001, 500cc was the maximum displacement allowed in Gran Prix racing (there are also 250cc and 125cc classes). While a 500 can be among the most versatile of motorcycles for the solo street rider, it can also be a very high performance motorcycle!

A typical 500cc street bike probably has a top speed of around 100 mph and can cruise for extended periods of time above the legal speed limit on the highway. It is still light enough to be a good commuter bike in the city and relatively easy to park. Most 500's have enough acceleration to blow away all but the quickest cars in an impromptu "stoplight Grand Prix." 500's traditionally have the handling and brakes to back up their acceleration and speed, if the rider has the experience, self-control and judgment to use them properly.

New or recently manufactured 500cc class bikes are available from Kawasaki, Suzuki and Yamaha in Japan and Royal Enfield in India (formerly of the UK). The same brands are prominent on the used market, along with the discontinued Buell Blast. The major European manufacturers no longer offer entry level 500cc street bikes, which is a pity. (500cc Grand Prix race replicas are not good first bikes!)

Perhaps the standout in the 500cc class, at least from the perspective of the first time buyer, is the Buell Blast. The Blast was designed as a sport-standard specifically for the adult entry level buyer. It has an ohv 492cc single cylinder motor designed to be as maintenance free as possible. The transmission is a rugged five-speed. In fact, the whole motorcycle is designed to be as maintenance free as possible. Valves never need adjusting, there is a single 40mm CV carburetor, the choke is automatic, the final drive belt never needs adjusting, the 16" cast alloy wheels run sticky tubeless tires and so on.

Everything about this motorcycle was designed to be fun and unintimidating. Included are disc brakes front and rear with two piston calipers, optional seat heights of 25.5 inches or 27.5 inches, a dry weight of only 360 pounds and a 2.8 gallon gas tank. (Sufficient since the mileage approaches 70 miles/gallon.) The primary load bearing frame member is a rectangular steel backbone, which also carries the oil supply for the dry sump engine. Suspension is by conventional telescopic front forks and a rear mono-shock.

The Blast's reported top speed is 95 mph. Stability is good and the handling is quick and razor sharp. As delivered, the Blast is so quiet and smooth that it almost does not seem like the big single that it is. However, a Vance & Hines replacement header/muffler, coupled with a low restriction air filter and a re-jetted carb, will fix that.

The Kawasaki Vulcan 500 LTD is a typically styled middleweight cruiser. It shares the same basic 498cc dohc inline twin as the Kawasaki 500cc sport bike, but the Vulcan's motor is tuned for more midrange torque and less high RPM horsepower. The transmission has six-speeds. Fuel/air mixture gets to the engine through two 32mm carburetors. The frame is a conventional mild steel cradle. Suspension duties are handled by telescopic front forks and twin rear shocks. The wheels are laced, and the brakes consist of a disc in front and a drum in back. The Vulcan 500 has a teardrop shaped gas tank that holds 4 gallons of gas and a tank mounted speedometer. Seat height is 28.1 inches. Claimed dry weight is 439 pounds.

From Suzuki we have the Suzuki GS500E sport-standard. It is powered by a 487cc dohc inline twin fed by two 33mm carburetors. There is a six-speed transmission and chain final drive. The frame is a perimeter type and conventional telescopic forks and a rear mono-shock handle suspension duties. Disc brakes front and rear stop the three spoke cast aluminum wheels and tubeless tires. The gas tank holds 4 gallons. Seat height is a tall 31.1 inches. Claimed dry weight is 372 pounds and the wheelbase is 55.5 inches. The Suzuki GS500E is one of the best equipped bikes in the class and it is usually quite reasonably priced on the used market.

Yamaha's Virago 535 cruiser, discontinued after the 2001 model year, is more radical looking than the Kawasaki Vulcan 500. A smooth 70-degree sohc V-twin engine that displaces 535cc powers the chopper-esque Virago. This engine is fed by two 34mm carburetors. Power reaches the rear wheel through a five-speed transmission and shaft final drive, the only shaft drive in the 500cc class, a big plus. The backbone type frame uses the engine as a stressed member. The raked front forks share suspension chores with dual rear shocks. A disc brake in front and a drum brake in the rear stop the laced wheels. Self-canceling turn signals are both a convenience and a safety feature. Dual shorty slash cut mufflers enhance the chopper image. The 28.3 inch seat height allows most riders to reach the ground with both feet. The 401 pound dry weight is average for the class and the low center of gravity makes low speed maneuvers less stressful.

All of this sophistication and style once put the Virago 535 at the top of the 500cc cruiser class. It remains one of the best beginner bikes in the class and it is still available on the used market.

600cc Class and larger

The question here becomes whether these powerful machines are ever good first bikes, and if so, under what circumstances? To use my military aviation analogy for the last time, starting with one of these machines is like trying to learn to fly in a combat aircraft. The most typical accident for the beginner on a new 600cc sport bike is caused by a loss of control the very first time the bike is ridden, usually within a couple miles of the dealership from which he or she bought the bike. This is not an encouraging statistic. These are not machines for the youthful or immature rider. The lure of power and speed represented by such machines will almost certainly overcome the self-control and limited skill of such riders, often with tragic results. If you are not over thirty, a mature and responsible thirty, do yourself and your loved ones a favor and learn on a lighter, easier to control, less powerful motorcycle.

A 600-650cc machine (650cc equals 40 cubic inches) does give the heavy rider, the new street rider who has extensive experience on dirt bikes, or the person who anticipates doing a lot of two-up riding (couples, for instance), a more powerful alternative to the bikes previously discussed. Motorcycles of this size will generally be heavier and more difficult to maneuver at low speed. They can be a handful in conditions of reduced traction (like gravel or dirt roads). They will cruise at high speeds for extended periods of time and can be used for touring with appropriate accessories. Because they generally cost more either new or used than the bikes previously discussed, they may have more features and more accessories may be available. The dry weight of the bikes profiled below varies from 350 to 495 pounds, averaging 423 pounds.

Even more powerful 750cc and larger motorcycles are, in my opinion, suitable for very few beginning riders. I regard them as beyond the scope of this article. They may be suitable for adult riders returning to the sport after a long layoff, but such riders are not first time buyers and usually have a good idea of what sort of bike they want. I will mention a few 600-650cc class motorcycles with this warning: FOR MATURE ADULTS ONLY! (You know, the over 40 crowd.)

The 600cc class Honda Shadow VLX represents that company's middleweight cruiser. It is the smallest bike in this group in displacement. There is a standard model and a somewhat spiffier Deluxe model. The latter has chromed cases and cylinder heads and two-tone paint. The VLX is powered by a 583cc sohc V-twin engine, which delivers its power through a five-speed transmission and chain final drive. The wheels are laced. The front brake is a disc and the rear brake is a drum. The gas tank holds only 2.9 gallons. The height of the comfortable seat is a low 25.6 inches, excellent for those of short stature. Wheelbase is 63.2 inches. Dry weight is given as 445 pounds. The VLX is handsome and practical, but not lavishly equipped. As with most Honda models, it is well represented on the used market.

The Yamaha V-Star 650 is available in two models. There is the more aggressive looking V-Star Custom and the more retro appearing V-Star Classic. Both are well appointed and handsome bikes. These are large machines for middleweights and they share the following specifications. Power comes from an air-cooled sohc V-twin displacing 649cc. There is a smooth five-speed transmission. The wheelbase of both is 64 inches. Both are built on the same Softail-looking frame with concealed rear shocks. The fuel capacity of the attractive teardrop tank is 4.3 gallons, with the instruments mounted on top a-la H-D. The front brakes are discs and the rear brakes are drums. The wheels are laced and the back tire is wide. Features of both include chrome engine/transmission cases and cylinder heads, shaft final drive and self-canceling turn signals. However, there are significant differences between the two.

The Classic, particularly, looks like a heavyweight motorcycle. The Classic's chrome headlight is larger, the seat is thicker and the fenders are longer and wider than the Custom's. The front forks are fully shrouded by chrome covers and the laced front wheel is fatter and smaller in diameter. Seat height is 28 inches. Dry weight of the Classic is a portly 495 pounds, very heavy for a 650 and especially a 650 ridden by an inexperienced rider.

The Custom is, to my eyes, the most attractive of the middleweight cruisers. It looks a lot like a chromed-out Harley Softail Standard. The dry weight of the Custom is 460 pounds, so it is also a heavy 650. It features a slim "cycle" style front fender and a bobbed rear fender. The laced front wheel is larger in diameter, narrower and held between conventional (un-shrouded) forks. The seat is thinner and lower; seat height is only 25.6 inches. The principle drawback to these excellent V-Stars from the beginner's standpoint is their considerable weight. Both models sold well and are available at reasonable prices on the used market.

The discontinued Suzuki Savage 650 is an unusual midsize cruiser in that it is powered by an air-cooled, sohc, 652cc single-cylinder engine, rather than a twin. This big thumper is very light in weight, at only 350 pounds dry. The wheelbase is 58.3 inches. This is a true 650 at a 500's size, weight and price. The seat height is a reasonable 27.6 inches. The belt final drive should be virtually maintenance free. Other specifications are more mundane. The transmission has five speeds, the slender gas tank holds only 2.8 gallons, suspension is by telescopic forks in front and conventional dual shocks in back, the wheels are laced and the brakes consist of a disc in front and a drum in the back.

The Savage comes with a low sissy bar and passenger backrest, buckhorn handlebars and a bobbed rear fender. These are features that many riders purchase as accessories for other bikes. The Savage 650 is clearly one of the best buys on the used market.

The Kawasaki W650 is a different kind of retro bike, a standard easy to mistake for a late 1960's Triumph Bonneville. Kawasaki claimed that the W650 was inspired by their own 1960's vintage W1 twin (itself a knockoff of a pre-unit construction BSA 650), but anyone who has seen a W1 knows the W650 looks nothing like that and very much like the vastly more popular Bonneville. The tank, tank badges, rubber knee pads, rubber fork gaiters, cases, exhaust system, seat, fenders, headlight and paint job all reek of Triumph influence. This is not bad thing, as the 1968-1970 Triumph Bonnevilles are widely regarded as some of the most beautiful motorcycles ever built.

Whatever its heritage, the W650 is a versatile all-around motorcycle and one of my personal favorites. It is not a typical first bike. It is more likely to be purchased by a canny old pro than an inexperienced beginner. It is the kind of bike discriminating riders settle down with after owning several previous machines.

The W650 offers classic styling and modern reliability, without oil leaks. An air-cooled vertical twin with a 360-degree crankshaft powers it, again like a classic Triumph. However, this Kawasaki twin has a sohc and displaces 676cc. The slick shifting transmission has five speeds and final drive is by chain. There is a kick starter, as well as electric starting. The gas tank holds 4 gallons. A W650 weighs 430 pounds, quite a bit more than a 650 Bonneville's 386 pounds. That includes the weight of a front disc brake, although the rear still has to make do with a drum brake. The W650's seat height is 31.5 inches, but the bike is narrow, which helps the rider's feet reach the ground.

It is not a particularly cheap 650, as it is a highly desirable bike on the used market. However, it is an easy to ride, good handling, well equipped motorcycle and one of the top choices for a rider returning to motorcycling after a long lay-off.

Opera 10.6 is unpopular, yet better than firefox. (2010-10-24 16:01)

It doesn't lag like firefox, and it has ad block and flashblock. You can clear all your data with one click. Just have both so when firefox decides to repeatably crash. Opera to the rescue.

opera:config #UserPrefs|EnableOnDemandPlugin ^ blocks flash via URL bar

Also I imagine that Bluray is good for Playstation and bad for movies. DVDs are better due to saving 40 % on everything. If you have a 1080i camera (and they're under $200 now), just murder the bitrate to 1 Mbps and 80 kbps he-AAC and 2 hours fit on DVD. 1080i is a good resolution. I don't know what is clearer, 720p at 2 Mbits or 1080i at 1 Mbit. It'll look like Satellite transmissions.

1 Mbit meets transparency with 2010 AVC encoders.

PlayStation 3 closing in on Xbox 360 in console race (2010-10-29 13:10)

Sony's PlayStation 3 console is now a mere 3 million units behind Microsoft's Xbox 360 in the pathetically named Console War™. According to newly released data from each platform holder, PS3 has sold 41.6 million units worldwide, compared to Xbox 360's 44.6 million units.

Recent sales make happy reading for Sony also: since May 2010, 5.6 million PS3s have been sold, compared to 4.3 million Xbox 360s.

This isn't necessarily a surprise. Previous reports have indicated that the PS3 was slowly overturning the Xbox 360's headstart, and now one analyst is predicting Sony's tortoise will grab second place (behind Nintendo's all-conquering Wii) from Microsoft's hare by the end of 2012. Take the mic, EEDAR's Jesse Divnich:

"Worldwide, Sony will eventually take the lead from Microsoft, likely by the end of 2012. North America is a tougher challenge, and as we have seen lately Microsoft's lead is widening. I don't know if the PlayStation 3 will ever overtake the Xbox 360 in North America. Maybe 2014? 2016?"

Of course, as Divnich later points out, third place doesn't seem so bad this generation. While Nintendo's GameCube suffered from its third place finish in the last console generation, it only sold around 22 million units. With years left in the tank, both the PS3 and Xbox 360 have almost doubled that, and have a better software tie-in ratio (that is, how many games every console owner is buying).

So, could this be the first console generation where three platforms sell 75 million+ units each? The Wii's already made it!

Guess which series has David Duchovny, Gillian Anderson, Robert Patrick in it?

Two years ago, I bought the best SCI-FI TV series, Star Trek TNG (not really battlestar galatica). Today I'm getting the 2nd best SCI-FI series where The Gray making a cameo appearance. The first movie was pretty good. The 2nd movie was disappointing.

A lot better than Warehouse 13 or star trek voyager!

Minnesota Twins season in review (2010-11-05 13:02)

The Minnesota Twins had a pretty good year in their new ball park. They won 94 games, won the American League Central division, and made the playoffs. This team spent 127 days in first place, built a lead as big as 12 games, and went 48-26 after the all star break to lock down the divisional title. They did so by beating up on their divisional rivals; they only went 9-9 against the Detroit Tigers but were 38-16 against the Chicago White Sox, Cleveland Indians, and Kansas City Royals.

The Twin offense is led by Catcher Joe Mauer. He has another great year as he hit .327 with 9 home runs and 75 RBI. As a team they scored 781 runs for fifth best among the 14 AL clubs. Their team BA was .273 good enough for third amongst the AL teams. However they only hit 142 home runs and that is certainly due to their new home and not playing in the homer dome. The really good number here is they struck out only 967 times while drawing 559 walks. Their pitching staff gave up 671 runs, and the staff ERA was 3.95. They were led by Carl Pavano who went 17-11 with a 3.75 ERA. As a staff they had the least amount of walks (383) of the entire American League. They struck out 1,048 batters which was just the 10th best number among AL staffs. Their closer, Joe Rauch, converted 21 saves and had a 3.12 ERA.

All in all this is a pretty solid club. Let us not forget they played half the season without Justin Morneau. However the Twins are proving that one of the better ways to win in the AL is with a strong rotation and great defense. This team gave up 1,493 hits, but only allowed 671 of those runners to come around to score. That is a very impressive number.

Properganda in the streets (2010-11-06 13:16)

Last night saw New York's Times Square turned into a shrine for Microsoft's Kinect. In an opulent/obscene (delete as you see fit) display of corporate wealth, the company booked the entire square for its launch of Kinect, and put on a spectacular show.

While rapper Ne-Yo led hundreds of dancers through a routine, every one of the jumbotron screens in Times Square displayed Kinect advertising. Traffic through the whole area was blocked, and queues reportedly stretched for three blocks. Those at the front had waited since Monday to be first.

Kotaku has a few shots of the event in progress, so go here for more. It looks like some sort of modern Nuremberg Rally for soccer moms, but you can't argue about Microsoft's commitment to force-feeding Kinect to the whole of the civilized world.

Microsoft recently announced it was aiming for 5 million Kinect sales by the end of 2010. On this form, you can actually see them pulling it off.

I made the same shot 5 years ago on here! There is a theme in OpenSuse Linux to achieve a dock also. I wouldn't pay for MAC for the dock menu.

Toy Industry going bankrupt in few years (2010-11-07 15:12)

I've seen all the really low prices on toys, because they're no longer fashionable! Here are what children want these days.

The top 10 toys for Christmas 2010, according to the report are:

- 1.) iPhone 4 (14 %)
- 2.) iPod touch (13 %)
- 3.) iPad (12 %)
- 4.) Kinect for Xbox (6 %)
- 5.) Zhu Zhu Pet Hamsters / Kung Zhu Hamsters (5 %)
- 6.) Flip Video camera (4 %)
- 7.) Toy Story 3 Jet Pack Buzz Lightyear (4 %)
- 8.) PlayStation Move (4 %)

What's more amazing is that 39 percent of children in all age categories surveyed wanted Apple products, while 17 % of 5-8 year old's wanted something from Apple, 50 % of 9-12 year olds wanted an Apple product and 13-16 years olds requested Apple products 66 % of the time.

With 2,138 children polled the numbers should be a pretty accurate demographic for U.S. Children.

You know what? This toy industry going bankrupt thing was already predicted in a videogame called Syberia from 2002 and it got 9.1. I came across it reading Secret of Monkey Island Special Edition and Monkey Island LeChuck's Revenge Special Edition. I do not own the Xbox version.

Google Chrome OS is NOT Ubuntu in an sense it does Ubuntu things (2010-11-10 14:29)

Google Chrome OS may be Ubuntu under the hood, but it isn't Ubuntu with Gnome. It will be a ninchi. My mother won't like Chrome OS. Maybe other moms like Chrome OS. If somebody asks, it does everything Ubuntu would do except for the GUI aspect.

...Supposedly, Google's Chrome Netbook is expected to be made by Inventec and will be shipping 60,000 to 70,000 units in their initial shipment. After this Chrome notebook is announced, the source that spoke with Digitimes reports that Acer and Hewlett-Packard will follow up with products in December. Both follow-up products will be manufactured by Quanta Computer.

I doubt that Chrome OS can outdo Ubuntu in the desktop market anytime in the future. It may make it into the top 10 linux distros, but it won't have the huge impact like Google says it will.

Dieing collections (2010-11-17 14:44)

I have been surfing around the Internet for why comic books died. I learned that Marvel Comics went to bankruptcy in the 1990s in 2008 and movies generated all the profit they needed. The comic books used to be 4 color pathlets which are cheap to make and those have been collectible. When Marvel and DC increased the colors to 64 colors, the magazines began to die in the late 1990s. Magna is never a good decision. Books stores used to carry competitions of Marvel comics before they stopped doing this also.

Right now it is 25 to 35 year olds buying videogames and they been doing this since Nintendo entertainment system.

Obama shrinking gamer population (2010-11-18 12:17)

When I post two most valuable games like Panzer Dragoon Saga, and MUSHA (Genesis), there was a 'mute' response. If it is anything other than Xbox 360, then I expect a mute response.

It has to be Microsoft or Apple due to karma maybe? This Microsoft or Apple fanboy ideology sucks.

It's obvious People use Netflix or torrent, because even $10 DVDs are too expensive.

They emulate roms on their iPad in order to save even more money. Other people cut all videogame spending to save money for their 3G/4G connection. It's ultimately about funding 3G/4G service. Then they use the 3G to take pictures with their 8 MP camera on their iPhone/Android and post it on their Facebook thru 3G/4G ultimately killing the gaming industry.

Top ten SCI-FI films of 2000s (2010-11-20 13:54)

Lets get one thing straight. I'm not a Dexter loving, Mad Men loving, and Oprah Winfrey loving liberal. I pick this decade, because Hollywood would have already been post-Independence Day, Post-Alien Resurrection, and Post-Matrix.

- 1.) The Dark Knight
- 2.) Batman Begins
- 3.) Iron Man 2
- 4.) Iron Man
- 5.) Spiderman 2
- 6.) Spiderman
- 7.) Spiderman 3
- 8.) Transformers
- 9.) Star Trek (2009)
- 10.) End of Evangelion or
Eva: We Are [Not] Alone

It isn't beginning with Children of Men, and doesn't have District 9 in it. The movie scores are way better too.

Playing Torchlight: becos I'm casual now (2010-11-24 02:32)

Runic Games is a post-Flagship Studios developer that made Hellgate London. Like the PC game FATE from 2005 (which I haven't played yet), it is cloning Diablo II hack and slash gameplay. If the best Diablo 2 clone was Dungeon Siege 2, Torchlight is in the top 5. I'm level 20. The $8 game comes with the 1.15 patch if you would rather not download 450 MB patch.

Geforce GTX 280 screenshot, 6 GB of RAM, C2Q Q9550.

I recommend it to any mainstream RPG Fan whose lost their hardcoreness, yet became Wii casual in preference. I am also playing Vanquish on PS3 and gotten 10 hours into the adventure. It's fun. I kick a lot of butt in it

Went Deer hunting with uncle (2010-11-24 13:59)

I went up to northern Wisconsin to hunt white tail, because the white tail population is huge here. I brought my used weatherby mark v 300 rifle. Weatherby does have a 1.5" guarantee. The one-piece bolt body is fluted and there is a shroud at the rear of the bolt to prevent escaping gas from exiting from the rear of the bolt into the shooter's face in the event of a blown case. There are three gas escape ports in the side of the bolt to let gas escape in a safe direction. The Mark V Magnum action was designed for maximum strength, and indeed it was billed as the world's strongest action, a title it still claims today. Weatherby's wood stocks are reinforced with a steel bar in the pistol grip, and steel pins are located throughout the action mortise and epoxied in place to increase structural integrity. The Mark V Deluxe features a select Clara walnut stock with a rosewood forearm tip and grip cap set off by line spacers made from thin slices of maplewood. The pistol grip and forearm are checkered in a French skip-line point pattern, and there is a maplewood diamond inlay in the pistol grip cap. A durable high gloss finish shows off the wood to maximum advantage. Weatherby Deluxe stocks incorporate a cheek piece and a small amount of cast-off for quicker and more precise mounting. The butt area is generous, and the recoil pad is top quality.

Another 64-bit PC costed $148 (2010-11-28 12:04)

I bought the best motherboard brand possible, ASUS, and replaced a malfunctioning Soyo Dragon Black Edition motherboard running an Athlon XP 2400 with 512 MB.

I had an extra Athlon 64 X2 4800+ and 3 GB of DDR2 laying around. I got the ASUS M2N68-AM Plus motherboard. Afterward, I installed Windows 7 and OpenSuse 11.3 on it yesterday. That PC has a bunch of freeware games, Roms, and advanced audio coding archives on it. People normally buy Serial SATA Power Data to 4 Pin IDE+SATA Data Cable for your IDE hard drives now-a-days which cost $5.

Always wanted to own a Wallaby (2010-12-06 17:25)

Wallabys are a pouched mammal, that are just as expensive as dogs. Wallaby eat grass and plants. I'll have to find cheap lettuce and feed it every day.

I can get friends just by owning one. Having the most bizarre/strange mammal in a 5 mile radius anyhow.

Found a breeder in Minneapolis.

Australia isn't bankrupt yet (2010-12-10 16:00)

I think we already passed the bankrupted stage.

The USA has serious socio-economic problems such as a nearly 10 trillion dollar debt which equates to roughly $40,000 debt per person. Lack of health insurance coverage causes 18,000 unnecessary American deaths a year. Women are 70 percent more likely to die in childbirth in America than in Europe Being that the USA is about 15 times as populous as Australia, makes the fact that the USA is #1 in the world for GROSS DOMESTIC PRODUCT.

In Australia a citizen only has a .0000006 % shot of becoming a billionaire,... in the USA a citizen has a .0000013 % shot at becoming a billionaire! Twenty percent of Americans think the sun orbits the earth. Seventeen percent believe the earth revolves around the sun once a day.

The United States has lost 1.3 million jobs to China in the last decade

In Australia, overall, almost half (46 %) of men and women reported having experienced an assault and/or sexual assault since the age of 15.

Twelve million American families—more than 10 percent of all U.S. households—"continue to struggle, and not always successfully, to feed themselves." Families that "had members who actually went hungry at some point last year" numbered 3.9 million"

The USA's poverty percentage is currently between 12 and 15 % with roughly 40 % (about 120 million people) will fall below the poverty line in the next 10 years. Not only this, but according to the human poverty index, 20 % of americans lack functional literary skills and 17 % of people fall below 50 % of the median income.

According to the "The Human Development Index (HDI) is an index combining normalized measures of life expectancy, literacy, educational attainment, and GDP per capita for countries worldwide. It is claimed as a standard means of measuring human development, a concept that, according to the United Nations Development Program (UNDP) refers to the process of widening the options of persons, giving them greater opportunities for education, health care, income, employment, etc. " Australia has , FOUR Australian cities are in the top ten (Melbourne 2nd, Perth 4th, Adelaide tied at 7th, and Sydney tied at 9th). The list shows five Australian cities gracing the top 50, the first US city to appear on that list is Honolulu which ranks 28.

The USA has 1,867,059 acres of productive rich land, one of the richest nations in natural resources!!!

Australia has only 468,502 acres of arable land! That is pretty limiting!

One in every 911 people in Australia go bankrupt.

Around 20 % of all bankruptcies in Australia are business related (not personal).

50 % of Australian bankruptees owe less than $20,000, and 12 % have been bankrupt before.

Australian People under the age of 40 are the most likely to be declared bankrupt.

Personal reasons (like illness) and economic conditions are the two biggest contributors to Australian business filing for bankruptcy.

The Perfect Storm II (2010) (2010-12-10 17:54)

19 years ago, I was stranded on Halloween 1991 in a Jeep Cherokee going trick 'n treating about 2 miles from my house. I had to walk to a neighbors. They made a movie called "The Perfect Storm" starring George Clooney which was the Northeaster section of the same storm.

Now tonight, we're having deja-vu of the Northeaster Storm in Late October to November 1991. Tonight is going to be historic in Wisconsin.

I now officially have two associate degrees, but it isn't anything to get excited for. This is because no employer takes 2 year ppl.

Kawasaki Ninja from 1990s are cheap. (2010-12-12 06:57)

I saw a 1993 Kawasaki Ninja GPX 600cc for $1950 with 9000 miles on it 250 miles away. Sounds like a great deal. I am the last person on facebook my age who hasn't owned a motorcycle yet. I believe I heard from Rance (knows cell), a former BSA Eagle scout, that owning a motorcycle is one of the only ways to start a relationship and keep a girlfriend these days. It looks like I'll take his word for it.

WINE programs never crashed running 5 hours.

OpenSuse 11.4 Milestone 5 will boot from YAST with all XFCE, LXDE, KDE, and Gnome installed. FXCE won't show up even though programs will. Expect it to freeze up when memory gets exceeded (with 512 MB of RAM), and if you have 768 MB or 1 GB of RAM than you have no worries. The crashing is 100 % RAM related. Wants to go into "Fast boot" than its slow boot fail-safe kicks in after 20 seconds.

To avoid crashing, I looked up "Resolution" in KDE menu search-box and used KDM to change the resolution to 1280x768 with those PCs on 512 MB of RAM. This crash phenomenon is known to happen in KDE 4.4.4 in Open-Suse 11.3

KDE 4.6 beta 2 looks cool by itself. No more kernel lock to increase performance by 10 %! LXDE still a great desktop shell, and didn't crash. Best for 512 MB of RAM PCs.

Gnome 2.32.2 never crashed yet. LibreOffice looks and acts like OpenOffice. no complaints. Had to install VLC to play audio codec.

Way I'm funding a Sandy Bridge CPU (2010-12-28 11:33)

On Christmas 2011, I should be able to fund a ASUS LGA 2011 motherboard, 8 GB of DDR3 RAM while my parents will buy the 8-core Sandy Bridge CPU. I know that this is the reason people are waiting to upgrade their 4 cores.

There are Larrabee (GPU) characteristics in the Sandy Core so it will be cheaper, and better at 2D desktop acceleration at lower price points than without Larrabee characteristics. L3 cache of 20 MB or 2.5 MB per core. The Radeon HD 5970 is good for another 2 years. If the Sandy Bridge CPU is out of the question by December 2011, I'll settle for the latest high-end XFX Radeon GPU or combine birthday money with it.

Meanwhile, I'll upgrade my Android 1.7 Archos 7 to a Android 2.2 Archos 10 next Birthday and sell the old one off Amazon! Or if my parents cannot afford a Sandy Bridge CPU, I'll convince them to combine birthday money and Christmas presents towards one.

Movies that scared me (2011-01-05 04:38)

I wasn't afraid of "The Thing" in 1982, because I was used to the Resident Evil games. Once you get used to the Resident Evil than it is a piece of cake. I can handle the gore, it is the element of surprise that gets me. Here are a list of movies I get nervous over. In no order

- 1.) The Ring from 2002, because it was like the Grudge, yet worse. Things coming out of the TV. The alien-like movement of the undead spider walking is what scared me.
2. The Grudge - similar to the spider-like undead from The Ring. The element of surprise and the jaw movement. I missed Ju-on Japanese film.

3. The Grudge 2 - similar to the spider-like undead from The Ring. The element of surprise and the jaw movement. I missed Ju-on Japanese film.

4. House on Haunted Hill (1999) - Rob Zombies as a director and arms coming out of the wall, weird bondage shit going on.

5. Pandemonium - Necromancer-vampires in space. For some reason.

6. Changeling (1980) - A lot scarier setting than Steven King's Rose Red and are similar in principle.

7. Hellraiser 1 (1987) - Bondage and ripping part of limbs.

8. Hellraiser 2 (1987) - Bondage and ripping part of limbs.

9. Texas Chainsaw Massacre (1978) - To weird for my imagination.

10-14. SAW 1 - 5 - Continuously grouse through-out.

15. Rosemary's Baby (1978) - Evil babies are some of the most terrifying monsters in videogames. Used in Contra, R-Type, Resident Evil, Fatal Frame, and Silent Hill.

Movies that didn't scare me much at all

1. The Thing (1982)

2. Pitch Black (1998)

Another milestone: I watched both the entire Winds of War (1982) and War and Remembrance (1988) miniseries and I give them a 8.5! The Winds of War was set in Berlin before and at the beginning of WWII, due to the US Embassy at Berlin at the center of the plot.

Intel and Nvidia will compete in the future ARM PC. (2011-01-11 12:16)

On a big announcement that future PCs will be based on the ARM processor instead of the x86-64 CPU. ARM CPUs appeared Gameboy Advance in 2001 and Sega Dreamcast (ran Windows CE 3) had a ARM7 in 1998. Basically Intel has a 6 year lease on Nvidia's Tegra and ARM-based GPUs. Nvidia has some patents that Intel has. AMD will be something of a Radeon-only manufacturer and have x86-64 to themselves. Windows 8 will be ported to ARM CPUs. source Intel will likely be champion of PC CPUs in the next decade, because Nvidia is on the brink of bankruptcy. I think Nvidia went in Chapter 11 and are in the process of reorganizing.

AMD CEO resigned on January 11th based on this announcement. I guess Intel were hinting this with Larrabee GPU technology back in 2008 before Larrabee was defunct.

It could well be thought back to the old Acorn Archimedes design, most powerful computer of the 1980s, more powerful 32-bit CPU & RAM then the Commodore Amiga 2000.

And need a Lyonix PC with a Intel XScale 80321 (600 MHz ARM processor) and RISC OS 5 for $100!

Bought First Pro Flute (2011-01-16 07:04)

Today, I bought a professional flute way below the usual asking price. I have one beginner flute and one intermediate flute. The beginner flute has no open holes and the intermediate flute has open holes and more tril keys. The professional flute just sounds better. It has been 15 years since my last flute was bought. No, I don't play it every day. I got a really good price for it. I think I'll play it at least 5 - 10 times.

Tech Specs:

Material: Cupronickel

Surface: Silver Plated body and keys

Tone: C

Hand-Finished embouchure hole

French Point Keys

B Foot with Split E key, Off set G design

Italian high quality pads, spring

Perfect sound,intonation, professional quality

Smashing spacecraft into Apophis: Priceless. (2011-01-27 19:39)

One of the reasons why I'm trying to get into heaven, and not be greedy or hurt Americans due to Apophis might be hitting here on Friday the 13th, 2036. . Russians say it will and NASA says it won't. NASA doesn't always tell the truth, they don't always talk about sun flares and sun spots in objection to man-made global warming/cooling.

Apophis big enough to take out Germany and is the size of 3 Gridiron stadiums. There was a similar close (asteroid) call in 2006. NASA stated that to miss Earth by .22 micrometers per second per day by crashing a probe into it and having another hover 150 meters over it to miss the gravitational keyhole.

Super Bowl XLV impressions (2011-02-09 22:25)

The half-time show was ugly, because something said at the end by the Black Eyed Peas (sounded like techno-rap). Songs played were "I Gotta Feeling", "Boom Boom Pow", "Pump It", and "Let's Get It Started". Black Eyed Peas had a wardrobe malfunction! I am sort of a Minnesota Vikings fan, but they had 2nd to last place. And they may move to LA someday. The Greenbay Packers come across as morons most of the time . THEY don't copy the Steelers's two point conversions and don't look too bright.

I think I speak for everyone in Wisconsin when I say, I'm buying the bluray in March as if Nintendo 3DS/3DS games were the only other gadget this quarter to buy. N64's Zelda Ocarina of Time is going to be best selling 3DS game for launch. I predict Paper Mario 3DS to take 2nd best selling game, and Mario Kart 3DS to take 3rd best selling game.

As a reminder, the only times I see the Packers play is with their clash with the inferior Minnesota Vikings (mostly thanks to Coach Brad Childress).

The Radeon 9800 XT (2011-02-17 17:10)

90 % of my PC games run up to Shader Model 2.0 so they'll still run on my old Dell Dimension XPS. I found a list here. That would explain why the Radeon 9800 XT is expensive for its age. If I were to upgrade, it's cheapest to do a Radeon X1600 XT off ebay. Right now, I'm playing Fallout 3 and Dreamfall The Longest Journey (1) (2).

Playstation Portable 2 is more bang-4-buck over 3DS (2011-02-19 16:32)

If the games are going to be priced at 3DS levels ($40) or the Playstation Portable 2 cost $50 more ($300), this would theoretically make PSP2 a better deal over Nintendo 3DS. What needs to happen is any good 3DS title gets ported over to PSP2. The PSP2 has one more core than the Xbox 360, more RAM (1 GB GDDR3) than Xbox 360, a gpu that does possibly OpenGL 3.2 (PS3 does OpenGL 2), TV hookups (3DS don't do this), games on SD cards!, OLCD screen. PSP 2 may have WiFi chat, Gecko engine web browsing, PSnetwork chat, mp4, m4a, mp3, slideshow, ebook, VoIP chat, and global positioning system software.

I get the cold hard truth that Mario sells more devices no matter how superior the tech specs are (explaining the $50 difference).

See, under dog competitors do have a few advantages. Sony will lose the console war, but PSP2 games will look so much better for $50 extra. I predict Sony is just deja-vu-ing last generation.

i understand how scissors can beat paper, and i get how a rock can beat scissors, but there's no fuckin way paper can beat rock. is paper supposed to magically wrap around rock and leave it immobile? why the hell can't paper do this to scissors? screw scissors, why can't paper do this to people? why aren't sheets of college ruled notebook paper constantly suffocating students as they take notes in class? i'll tell you why, because paper can't beat anybody. a rock would tear that shit up in 2 seconds. when i play rock paper scissors, i always choose rock. then when somebody claims to have beaten me with their paper i can punch them in the face with my already clenched fist and say, oh shit i'm sorry, i thought paper would protect you, you bitch

Hardcore fans stop watching anime at around 45! (2011-02-28 07:23)

It took me a while to find someone who knew the exact age, but it seems to start at age 45, and I'm 25 right now. Judging by MyAnimeList, Half my anime is NR-17 so it is great to know that I didn't waste my money on teenage hobbies. Fans now say anime is better than cop dramas, or most tv series or sporting events. Go figure. I don't know if I should believe them, but I know my parents would watch Pawn Stars or American Pickers. My anime collection gets better scores at Internet Movie DataBase. Both are great shows, I give them both an 8 out of 10.

Are hot women going to stay in CA in its disasterious state? (2011-02-28 11:42)

Currently, the highest percentage of hottest women are in California (with the highest population) I've been wondering where to get a hot girlfriend in the United States. The ones around in Wisconsin are all average / below average in appearance and like Rap music. I'm sure the hottest Californians are moving Eastward to states such as Texas. I have people tell me, the hot ones are always more high-maintenance.

Comrade Sheila Kuehl of Los Angeles wants a single payer healthcare system. If comrades gets their way, Americans and illegals will flee California. Doctors will see less patience as their pay goes down. I miss that old law that requires citizens to mark "the applicant is not a communist action organization or a communist front".

Down in Texas, specifically Dallas, Ft. Worth and Arlington, women in some bars are really great looking (8 and above is the rumor), and you require no degree to flirt with them. I've heard stories they talk to you as soon as 10 minutes. All the hot women enjoy Country down in Texas. None of the rap loving ugly ones like around in Wisconsin, and this has been surveyed at big parties where women of all walks of life would turn up at. I walked around in Wisconsin for 12 years, and I don't seem to remember an excellent quantity of pretty women walking around.

Waiting for "Casio Prizm CAS" if I do pay up (2011-03-05 02:06)

I was thinking of buying a Casio Prizm for math, but I found that it didn't have a Computer Algerba System in the already paid for Nspire CAS (firmware ver 2.1). A computer Algerba System can manipulate variables, Prizm even costs twice as much as a Nspire CAS! Unless you take a SAT/ACT test in College where a Prizm is legit, upgrade to a Nspire CAS over TI-89 Titanium. I think an ordinary $40 B & W Nspire with firmware 2.1 has more math formulas than Prizm right now.

Kerm Martian (2013-09-06 13:32:08)

FYI, the Prizm has a CAS now (see Eigenmath: At Last, a Casio Prizm CAS. Also, the Casio Prizm is reliably cheaper than the TI-Nspire CX series.

Bought BattleStar Galaticia complete series (2011-03-06 03:43)

Time Magazine says it is one of the best TV series of all time, and equal to X-Files. I believe I had followed all the Star Trek The Next Generation and X-Files episodes a lot more. It cost $110 off Ebay with free shipping. By waiting this long, I suppose I saved $50 (a videogame worth)! I believe I only seen only 1 stinking episode. I don't know if this TV series is that good.

I know what you're thinking....videogames are always the better option (Hollywood's dead) Is this series a good exception? What do you think, spectator?

Newest most stable Linux (2011-03-07 01:31)

You probably never heard of this distro. It is used by the United States government for scientific programs. This Linux is called Fermi Linux and it's current kernel is 2.6.18- 238.1.1.el5. Normally, in OpenSuse 11.3, the kernel gets to revision 12 (2.6.34.12) or in Ubuntu 10.10, the kernel gets to revision 25 (2.6.35-25). The distro is based off Red Hat Enterprise 5.0.

The Nintendo 3DS (Japanese: ニンテンドー3DS Hepburn: Nintendō Surī Dī Esu?, abbreviated to 3DS) is a portable game console produced by Nintendo. It is an autostereoscopic device capable of projecting stereoscopic 3D effects without the use of 3D glasses or additional accessories.[14] Nintendo announced the device in March 2010 and officially unveiled it at E3 2010 on June 15, 2010.[15][16] The console succeeds the Nintendo DS, featuring backward compatibility with older Nintendo DS and Nintendo DSi video games,[14] and competes with the Sony PlayStation Vita handheld console.[17] The Nintendo 3DS was first released on February 26, 2011.[18][19] Less than six months later on July 28, 2011, Nintendo announced a significant price reduction from US $249 to US $169 amid disappointing launch sales.[20] The company offered ten free Nintendo Entertainment System games and ten free Game Boy Advance games from the Nintendo eShop to consumers who bought the system at the original launch price.[21] This strategy was considered a major success, and the console has gone on to become one of Nintendo's most successfully sold handheld consoles in the first two years of its release. A partially redesigned version of the console, the Nintendo 3DS XL, was released on July 28, 2012. It features screens that are 90 % larger than the original Nintendo 3DS.[22] A new edition of the console, entitled the Nintendo 2DS, was announced on August 28, 2013. While still playing 3DS and DS games, it is described as an "entry level" version of the 3DS that removes the 3D functionality, and changes the form factor to a fixed, "slate" design.[23] Contents Nintendo began experimenting with 3D technology in the 1980s. The Famicom 3D System, an accessory consisting of liquid crystal shutter glasses, was Nintendo's first product that enabled stereoscopic 3D effects. Although very few titles were released, Nintendo helped design one—called Famicom Grand Prix II: 3D Hot Rally—which was co-developed by Nintendo and HAL Laboratory and released in 1988. The Famicom 3D System failed to garner market interest and was never released outside of Japan.[24][25] Despite the limited success, Nintendo would press ahead with 3D development into the 1990s. Gunpei Yokoi, creator of the Game Boy handheld device and popular Metroid video game, developed a new 3D device for Nintendo called the Virtual Boy. It was a portable table-top system consisting of goggles and a controller that used a spinning disc to achieve full stereoscopic monochrome 3D.[26] Released in 1995, Nintendo sold less than a million units of the Virtual Boy spawning only 22 compatible game titles, and was widely considered to be a commercial failure.[25][27] Shigeru Miyamoto, known for his work on popular game franchises such as Mario and The Legend of Zelda, commented in a 2011 interview that he felt conflicted about Yokoi's decision to use wire-frame models for 3D and suggested that the product may not have been marketed correctly.[25] The failure of the Virtual Boy left many at Nintendo doubting the viability of 3D gaming.[28] Despite this, Nintendo continued to investigate the incorporation of 3D technology into other products. The Nintendo GameCube, released in 2001, was another 3D-capable system. With an LCD attachment, it could display true stereoscopic 3D, though only the launch title Luigi's Mansion was ever designed to utilize it. Due to the expensive nature surrounding the technology at the time, the GameCube's 3D functionality was never marketed to the public. Nintendo later experimented with a 3D LCD during development of the Game Boy Advance SP, but the idea was shelved after it failed to achieve satisfactory results. Another attempt was made in preparation for a virtual navigation guide to be used on the Nintendo DS at Shigureden, an interactive museum in Japan.[29][30] Nintendo president Hiroshi Yamauchi encouraged additional 3D research in an effort to use the technology in the exhibition. Although the project fell short, Nintendo was able to collect valuable research on liquid crystal which would later aid in the development of the Nintendo 3DS.[25] Development Speculation on the development of a successor to the Nintendo DS began to ramp up in late 2009. At the time, Nintendo controlled as much as 68.3 percent of the handheld gaming market.[31] In October 2009, tech tabloid Bright Side of News reported that Nvidia, a graphics processing unit (GPU) developer that recently made headway with its Tegra System-on-Chip processors, had been selected by Nintendo to develop hardware for their next generation portable game console.[32] Later that month, speaking about the future for Nintendo's portable consoles, company president Satoru Iwata mentioned that while mobile broadband connectivity via subscription "doesn't fit Nintendo customers", he was interested in exploring options like Amazon's Whispernet found on the Amazon Kindle which provides free wireless connectivity to its customers for the sole purpose of browsing and purchasing content from the Kindle Store.[33] Nintendo has expressed interest in motion-sensing capabilities since the development of the original Nintendo DS,[34] and an alleged comment by Satoru Iwata from a 2010 interview with Asahi Shimbun implied that the successor to the Nintendo DS would incorporate a motion sensor. The claim led to a minor dispute between the publication and Nintendo over its accuracy.[35] In February 2010, video gaming website Computer and Video Games reported that a select "handful" of Japanese developers were in possession of software development kits for the Nintendo DS successor, with The Pokémon Company given special priority. According to their insider at an unspecified third-party development studio, the hardware features a "tilt" function that is similar to that of the iPhone, "but does a lot more".[36] Unveiling The Nintendo 3DS E3 2010 unveiling involved an elaborate stage with moving set pieces. On March 23, 2010, Nintendo officially announced the Nintendo 3DS handheld console, successor to the Nintendo DS family.[14] According to industry analysts, the timing of Nintendo's original announcement, which had drawn attention away from the launch of the company's still-new Nintendo DSi XL handheld, was likely intended to preempt impending news leaks about the product by the Japanese press.[37] In April 2010, a picture of a possible development build of the internal components of the 3DS was released as part of a U.S. Federal Communications Commission (FCC) filing by Mitsumi.[38] An analysis of the image showed that it was likely genuine as it featured components known to be used in the Nintendo DS line along with features of the 3DS that had not been announced like a 5:3 top screen, and a control nub similar to those used in Sony PSP systems.[39] In June 2010, video gaming website IGN reported that according to "several developers who have experienced 3DS in its current form", the system possesses processing power that "far exceed[s] the Nintendo Wii" and with 3D shaders, they could make games that "look close to current generation visuals on the Xbox 360 and PlayStation 3". They also cited "several developer sources" as saying that the system does not use the Nvidia Tegra mobile chipset.[40] The system was officially revealed at Nintendo's conference at E3 2010 on June 15, 2010. The first game revealed was Kid Icarus: Uprising, with several other titles from third parties also announced, including Square Enix with Kingdom Hearts and Final Fantasy, Konami with Metal Gear Solid 3: Snake Eater 3D, Warner Bros. Interactive with a Batman title, Ubisoft with Assassin's Creed: Lost Legacy, Capcom with Resident Evil Revelations and Super Street Fighter IV: 3D Edition, and Activision with DJ Hero. Other Nintendo titles were later revealed after the conference, such as Mario Kart 7, Animal Crossing, and remakes of Star Fox 64[41] and The Legend of Zelda: Ocarina of Time.[42] Nintendo also demoed 3D trailers for DreamWorks' How to Train Your Dragon, Warner Bros' Legend of the Guardians: The Owls of Ga'Hoole, and Disney's film Tangled on the 3DS.[43][44] The 3DS design shown at E3 was almost final, but subject to minor changes.[45] Pre-launch events On September 29, 2010, Nintendo of Japan announced the release date of the Nintendo 3DS in Japan to be on February 26, 2011. Furthermore, several additional features were announced: the inclusion of a Mii Maker (similar to the Mii Channel on the Wii), Virtual Console (including Game Boy, Game Boy Color, and "classic games" in 3D), a cradle for recharging the system's battery, multitasking, several included augmented reality games, an included 2 GB SD card, and stored game data, as well as the final names for the 3DS tag modes, StreetPass and SpotPass collectively. The colors available at launch were revealed to be Aqua Blue and Cosmos Black, and the launch price in Japan was revealed to be ¥25,000.[46] The final physical design was also revealed at this event.[47] On January 19, 2011, Nintendo held two simultaneous press conferences in Amsterdam and New York City, where they revealed all of the features of the Nintendo 3DS.[48] In North America, the release date was confirmed as March 27, 2011 with a retail price of $249.99. In Europe, the release date was announced as March 25, 2011, though Nintendo said that pricing would be up to retailers. Most retailers have priced the handheld between £219.99 and £229.99,[49] though some retailers, such as Amazon, lowered the price following Sony's announcement of the PSP's successor on January 26, 2011,[50] with some retailers pricing the handheld at around £200 in February.[51] In February 2011, Nintendo held four hands-on events in the UK named "Believe Your Eyes". February 5 and 6 saw simultaneous events in London and Manchester, while the 12th and 13th saw events in Glasgow and Bristol. Invitations to the events were offered first to Club Nintendo members, then later to members of the public via an online registration form.[52] Guests watched two brief performances and trailers, then were given time to play a selection of games on 3DS devices. Attendees were then allowed into a second room, containing further games to play (mainly augmented reality-based) and in-device videos.[53] In March, Nintendo held a few events in Australia at selected Westfield stores for people to try out the console, with a number of demos available. Launch Further information: List of Nintendo 3DS colors and styles The Nintendo 3DS launched in Japan on February 26, 2011, priced at ¥25,000. On March 25, 2011, the system launched in Europe, with pricing set by individual retailers. On March 27, 2011 the Nintendo 3DS launched in North America, priced at US $249.99. On March 31, 2011, the system launched in Australia and New Zealand, priced at A $349.95. The system originally launched in all regions in both Aqua Blue and Cosmos Black color variations. On July 28, 2011, Nintendo announced the Nintendo 3DS would be getting a price cut of almost a third of the console's original price, from $249.99 to $169.99 in North America, 25,000¥ to 15,000¥ in Japan, and $349.95 to $249.95 in Australia. Although in Europe, pricing is up to retailers, the system also received a substantial price cut.[54] In an effort to compensate those who had paid the original price, the company introduced the Nintendo 3DS Ambassador Program, through which existing 3DS owners were eligible to download ten Nintendo Entertainment System games and ten Game Boy Advance games at no extra cost.[55][56] Nintendo further stated that the NES Ambassador titles would see future release to the general public on the Nintendo eShop, while there were no plans to make the Game Boy Advance Ambassador titles available.[57] The ten NES games were released in North America on August 31 and in Europe on September 1, 2011. These include: Balloon Fight, Donkey Kong Jr., Ice Climber, Metroid, NES Open Tournament Golf, Super Mario Bros., The Legend of Zelda, Wrecking Crew, Yoshi (North America) / Mario & Yoshi (Europe & Australia), Zelda II: The Adventure of Link.[58][59] The ten Game Boy Advance games were released in North America on December 16, 2011. These include: F-Zero: Maximum Velocity, Fire Emblem: The Sacred Stones, Kirby & The Amazing Mirror, Mario Kart: Super Circuit, Mario vs. Donkey Kong, Metroid Fusion, Super Mario Advance 3: Yoshi's Island, The Legend of Zelda: The Minish Cap, Wario Land 4, WarioWare, Inc.: Mega Microgame $ [60] On April 28, 2012, the Nintendo 3DS launched in South Korea, in Cosmos Black, Misty Pink and Cobalt Blue color variations.[5] On September 28, 2012, the system launched in two other regions, Hong Kong and Taiwan, in Cerulean Blue and Shimmer Pink.[6][7] The Nintendo 3DS XL, which comes with 90 % larger screens than the original Nintendo 3DS, was released in Japan and Europe on July 28, 2012, in North America on August 19, 2012, and in Australia on August 23, 2012, coinciding with the release of New Super Mario Bros. 2. It includes a 4 GB SDHC card, unlike the regular Nintendo 3DS which included a smaller 2 GB SD card. The Nintendo 2DS was announced on August 28, 2013 as an entry-level version of the Nintendo 3DS family of systems. It was released on October 12, 2013, in North America, Europe and Australia, coinciding with the release of Pokémon X and Y. The system removes the 3D functionality of the console (it's still possible to take 3D photos and videos, although you have to export them to a 3DS in order to view them in 3D) and has changed from a clamshell design to a "slate-like" design.[61] The system is targeted at a younger demographic than that of the regular Nintendo 3DS.[62] Hardware See also: Comparison of Nintendo portable consoles and List of Nintendo 3DS colors and styles The Nintendo 3DS system has two separate screens. The top screen is a 3.53 in (90 mm) 15:9 (5:3) autostereoscopic (3D) LCD screen with a resolution of 800×240 pixels (400×240 pixels per eye, WQVGA) that is able to produce a three-dimensional effect without 3D glasses using a parallax barrier. There is a 3D Depth Slider next to the 3D screen which allows the user to adjust the intensity of the 3D effect. The bottom screen is a 3.02 in (77 mm) 4:3 2D resistive touchscreen with a resolution of 320×240 pixels (QVGA).[63] The 3DS weighs approximately 230 grams (8.1 oz) and, when closed, is 134 mm (5.3 in) wide, 74 mm (2.9 in) broad, and 21 mm (0.83 in) thick.[63] The system features three camera sensors: two cameras on the outside of the device, capable of taking 3D photos and capturing 3D video; and one camera in the front side/inside of the device positioned above the top screen which faces the player, and is capable of taking 2D photos and capturing 2D video. These photos can be edited with various effects such as props, 3D depth and colors. All camera sensors have a maximum resolution of 640×480 pixels (0.3 megapixels, VGA) and can only achieve digital zoom. There is also a microphone in the bottom of the system. The Nintendo 3DS system utilizes a custom components co-developed by Nintendo in conjunction with other manufacturers, all combined into a unified SOC. The main processor (CPU) is designed by ARM, and consists of a ARM11 MPCore-based dual-core processor manufactured at 45 nm. The graphics processor (GPU) is designed by Digital Media Professionals (DMP), and consists of a PICA200 processor.[9][10] The system contains 128 MB of system memory consisting of two 64 MB (512 Mb) FCRAM chips developed by Fujitsu, with a maximum bandwidth of 3.2 GB/s, in which 32 MB are reserved for the operating system and unavailable to apps. The system also contains 6 MB of VRAM. The console also includes a two secondary custom processors that handle undisclosed tasks. These tasks are handled seamlessly in the background during gameplay or while the system is in sleep mode. The console also contains a dedicated hardware audio DSP module capable of outputting mono, stereo or pseudo-surround sound through its two speakers and headphone jack. The system includes 1 GB of internal flash memory manufactured by Toshiba, but it's mostly used by the operating system. The system's memory can be expanded via an SD memory card slot, which supports up to 128 GB SDXC, up to 32 GB SDHC and up to 2 GB SD memory cards. All Nintendo 3DS systems include a 2 GB SD card while Nintendo 3DS XL and Nintendo 2DS systems include a 4 GB SDHC card. The system uses 2.4 GHz 802.11 b/g wireless network connectivity with enhanced security WPA2. There is also an infrared port on the back of the console, which allows the system to connect with certain peripherals such as the Circle Pad Pro.[11] The Nintendo 3DS comes with a changeable 1300 mAh lithium ion battery. Its longevity sits between 3 to 5 hours while playing Nintendo 3DS games and app, while achieving 5 to 8 hours while playing Nintendo DS games. The system's width is at 134 mm (5.3 in), depth at 74 mm (2.9 in) and height at 21 mm (0.83 in), while weighing 235 grams (8.3 oz). It also come with a telescoping stylus, extendable up to 100 mm (3.9 in) long. Reports show that raw material costs for the Nintendo 3DS amount to US $101.[64] Controls The Nintendo 3DS input controls feature the following buttons: a round nub analog input called the Circle Pad, a D-pad, a four face buttons (A, B, X, Y), bumper buttons (R/L), HOME button, START and SELECT buttons, and a POWER button. Through the Circle Pad Pro accessory the system has access to a second Circle Pad and trigger buttons (ZL/ZR). The Circle Pads are not restricted to 8-axis movement, a departure from previous Nintendo console controllers with analogue sticks.[citation needed] It also features a dedicated volume slider, which controls the controller's speakers' volume. The system comes with a stylus for interacting with the touch screen. There is also a six-axis motion sensor, which includes a 3-axis accelerometer and a 3-axis gyroscope. Game Card The Nintendo 3DS, DS and DSi game cards. The Nintendo 3DS Game Card looks near-identical to its predecessor, the Nintendo DS Game Card. However, there is a small tab jutting out on the side of the card, preventing 3DS Game Cards from being inserted into a Nintendo DS.[65] Nintendo 3DS Game Cards can hold up either 1 GB, 2 GB or 4 GB of game data depending on the game, which is 2, 4 and 8 times more storage than the biggest Nintendo DS Game Card could hold up (512 MB), respectively. However, various sources claim that an 8 GB version could be released if a game ever requires it.[66] Circle Pad Pro The Circle Pad Pro is an accessory or add-on which connects to a Nintendo 3DS system adding it a second Circle Pad and extra set of trigger buttons (ZL/ZR). Pictures of the device first appeared in Famitsu, a Japanese gaming magazine.[67][68] The device was first released in Japan as the Slide Pad Expansion on December 10, 2011, coinciding with the release of Monster Hunter 3G.[69] It was subsequently released in the west as the Circle Pad Pro in Europe on January 27, 2012, in Australia on February 2, 2012, and in North America in February 7, 2012, coinciding with the release of Resident Evil: Revelations.[70] A Nintendo 3DS XL version of the device, called the Circle Pad Pro XL, was also released in Japan on November 15, 2012, Europe on March 22, 2013, and North America on April 17, 2013.[71][72][73][74] Other titles compatible with the add-on include Ace Combat 3D (Japanese version only), Metal Gear Solid: Snake Eater 3D, Kid Icarus: Uprising, Kingdom Hearts 3D: Dream Drop Distance, Dynasty Warriors VS, among others.[75][76] Other models The Nintendo 3DS family has two other models available. The Nintendo 3DS XL is a larger model of the console which was released on July 28, 2012, and features 90 % larger screens than the original Nintendo 3DS.[22] The Nintendo 2DS is a complete redesign of the handheld which is released on October 12, 2013, and is described as an "entry level" version of the 3DS. The new console, while still capable of playing Nintendo DS and 3DS games, removes the 3D functionality and changes the form factor to a fixed, "slate" design.[23] Nintendo 3DS XL Nintendo 3DS XL logo.png An open Silver + Black Nintendo 3DS XL system. As with the transition from the Nintendo DSi to the Nintendo DSi XL, the 3DS XL features larger screens, longer battery life, and a greater overall size than the original Nintendo 3DS. The Nintendo 3DS XL is intended to complement the original 3DS, not replace it, as both models remain in production. When in its open position, the Nintendo 3DS XL is the longest, widest and heaviest Nintendo 3DS model.[citation needed] The system features 90 % larger screens which offer an improved viewing angle, in both 2D and 3D. The top screen is a 4.88 in (124 mm) Autostereoscopic (3D) LCD, while the bottom one is a 4.18 in (106 mm) LCD touchscreen. However, both screens still preserve the same resolution as the smaller model. Its 1750 mAh lithium-ion battery has improved battery life over the 3DS on all brightness settings; it lasts 3.5 to 6.5 hours compared to the previous 3 to 5 hours playing 3DS games and 6 to 10 hours compared to the previous 5 to 8 hours playing original DS games. The console's weight has also been increased over the 3DS; from 235 grams to 336 grams. The handheld is outfitted with identical speakers contained in larger speaker enclosures. However, the speakers are not any louder than the standard 3DS model. The hinges now stop the screen at 120° in addition to the original 3DS's position of 155° to allow easier table-top viewing. The 3DS XL includes a longer stylus and, unlike the 3DS, is not telescoping. All Nintendo 3DS XL systems come bundled with a 4 GB SDHC card instead of the 2 GB SD card included with the standard Nintendo 3DS. The 3DS XL has a matte surface.[82] In order to reduce production costs, Nintendo does not include an AC Adapter with the Japanese and European versions. However, an AC Adapter was included with the North American, Australian, and Korean releases. A Nintendo DSi, DSi XL or 3DS AC Adapter (Model Code: WAP-002) is compatible with the 3DS XL, and will also be available for purchase separately or in a bundle with a 3DS XL Charging Cradle.[citation needed] History Rumors of a larger model of the Nintendo 3DS being in production appeared during June 2012, when Japanese publication Nikkei wrote an article stating that the system was initially scheduled to be unveiled at E3 2012. However, Nintendo responded that these rumors were false and that the article was "entire speculation", but refrained from further commenting on the subject.[83] Finally, on June 21, 2012, the system was announced during a Nintendo Direct presentation, and was set to launch on all major regions during the middle of the year.[84] The Nintendo 3DS XL launched in Japan on July 28, 2012, priced at ¥18,900, and was available in Silver + Black, Red + Black and White color variations.[citation needed] In Europe, the system launched on the same day but in Silver + Black, Blue + Black and Red + Black color variations.[citation needed] On August 25, the Nintendo 3DS XL launched in North America, priced at US $199.99, and available in Red + Black and Blue + Black.[85] On August 23, 2012, Australia and New Zealand saw the launch of the new handheld, priced at A $249.95, and available in the same color variations as in Europe, Silver + Black, Blue + Black and Red + Black.[86] The launch of the Nintendo 3DS XL coincided with the release of New Super Mario Bros. 2. On September 20, 2012, the Nintendo 3DS XL launched in South Korea, in Silver + Black, Red + Black and White color variations.[78] On September 28, 2012 the system launched in two other regions, Hong Kong and Taiwan, in Blue + Black and White color variations.[79] In December 2012, Nintendo Chinese distribution partner, iQue, launched the iQue 3DS XL in three special editions, one featuring a Mario decal while the other two feature both Mario and Luigi.[80] Nintendo 2DS Main article: Nintendo 2DS The Nintendo 2DS was announced on August 28, 2013, as a new "entry-level" variant of the Nintendo 3DS family. While its hardware and software are relatively similar to the Nintendo 3DS (and still offers compatibility with Nintendo DS and 3DS games), it lacks the 3DS's signature 3D screen, does not have internal stereo speakers (only using a mono speaker), and uses a slate form factor as opposed to the clamshell design used by the Nintendo DS and 3DS. The Nintendo 2DS was released in North America and Europe on October 12, 2013, sold alongside the Nintendo 3DS and 3DS XL at a relatively lower price point.[87] As a cheaper model of the Nintendo 3DS family, that still plays Nintendo DS and 3DS games, the Nintendo 2DS is seen as a market strategy to broaden the overall Nintendo handheld gaming market. As such, the 2DS is seen as a handheld console targeted at different audience than that of the regular Nintendo 3DS models, particularly younger users. Despite concerns from critics who felt that the company was trying to de-emphasize the 3D functionality by releasing the 2DS, Nintendo maintains that 3D is still part of their future plans.[88]

User interface Main article: Nintendo 3DS system software The Nintendo 3DS Home Menu. The upper screen displays a 3D animated logo for each individual app, while on the bottom screen displays application icons. The Home Menu (stylized as HOME Menu) is a GUI similar to the Wii U Menu and DSi Menu for Nintendo 3DS and Nintendo 2DS systems which is used to launch software stored on Nintendo DS or Nintendo 3DS game cards, applications installed on a SD card and DSiWare titles installed in the system's internal memory. The menu can display up to 120 application tiles. Icons are set in a grid navigable with the touchscreen or D-pad, and may be re-arranged via drag-and-drop. The amount of icons per column can also be changed, from 1 icon up to 6. It is also possible to change the screen's brightness in the menu. On the upper screen, a special 3D animated logo is displayed for each individual app, as well as system information such as wireless signal strength, date and time, and battery life, while on the bottom screen, application icons are displayed. Like the DSi, the menu has upgradeable firmware. Game cards can also be hot-swapped while in the menu. The power button can either prompt the console to enter into sleep mode, or shut it down.[citation needed] On April 25, 2012, a system update brought the introduction of a folder system.[89] Up to 60 folders can be created. Applications can be dragged on top of a folder in order to move it, and from then on, more apps can be added to the folder using the same procedure, up to 60 apps per folder. A title for the folder is automatically created in order of creation (from "1" to "60"), but the name can also be edited by the user. Only the first character of the title will be displayed on the folder's icon. When apps inside folders receive StreetPass or SpotPass notifications, a notification icon will appear on top of the folder. Folders can't be put into other folders.[citation needed] On June 20, 2013, a system update brought the introduction of the Save Data Backup feature.[90] This feature allows the user to back up save data from downloadable Nintendo 3DS software and most Virtual Console games. Creating a backup of save data allows users to delete software from the SD card without losing save data. The backup created will then be automatically restored when the user re-downloads software from the Nintendo eShop. A total of 30 save data backups can be stored at a time. It is not possible to back up save data from retail versions of Nintendo 3DS software, DSiWare, and GameBoy Advance software.[91]

Camera Nintendo 3DS Camera (?????3DS??? Nintendo Surī Dī Esu Kamera?) is a built-in photo and video recorder with a media gallery and photo editing functionality. The app uses the system's two front facing cameras to take 3D photos, and the user-facing camera to take regular 2D photos. All photographs using the three cameras are taken at a resolution of 640 x 480 px, or 0.3 megapixels. The user can set the camera to take a photo after a certain period of time. Timers can be set to take a photo 3 or 10 seconds after pressing the Take button, or by means of voice activation by saying "OK!" once the user wishes for the photo be taken.[citation needed] There are various options available when taking photos with the app. The Normal mode takes normal photos, while the Low-Light option is useful when taking photos in dark lighting conditions. There are also real-time photo filters including Sparkle, which adds moving stars to the photo, Dream, which adds a dream-like bright light to the photo, Pinhole, which lightens the center of the screen and darkens the edges and Mystery, which adds a random finish to the photo. Special options include Merge, which takes a photo of the user from the inner camera and merges the photo from someone facing the outer camera, and Graffiti, which allows the user to draw on the photo and add various graphics. Other options include manual controls such as the color type (normal, black and white, sepia, negative or solarize), nitidez, contrast and brightness.[citation needed] On December 7, 2011, a system update added the ability to record 3D video along four recording options: Interval Shot, Frame Pick, Montage and regular video recording. Interval Shot allows sequences of images to be recorded in short-timed intervals to create time-lapse photography; Frame Pick edits still images together to create stop motion animation; and Montage let's the user pause and resume recording seamlessly.[92] However, all recording modes only allow a single video to be up to 10 minutes long.[93]

screenshots from select Nintendo 3DS games, such as Animal Crossing: New Leaf. After the screenshot has been taken, the user can then share it directly on social networking websites such as Twitter, Tumblr and/or Facebook, on an account has been logged-on. It is also possible to attach comments and tags to uploaded photos.[94] Sound Nintendo 3DS Sound (????3DS??? Nintendo Surī Dī Esu Saundo?) is a built-in sound player with voice recording and music playback functionality. Music can be played from an SD card with visualizations displayed on the upper screen. Supported filename extensions include MP3 audio with .mp3 and AAC audio with .mp4, .m4a, or .3GP. Sounds like drum beats and the classic Mario jumping noises can be added with button presses. A set of music manipulation options are also available, as well as a group of audio filters. Using headphones, music can be played when the case is closed. Ten-second voice recordings can be also be recorded and further edited with audio filters and manipulated through pitch and playback. Recording and playing sounds also have its own set of manipulation options similar to those used for music playback, as well as a group of audio filters. Users may save and modify up to 18 of these in the consoles memory and 180 on an SD card. These can then be shared throughout other applications such as Swapnote.[citation needed] There is also a StreetPass function built-into the app. When the user StreetPass's someone who also has StreetPass enabled, both users exchange song data such as the song's name, artist, album, release year, and how many times it has been played. There is also a compatibility chart between the users involved. Depending the amount of matching songs from both users a score will be displayed, ranging from 0 to 100 %, with the latter being the most compatible.[citation needed] Multitasking The Nintendo 3DS is capable of opening up to two applications simultaneously. Once a Nintendo 3DS game or application is running, the user can press the Home button to suspend it and temporarily open the Home Menu. The user can then open another specially designed multitasking application built into the system without closing the currently suspended software.[citation needed] These multitasking applications include: List of Nintendo 3DS multitasking applications Name Details Game Notes Users can write and save notes. Screenshots of both the top and bottom screens of the current suspended software are also present to aid the user. Friend List A list of all Nintendo 3DS and Nintendo 2DS registered friends. A brief status update is shown for each friend, as well as current/favorite app and online status. Users can add up to 100 friends by exchanging friend codes, which can also be viewed here. Notifications When the system receives a notification notifications the top LED light will flash either blue or green, depending if it is a SpotPass or StreetPass notification, respectively. If a user touches a received notification, a detailed text of the occurrence will appear. The application that sent the notification can also be opened. When an app sends a notification whilst closed, a blue/green badge will appear on its icon. Opening the app clears the badge. Internet Browser A proprietary internet browser. Camera A lightweight version of Nintendo 3DS Camera with most features omitted. QR codes can be read by the camera. It is accessed by holding the L or R button. Software and services Nintendo eShop Main article: Nintendo eShop Nintendo eShop is Nintendo 3DS's online distribution store. The eShop provides download-only Nintendo 3DS titles, retail titles, Virtual Console titles, and various others applications and video. It also allows users to purchase downloadable content (DLC) and automatically download patches for both physical and downloadable games. All content obtained from the Nintendo 3DS's eShop is attached to the system, and can be transferred to another Nintendo 3DS system.[95] Background downloading is possible via SpotPass while the system is in sleep mode. Ten downloads can be queued up at a time and their status can be checked on the Home Menu. If notifications are activated, a pop-up message will appear on the lower center of the top screen to notify the user that a download is finished.[citation needed] The eShop also supports simple user reviews of games, applications and other media. Users can submit a software review with "stars" ranging from one to five, representing its quality in a crescent order. It is also possible to categorize apps by age and gender and as suitable for hardcore or more casual players. However, user reviews can only be submitted after using the software for at least one hour.[citation needed] Miiverse Main article: Miiverse Miiverse, portmanteau of "Mii" and "Universe", is an integrated communication system or social networking service, which allows players to interact and share their experiences through their own Miis. Miiverse allows users to seamlessly share accomplishments, comments, hand written notes, and game screenshots with other users. Select games are integrated with Miiverse, where social interactions can also occur within the game. Miiverse is moderated through software filtering as well as a human resource team in order to ensure that the content shared by users is appropriate and that no spoilers are shared. In order to facilitate this, it was stated that comments posted could take up to 30 minutes to appear on Miiverse.[96] Miiverse originally launched with Wii U. On April 25, 2013, Miiverse became available on every internet enabled smartphone, tablet and PC devices. It will also become available on the Nintendo 3DS later in the year.[97] Internet browser Main article: Internet Browser (Nintendo 3DS) The Nintendo 3DS Internet Browser was released via a firmware update on June 6, 2011 in North America and June 7, 2011 in Europe and Japan.[98] The browser functions as a multitasking app on the Nintendo 3DS system and can be used while another application is suspended in the background. The browser is mainly controlled with the stylus but can be controlled with the Circle Pad or the D-pad to cycle through links on the page. There is a text wrap option to automatically wrap text to the width of the screen at different zoom levels. The user can choose between Google and the Yahoo! search engine, and can also create bookmarks. The browser supports HTML, CSS, JavaScript and some HTML5 elements but does not support Flash, video and music files.[99] It can also show 3D image files with the .mpo file extension on the upper screen and will allow the user to save the image to his or her SD card; this can also be done with 2D JPEG files. Additionally the browser supports file uploads on forms, limiting them to JPEG and MPO images in the system's photo gallery. Due to memory limitation, large pages may not be able to download fully. Up to 32 pages can be stored in the browser's history before older items start being replaced. Media capabilities Nintendo Video launched in Australia, Europe, and Japan on July 13, 2011, and in North America on July 21, 2011, along with a tutorial video.[100][101][102] The service periodically updates its video content availability through SpotPass, automatically adding and deleting content from the console. Up to 4 videos can be available through the app at the same time. Nintendo Video content include: established series such as Oscar's Oasis and Shaun the Sheep (with fifteen exclusive episodes) by Aardman Animations;[103] original series such as Dinosaur Office and BearShark by CollegeHumor, and Threedots; short films such as Sunday Jog and Meat or Die; movie trailers including Captain America: The First Avenger and Green Lantern; and sports videos by Redbull and BSkyB. Most Nintendo Video content is available in 3D and available for permanent download in the Nintendo eShop for a fee. The Netflix streaming video service was released in North America on July 14, 2011.[104] Netflix users are able to pause streaming video on the Nintendo 3DS and resume it on other Netflix-enabled devices. Only 2D content is available through the service.[105] Nintendo announced on October 21, 2011, that Hulu Plus would be released on the Nintendo 3DS by the end of the year.[106] On February 16, 2012, following the debut of Hulu on the Wii, Nintendo reiterated the announcement this time claiming it would be available on the 3DS sometime in 2012.[107] Finally, on August 6, 2013, the Hulu application became available in Japan and on October 17, 2013, the Hulu Plus application was launched in North America, along with a one week free trial.[108][109] The SpotPass TV service launched in Japan on June 19, 2011. The service was a joint service between Nihon TV and Fuji TV that brought free 3D video content to Nintendo 3DS users in Japan. Types of content included programming teaching the user how to do magic tricks, Japanese idol sumo wrestling, sports, 3D dating, among others. The service was terminated on June 20, 2012, a year after its inception.[110] An Eurosport app launched in Europe and Australia on December 15, 2011, and worked similarly to the Nintendo Video app. It featured weekly episodes of Watts Zap and other compilation videos containing Eurosport content.[111] The service was terminated on December 31, 2012, a year after its inception.[112] Swapnote/Nintendo Letter Box Nintendo Letter Box logo Swapnote, known as Nintendo Letter Box in PAL regions and Itsu no Mani Kōkan Nikki in Japan, is a messaging application for the Nintendo 3DS. Swapnote was released on December 22, 2011 in Europe, Australia and North America via the Nintendo eShop, and can be downloaded at no additional cost, and is pre-installed on newer systems. This application allows users to send hand-written/drawn messages to registered friends via SpotPass either or other users via StreetPass.[113] The app also allows users to freely embed pictures and sounds into their messages, and it also lets users change the position and the orientation of the picture and sound icons. Features are unlocked as players continue to send letters, such as the ability to hand-write/draw 3D messages, with additional stationary and features unlocked by spending Play Coins. Messages sent and received can also be saved indefinitely, in spite of the 3000 message limit. Additional stationary can be obtained via certain Nintendo related events, such as using specific software, or by saving them from other people's messages. Despite being a successor to PictoChat, Swapnote's messaging model is not based on the standard instant messaging model as PictoChat has always been, as the application lacks in instant messaging features such as keyboard functionality, chat rooms, and live-continuous messaging.[114] On July 5, 2012, Nintendo updated the Swapnote application to feature six different colors of ink, with only one color being available per message.[115] On April 11, 2013, Nintendo updated Swapnote yet again, this time bringing even more new features, including the ability to take photos or record audio directly through the application, as well as the ability to undo drawings, and use different colors on each page of a message.[116] On October 31, 2013, Nintendo abruptly suspended the Swapnote/Nintendo Letter Box SpotPass functionality after discovering minors were sharing Friend Codes with strangers who had exploited the messaging service to allegedly exchange pornographic imagery.[117][118] Additionally, the Special Notes service, which were also sent via SpotPass to promote Nintendo games, has also been suspended. Nintendo issued an apology to those who had been using the application in a responsible manner.[119][120] Mii Maker Mii characters are available on Nintendo 3DS. The Mii Maker application allows users create Miis through either a selection of facial and body features, such as the nose, mouth, eyes, hair, among other, or by taking a photo using the system's cameras and auto-generate a personal Mii. Miis can also be added and shared by reading special QR codes with one of the cameras.[citation needed] It is also possible to import Miis from a Wii or a Wii U system. However, Mii created on Nintendo 3DS systems cannot be exported back to a Wii due to the addition of character parts in Mii Maker not present on the Wii's Mii Channel. This restriction, however, is not applied when exporting a Mii from a Nintendo 3DS to a Wii U system.[citation needed]

Activity Log Activity Log (メモロク Omoide Kirokuchō?, lit. "Memory Logbook") is a system application that tracks game-play and keeps a record of which games have been played and for how long, as well as physical activity, such as counting every step taken while carrying a Nintendo 3DS using its built in pedometer. The feature encourages walking every day with the system in order to earn Play Coins, at a maximum of 10 each day at a rate of one per 100 steps, to a total of 300 coins. Play Coins can then be used with compatible games and applications to acquire special content and a variety of other benefits.[121]

Network features Nintendo Network Main article: Nintendo Network Nintendo Network is Nintendo's unified network infrastructure similar to the Sony's PlayStation Network and Microsoft's Xbox Live, and succeeds the previous Nintendo Wi-Fi Connection service. The Nintendo 3DS is the first system to support Nintendo's new network infrastructure. Nintendo outlined that the Nintendo Wi-Fi Connection was created as a way for developers to experiment with their own network infrastructures and concepts, whereas the Nintendo Network is a fully unified network service. Nintendo Network provides the means for online multiplayer and other online interactions such as leaderboards and communication, as well as downloads and streaming media services. The Nintendo 3DS uses a Friend Code system much like the original Wii to connect to the network, with the exception that only one code necessary for each console, as opposed to the Nintendo DS and Wii where individual Friend Codes were required for each piece of software.[122] This makes it much easier and more flexible for players to play with each other over the internet.[123] Despite this, access to Nintendo Network ID accounts remains absent from the Nintendo 3DS system and exclusive to the Wii U. The Nintendo Network administration team also has administrators to remove inappropriate content from its services, such as Miiverse.[124]

SpotPass SpotPass is an "always on" background network connectivity system which can automatically seek and connect to wireless network nodes such as Wi-Fi hotspots, sending and downloading information in the background while in sleep mode or playing a game. SpotPass also makes uses of certified hotspots with partners such as AT & T in North America and The Cloud in the United Kingdom. Users are able to connect to these hotspots automatically and free of charge.[125] Content that can be downloaded via SpotPass include full game and application downloads, firmware updates, patches, and specific in-game content. It can be customized to fit the user's preferences, including opting it out altogether for selected software.[126] An application similar to an e-book reader is being considered to use this functionality to "automatically acquire magazine and newspaper articles".[127]

Nintendo Zone The Nintendo Zone logo and app icon. Nintendo Zone (ニンテンドーゾーン Nintendo Zōn?) is a built-in application that detects and makes use of certified SpotPass hotspots. When a hotspot is detected, a notification will appear in the system's Home Menu. In this application, users can see game trailers, game screenshots, download game demos and view information about current and upcoming Nintendo 3DS titles. After the player leaves the hotspot the app remains on their Nintendo 3DS system, although no content can be accessed.[citation needed] [show]Certified Nintendo Zone Wi-Fi hotspot providers with free access to Nintendo 3DS users

StreetPass StreetPass is a Nintendo 3DS functionality which allows the exchange of software content between Nintendo 3DS systems held by users in close proximity. Using the console's background connectivity in sleep mode, a Nintendo 3DS can automatically discover other Nintendo 3DS systems within range, establish a connection, and exchange content for mutually played games, all transparently and without requiring any user input. For example, in Super Street Fighter IV: 3D Edition, if the user passes by someone with the same software, they will initiate a battle to collect trophies from each other.[132] Each application's StreetPass content is stored in one of twelve "data slots" in the console. Using this data slot, Nintendo 3DS users can readily share and exchange content for multiple games at the same time whenever they are connected, regardless of what game card is currently in the console.[133] On August 5, 2013, a system update brought a new feature called StreetPass Relay. This new feature allows users to exchange StreetPass data when passing by a certified Nintendo Zone hotspot with the last Nintendo 3DS user to pass by that same hotspot, if he or she too had StreetPass enabled. In the United States, there are over 29,000 Street Pass Relay Points, while Europe is set to see approximately 30,000.[129][130] A day later, the feature also became available in Japan.[128] StreetPass Mii Plaza Main article: StreetPass Mii Plaza StreetPass Mii Plaza is a StreetPass application which comes pre-installed on every Nintendo 3DS system. In it, players meet other players' Miis over StreetPass and online through Nintendo Network, and interact with them. In this application, the player's Mii can be customized with hats earned from minigames, along with a short customizable message and other information. When new Miis are encountered by the system, they will appear at the plaza gate. The player can then use them to play various minigames before encountering more Miis. Meeting the same Miis multiple times adds extra functionality, such as personalized messages and the ability to rate them. The application comes with three minigames, while further minigames can be purchased optionally.[citation needed] Games Further information: List of Nintendo 3DS games and List of best-selling Nintendo 3DS games An opened Nintendo 3DS Game Card case, without its paper cover and instructions. The eco-friendly design uses less plastic, reducing manufacturing waste. Some covers use the holes as a design element.[134] Retail copies of games are supplied on proprietary cartridges called Nintendo 3DS Game Cards, which are packaged in keep cases with simple instructions. In Europe, the boxes have a triangle at the bottom corner of the paper sleeve-insert side. The triangle is color-coded to identify the region for which the title is intended and which manual languages are included. Unlike with previous Nintendo consoles, the complete software manual is only available digitally via the system's Home Menu. Retail and download-only games are also available for download in the Nintendo eShop. The console is region locked (software purchased in a region can be only played on that region's hardware). New games in Nintendo's flagship franchises (including Super Mario, The Legend of Zelda and Pokémon) have been released, in addition to many original titles and third-party-developed games. Nintendo has received third-party support from companies such as Ubisoft, Sega, Square Enix, Activision Blizzard and Capcom. Nintendo and Sega also launched the 3D Classics series, a selection of enhanced retro games for the Nintendo 3DS featuring updated stereoscopic graphics.[135][136] A total of 122.42 million Nintendo 3DS games have been sold worldwide as of September 30, 2013,[8] with 17 titles surpassing the million-unit mark. The most successful game, Super Mario 3D Land, has sold approximately 8.29 million units worldwide. Other notable best-selling Nintendo 3DS software titles include Mario Kart 7 with 8.08 million units sold, New Super Mario Bros. 2 with 6.42 million units sold, Animal Crossing: New Leaf with 3.86 million units sold, Nintendogs + Cats with 3.28 million units sold, The Legend of Zelda: Ocarina of Time 3D with 2.95 million units sold, Luigi's Mansion: Dark Moon with 2.65 million units sold, and Monster Hunter 3 Ultimate with 2.10 million units sold.[13][137] Launch titles The Nintendo 3DS launched in Japan with 8 games, in North America with 15 games and in Europe with 14 games.[138][139][140][141] An additional thirty games were announced to release during the system's "launch-window", which includes the three months after the system's launch. AR Games is a compilation of several augmented reality mini-games, which is pre-installed on every Nintendo 3DS, along with 6 paper cards that interact with the games. Five of the six cards have a picture of a character on them, consisting of Mario, Link, Kirby, Pikmin, and Samus. The sixth one is a question mark box stylized after the ones from the Super Mario Bros. series. By scanning the cards, real time graphics are augmented onto live footage. Nintendo has also published downloadable versions of the Question Block AR Card in larger sizes.[142] There are various mini-games, ranging from actual playable games to simple tools to use just for fun. The game starts with Archery initially available. Other levels and games can be further unlocked including AR Shot and Fishing, along with a Fishing Journal. There are also various tools such as Graffiti, Globe, Clock and 3D Tools in which the player can alter the area around the "?" AR Card with the stylus, creating pits, mountains, etc. The player can also take 3D photos of their favorite Nintendo characters, using any to all 6 AR Cards, as well as with their Miis, changing their position and pose,s and take pictures. Some AR cards are also compatible with other Nintendo 3DS games including Nintendogs + Cats, Kid Icarus: Uprising, Pokédex 3D Pro, Freakyforms: Your Creations, Alive! and Tetris: Axis.^{[143][144]} Face Raiders is another augmented reality application pre-installed on every Nintendo 3DS system. In order to start playing, the user must take pictures of peoples' faces. These faces then turn into enemies and attack the player, who must shoot them using the system's gyroscope. The background of the game is the rear camera's viewpoint.^[145] As people walk by in the background, the game takes their pictures from their faces, also adding them as enemies.^[146] The player can also collect bonus faces from the system's image gallery, scanning each image in search of face. Each bonus face adds points to the player's score at the end of its stage. The user score is then recorded on a local leaderboard. There are other Nintendo 3DS applications that similarly use the system's AR capabilities, such as Pokémon Dream Radar and Spirit Camera: The Cursed Memoir.^{[147][148]}

Download Play Download Play (ダウロードプレイ Daunrōdo Purei?) allows users to play local multiplayer games with other Nintendo 3DS systems using only one Game Card. Players must have their systems within wireless range (up to approximately 65 feet) of each other for the guest system to download the necessary data from the host system. Download Play on Nintendo 3DS systems is also backwards compatible, meaning that it is also available for Nintendo DS games. Unlike Download Play on Nintendo DS, game data, once downloaded to the guest system, is stored on the system's SD card, no longer requiring a re-download for a future game session.^[149] Multi-card play, like Download Play, allows users to play multiplayer games with other Nintendo 3DS systems. However, in this case, each system requires a Game Card. This mode is only accessed via an in-game menu, rather than the normal Download Play menu.

Virtual Console The Virtual Console service allows Nintendo 3DS owners to download and play games originally released for the Game Boy, Game Boy Color, Sega Game Gear and Nintendo Entertainment System. Virtual Console games are distributed over broadband Internet via the Nintendo eShop, and are saved to a removable SD card. Once downloaded, Virtual Console games can be accessed from the Home Menu as individual apps. The service was launched on June 6 in North America and June 7, 2011 in Japan and Europe^[citation needed] as part of a system update.^[150]

Backward compatibility See also: List of Nintendo DS games and List of DSiWare games and applications In addition to its own software, the Nintendo 3DS is backward compatible with most Nintendo DS and Nintendo DSi software. Like the DSi, the Nintendo 3DS is incompatible with DS software that requires the use of the Game Boy Advance port. Nintendo DS and DSi software cannot be played with 3D visuals on the 3DS. The original DS display resolutions are displayed in a scaled and stretched fashion due to the increased resolution of the 3DS's screens. However, if the user holds down the START or SELECT buttons upon launching Nintendo DS software, the emulated screens will be displayed in Nintendo DS's native resolution, albeit smaller with black borders. However, on the Nintendo 3DS XL, this method yields a viewing size for DS games similar to their native sizes, unlike on the original 3DS models, where the games appear to be shrunk.^{[151][152]}

Reception [icon] This section requires expansion. (September 2013) The Nintendo 3DS hardware received very positive reviews. IGN called its hardware design a "natural evolution of the Nintendo DSi system."^[44] CNET praised the device's 3D effect, while IGN called it "impressively sharp and clean", and impressively superior to its predecessors,^{[153][154]} although it was noted that the 3D effect only worked if the system was held at the right distance and angle.^{[154][155]} A common complaint was the 3DS's battery life; Engadget reported to get 3 hours of battery life from the system,^[155] while IGN reported 2 to 4.5 hours of play. The Nintendo 3DS XL received mostly positive reviews and almost critical acclaim at launch. Reviewers generally recommended the console to new buyers of the Nintendo 3DS line, although not so much to current owners of a Nintendo 3DS. Kotaku mentioned it as "possibly the best portable gaming device ever...[and] a well-designed machine..." and that "it plays great games"^[156] while The Verge called it "the best portable gaming buy around right now."^[157] One common complain regarding the original Nintendo 3DS, its longevity, has been addressed with the Nintendo 3DS XL. Kotaku claimed that the Nintendo 3DS XL's battery "lasts a cross-country flight."^[158] The Verge noted that the larger top screen makes more obvious problems with aliasing and low-resolution textures. It did, however, say that the 3D felt more immersive. "Where the 3DS felt like peering through a peephole into another world," they said, "the XL is almost like stepping through a door."^[159] On the other hand, Destructoid said the 3D effect on the XL was more subtle than on its predecessor.^[160] The Verge spoke positively of the build quality and design choices, saying the console improved on the original.^[159] A Destructoid reviewer said the 3DS XL was easier to use than the regular Nintendo 3DS, mainly due to his large hands.^[160] The Verge noted lowered sound quality from the original, the result of smaller speakers.^[159] Both The Verge and Gizmodo complained of low-quality cameras.^[159]

The system launched in Japan on February 26, 2011, and sold its entire allotment of 400,000 Nintendo 3DS units during its release in amid reports of major queues outside retailers and pre-order sellouts. During that week 119,591 copies of Professor Layton and the Miracle Mask were sold, making it the best-selling Nintendo 3DS launch title in Japan, and the third best-selling title from any system in that week..[174][174] On March 25, 2011, the system launched in Europe, selling 303,000 units during its first two days of its release. In the UK 113,000 3DS units were sold during its opening weekend, making it Nintendo's most successful hardware launch in the country to this day.[175] On March 25, 2011 the Nintendo 3DS launched in North America. Nintendo announced that first day sales for the Nintendo 3DS in the US were the largest of any Nintendo handheld device in history. According to the NPD Group, Nintendo sold just under 500,000 Nintendo 3DS units during the month of March 2011 in the US, with 440,000 Nintendo 3DS units sold in its first week of release.[177][178] As of March 31, 2011 the 3DS had sold 3.61 million units, short of the 4 million Nintendo projected. The Nintendo 3DS is also the fastest selling console in Australia, with 200,000 units sold through 37 weeks of availability.[180] Following the system's price cut of almost one third of its original price, sales saw an increase of more than 260 percent during the comparable 19-day time period in July. About 185,000 units were sold following a price cut on August 12. Nintendo sold more than 235,000 Nintendo 3DS systems in the United States in August, being the second best-selling dedicated game system for the month. During the 2011 holiday season, the Nintendo 3DS sold approximately 1.6 million units in Japan. In addition, three Nintendo 3DS titles took the top three most sold games in Japan in 2011. Mario Kart 7 was in first place with 1.16 million units sold, followed by Super Mario 3D Land with 1.08 million units. The third place was taken by Monster Hunter 3G from Capcom, which sold 0.98 million units before the end of the year, though it has since become the third Nintendo 3DS title to sell over a million units. On September 30, 2013, Nintendo president Satoru Iwata announced that the Nintendo 3DS had sold more than 5 million units in Japan during the year of 2013. This mark was only surpassed by its predecessor, the Nintendo DS. Health concerns Nintendo has publicly stated that the 3D mode of the Nintendo 3DS is not intended for use by children ages six and younger, citing possible harm to their vision. Nintendo suggests that younger players use the device's 2D mode instead,[184] although the American Optometric Association has assured parents that 3D gaming in moderation would not be harmful for children.[185] Additionally, the 3DS may help in screening children before the age of 6 who have depth related vision problems according to Dr. Michael Duenas, associate director for health sciences and policy for the American Optometric Association, and Dr. Joe Ellis, the president of the optometrists' association.[186] However, Dr. David Hunter, a pediatric ophthalmologist affiliated with the American Academy of Ophthalmology believes that it is largely speculative whether a child who has problems perceiving depth in real life would react to a 3DS in any way that parents would recognize as indicating any problems with depth perception.[186] Nintendo's vague warning, that, "there is a possibility that 3-D images which send different images to the left and right eye could affect the development of vision in small children," was not specifically backed up by any scientific evidence, leading Duenas to believe it is motivated by preventing possible liability rather than safeguarding against realistic harm.[Nintendo has stated that a parental control involving a PIN will allow parents to disable autostereoscopic effects. Playing games in 3D has been suspected of causing headaches among some gamers.[188] The dizziness experienced by some users may be explained similarly to the headaches that watchers of 3D movies have similarly experienced, which is believed to be due to confusion caused by a lack of visual cues that humans use to perceive depth in their everyday environment. Nintendo of America president Reggie Fils-Aime partially cited these concerns as one of the influences of the Nintendo 2DS, an entry-level version of the Nintendo 3DS systems lacking 3D functionality. Legal issues In 2011, 58-year old former Sony employee Seiji Tomita sued Nintendo for infringing a patent on the 3D screen that obviates the need for 3D glasses. On March 13, 2013, United States federal jury sentenced Nintendo to pay him US $ 30.2 million in damages.[189] However, on August 7, 2013, that amount was reduced by 50 % to US

$ 15.1 million due to the fact that the initial figure was, according to federal judge Jed Rakoff, “intrinsically excessive” and “unsupported by the evidence presented at trial”. He added that when the suit was originally filed in 2011 the 3DS was not profitable. Nintendo decided to appeal for an overturn, but judge Rakoff has thrown out the plea.

China sets out to buy up the world

About a fifth of global stock market value now sits in such state capitalist firms in China.

Theoretically if China has 1.3 billion people, and is going to surpass our GDP with 1.3 billion people, the United States should keep it's private sector much larger than the public sector. Our 310 million people cannot outpace 1.3 billion so how about move back to traditional Republican principles, a constitutional private healthcare insurance plan, and limited public sector. It is the sure way to prevent the states go bankrupt in 2013 like Democrat/Massachusetts Treasurer Tim Cahill once predicted so he wanted to kill it. We can always completely terminate free trade with China down the road, an idea that Donald Trump currently has.

And why are we in a Libyan war anyway. Obama is in another front already without Congress's confirmation (which is unconstitutional). IT looks like our troops with have to train the rebels in Libya so long as they don't stay. This isn't the time to get into other countries affairs. It looks bad when the leading economy in Europe, Germany, left NATO. Iraq and Afghanistan is enough, and we need to reserve forces for that Mexican drug war. They're be-heading Texans and are in border towns.

Senator Ron Paul, you are still brilliant about staying out of Libya!

If this doesn't work, I could get to know Perth or Brisbane, Australia. Australia is the 2nd best lifestyle economy after France. I don't know any body important in the US even though US is the greatest country. Australia is even starting to have Major League talent in Baseball (because cricket is obsolete)

I'm sure hope Republicans win in 2012!

OpenSuse 11.4 review (2011-03-15 00:18)

It feels like a service pack to OpenSuse 11.3. It comes with KDE 4.6.0, Gnome 2.32, XFCE 4.8. The 2.6.37 kernel is supposed to have performance improvements with the big kernel lock missing. EXT4 file system(my favorite) now works more closely with the block layer for less CPU resources. The more reliable EXT4's performance is now close to the much older XFS server file system. I heard Btrfs with compression enabled is noticeably faster then it was in OpenSuse 11.3. OpenSuse 11.4 is supposed to recognize my Radeon HD 5970 GPU which is why i require it (for my new PC). In OpenSuse 11.4, YAST Control Center uses less CPUs resources. KDE 4.6 is supposed to improve performance of the desktop environment (similar speedy difference between KDE 3.4 and KDE 3.5.3) The Dolphin file manager will let you see network shares. The Dolphin file manager has faceted browsing which will allow you to find files via their metadata. KDE 4.6 is supposed to handle OpenGL (competitor to DirectX) very well. Due to this, it would be the best KDE release yet. KDE uses less CPU resources. Xfce 4.8 now has automated screen resolution detection. Xfce menu will support menu merging. XFCE 4.8 allows graphical menu editors like alacarte to work with Xfce. Thunar is ported from thunar-vfs to gvfs. PolicyKit has support in xfce4-session. There are multilib enhancements for xfce4-panel plugins. In XFCE 4.8 The run dialog now runs with the users full session environment. The task list windows can now be filtered by monitor. The XFCE 4.8 has improved multi-head support Crossover Linux 9.01 Professional handles all my Winamp, VLC, and 2D games. I experienced no WIN32 crashes. The Maximize feature was still messed up, but the video frames per second hasn't been jaggy since OpenSuse 11.2. Also I found that OpenSuse 11.4 only takes the sh installer, because RPM is not compatible. In Konsole, type sh crossover-linux-pro?????.sh

KDE 4.6

Gnome 2.32 is about the same as Gnome 2.30. Libre Office 3.3 has the new abilities of opening Lotus Word Pro documents and Microsoft Word documents. It will now open SVG graphics in Libre Office Draw. The Libre office suite has a search box for looking up components. It has redesigned menus.

I kind of like LXDE too, but I don't know what has changed. I know it uses less memory than XFCE and looks like Gnome on here. All of the later OpenSuse releases since OpenSuse 11.2 have ran slower than Windows XP on my 32-bit machines due to the single core at 1280x768 (via KDM Window manager settings).

I give it a 9.5 out of 10. OpenSuse 11.4 is worth the reinstallation.

MACOS X on regular PC (2011-03-16 09:59)

We'll see how to install OS X on a Windows XP machine, on a 7Gb dedicated partition. So you have to prepare your hard disk with:

- The first, primary and bootable partition with a normal Win XP installation;
- A second empty NTFS primary partition;
- Any other partition you like.

Please refer to other documentations if you don't know how to deal with hard drive partitions. You can use, for example, Partition Magic to change your HD partitions... anyway if you are not experienced in partitioning, my tip is stop here.

Then, you have to get some software:

1. An Ubuntu Linux Live CD: you can get it, or you can download it. It's free. A valid alternative to Ubuntu that I found is Knoppix STD: use it if you've problems with Ubuntu;
2. VmWare Workstation it's a commercial application, but a free trial is available;
3. The Deadmoo's OS X Linux distro: this is available on P2P networks, usually under tiger-x86.tar.bz2 filename. I want to remember again that you've no right to download and to use it, if you don't have a valid Apple's OS X Licence.

- Boot from Ubuntu (of Knoppix) Live CD;
- Open a Terminal Window, get administrative rights (it should be sufficient to enter the command "sudo su")... and type:

cfdisk /dev/hda

- The Cfdisk utility will start: choose the partition where you want to install OS X (it should be the second one, but please make attention!) and choose "TYPE". Now write "AF" (without quotes, of course) as type, and confirm changes choosing "WRITE". The partition you chose will be erased and it's type will be set to AF (Apple Format).

Now reboot, go back to Windows XP, install and open VmWare.

Create a new "FreeBSD" virtual machine. When asked to choose the primary hard drive for the virtual machine, choose your physical hard disk; Also add a second hard drive to the virtual machine: the virtual drive inside Deadmoo's archive; insert your Ubuntu CD and make sure that your physical DVD/CD-rom reader is enabled in the virtual machine.

Then start the virtual machine and press on ESC as the machine begin, to enter boot menu: choose to boot from CD. Ubuntu should start booting in the virtual machine's window. On the contrary, if you see Windows starting, immediately turn off the virtual machine and check CD-Rom settings (in this case, the CD boot has not started and your Windows XP is going to start into itself!).

When Ubuntu is ready, open a terminal window and type a command like this:

dd if=/dev/hdb1 of=/dev/hda2/ bs=8192

hdb (2nd hard drive) should be the mounted Deadmoo's image: our source;

hda2 should be the 2nd partition of the 1st hard drive (our physical one): the destination.

CHANGE HDB1 and HDA2 with YOUR SETTINGS!

If you're not sure about partitions, type:

fdisk /dev/hda -l

to get a list of your connected hard drives and relative partitions identifiers.

The process will take about 5-10 minutes. At the end, you can shut down the virtual machine.

Download this file.

It contains a file named chain0. Extract it to the root of your C:\ partition and add the following line:

C:\chain0="Mac OS X"

to your C:\boot.ini file.

Now reboot your PC and choose Mac OS X at the boot list screen. Then the "Darwin boot" will ask you to select the partition with Mac OS X installed: select it with arrow keys.

Now try to type -s and then enter. If everything goes ok, at the prompt type:

sh /etc/rc

passwd curtis

and enter your new password when asked. If anything is wrong, try to boot with -x or without arguments.

Please take note that sometimes it's needed to boot several times (with -s, -x, or with no arguments) to get OS X work... I don't know the reason, but it happens!

NOTE : This method is not an emulation (like others that run Mac OS X into a virtual machine. Here VmWare is used only to transfer the OS X image to the 2nd partition). Mac OS runs directly on the x86 machine, so speed is the best you can get.

Of course our PCs are not exactly the hardware thought by Apple's developers, so speed is not the same of an original Macintosh.

Flu vaccine does as advertised (2011-03-18 07:40)

I got a flu vaccine from the US Government and I never got sick since I was injected. The flu vaccine also had a H1N1 formula vaccine built into it.

Sturgeons Law woes Episode II (2011-03-24 01:00)

Sturgeons Law: states 90 % of the media out there is not worth the price-point. Coolest word phrase to describe all my purchasing troubles.

I'm having a hard time finding movies that I should own. I think the 2010 movie Winter's Bone is the only one. Maybe it is Hollywood is getting stupid. My NRA friends all buy rifles, close to a Remington Model 750 or Savage Model 99. Hunting is very important. There isn't anyone to talk to so I buy low-cost stuff to fill the gap.

achievements/trophies decreasing game scores theory (2011-03-24 02:50)

One of the stupidest things in gaming right now are achievements and trophies. You know why Dragon Age 2 is a steaming piles of crap? BioWare gets achievement info that shows over 50 % of players played as the Soldier, making thesequel more shooter less RPG. Because BioWare sees that only 50 % of players finished Dragon Age: Origins, making a drastically regressed sequel in the process.

Achievements and Trophies are dreadful. It's like being forced to give out your gaming habits to everyone. It's like being a lab rat for a marketing group. What sells? What can we tell people that they want in the future? One of my wishes is to take gaming back to what it's supposed to be about: fun.

In Half-Life 2 on the PC you could have hit one of the Combine soldiers and been beaten if you chose to do so at the beginning. That was you as a player revolting against an invasion. On the Xbox 360 version there's an achievement that tells you to do that. Sounds easy right? Might as well just go for the freaking achievement. Make it a lesser amount of about the understanding and more about the mundane act of earn points.

There was a time when beating a game on the hardest difficulty was done simply because you were good enough to do it. Now it's about finding others to help you do it so you can get the points. In that regard, kudos to Bungie for at least having the sack to make a second achievement of beating Halo Reach on Legendary by yourself.

Achievements and trophies are less about rewarding the player because they serve no purpose. It's sad that achievements and trophies are the way that they are. There's always the thrill of simply going through certain dispute, like dodging so loads of missiles or killing so many enemies and so on. Not every game is guilty of it. But there are games where I just look at the list and think to myself, "did I pay money to sign up for this crap?"

Bought 3DS today (2011-03-28 12:04)

I bought a 3DS at Wal-mart at 8 AM today. Thinking it won't matter about the price point, because it'll be this this expensive this time next year.

I bought the only 8.0 out of 10 game out there!

I know when I saw the first screenshots of the RPG Beyond the Labyrinth, I knew I had to use that $100 gift certificate from Easter (as a present) for a 3DS. So I bought one. Beyond the Layrinh looks like a great RPG and I knew I could collect 22 8.0 out of 10 DS games in 6 years. That is more than my 17 PSP games. While at wal-mart, I noticed Crysis 2 was also overpriced at $60 (normally PC games are $50). I couldn't resist, I had to buy Crysis 2 also. The original Crysis was the main reason I upgraded to a Geforce 8800 GTX in 2006. I have a Radeon HD 5970 so I had to buy at least one game that was DirectX 11 before DirectX 11.1 comes out. I am quietly waiting for Unreal Engine 4 to come out that requires DirectX 11 in 2013 (long way off). Although it may not be as awesome as it use to be in 2004 with Unreal Tournament 2004, Unreal Tournament 4 may be worth it for people in their twenties. I may be getting old.

Beyond the Labyrinth screenshot

There isn't much out there that I want, Sturgeon's Law says 90 % out there is crap. 3DS and Crysis 2 looked like top 10 % that wasn't the 90 % that was no good.

I also want the super mario 3DS and Mario Kart 3DS.

I miss playing Guild Wars (2011-03-29 12:07)

You have to download gigabytes of patches on guild wars factions. I'd do it, but then I have that low ping to worry about. I get my all my monsters destroyed by someone else. I used it to talk to random people from all over the world. The game was better than World of Warcraft. Guild Wars was my 4th and latest foray into MMORPGs behind Diablo (1999), Diablo 2 (2000 – 2004) and Neverwinter Nights (2002-2003). I truly missed was GW's ability to travel instantly to any unlocked town on the map – this made it very easy to gather up guildies for a run at a particular mission. With 2 continents and long flight times (which can be costly), this becomes considerably more difficult in WoW.

PRO:

Skill sets are balanced for each class combo

Great team PVP matches

Excellent graphics. Don't need an ultra-powerful card to run the game at high graphics settings

Most items do not cost alot

No monthly fee

Max armor/weapons items are easily obtained

Certain Max rare items easily obtainable (green items)

"Expansion" games can be bought/used as standalone or merged to an existing account.

You can play "single" player with henchmen or join/form a group.

Very challenging missions at high level

CONS:

Rare items sold by players to merchants can't be bought back by anyone.

Level cap is 20 (could be PRO)

People in towns selling rare items at overinflated prices

Character's mouths don't move in cutscenes.

Henchmen sometimes do stupid stuff.

. You buy Guild Wars to instantly partake of action, to skip the running from city to city. To play a game, not live a life. Now, let's take a deeper look at WoW. It is meant to be a place to live. It's an alternate world for you to exist in and live an entire alternate life. What little Guild Wars doesn't have, you save $1000s of dollars on Guild Wars.

I was playing all the offline games to care at all!

the anime blog (2011-04-01 18:49)

<http://animemidwesterner.wordpress.com>

Thought I come across some group on wordpress into that sort of thing because I seen 15 others. They were hardcore fan sites though, and I am not nearly hardcore. I got into anime more on the role playing videogame side of things in 2000. Then 10 years later I got Cowboy Bebop series, because Roger Ebert was a fan who gets the most followers of any film critic. This is two years after seeing most the awesome and nontrashy stuff on DirecTV.

Sam Webb's favorite sports team (2011-04-02 07:32)

Lambeau Field in Green Bay, Wis., is home to one of America's latest communist experiments; and it's a near century-long success story. Founded in 1919 (same year as the founding of Communist Party USA in Chicago), the Green Bay Packers remain the only major league franchise in American professional sports without traditional private owners. There are certainly no billionaires in their board room.

There are, technically, private stockholders in the form of more than 100,000 people in possession of nearly five million shares in the team. But these owners have stock certificates that can officially never pay a dividend, and so they amount to little more than novelty memorabilia sold to support the club. For all intents and purposes, they might be viewed as oversized, if expensive (last sold in 1998 at $200 per share), trading cards.

They might think about the impact that money could have for, say, the 20,000 students enrolled in Green Bay public schools. The math works out to $50,000 per child, and the comrades of Green Bay, Wis., could send all of their children to college, free of charge!

Books Essential for Life (2011-04-05 19:59)

10. Three Essays on the Theory of Sexuality - Sigmund Freud.

It's still easy to see why these essays horrified the world. Freud described a kiss as the mutual contact of the mucous membrane of the lips. He connected romance to perversion. He traced the architecture of adult life to the hidden sexuality of children. Brilliant, fearless, and, yes, a little nutty, he turned science inward and changed our minds forever.

9. Charles Bukowski - Women

7. Advnse and Consent - Allen Drury

6. A Sense of Where You Are: Bill Bradley at Princeton - John McPhee

5. The Professional - W.C. Heinz

Heinz's 1958 novel about boxer Eddie Brown and his big fight reads and feels like actual literature: lean, economical prose; beautifully nuanced characters; action that's fierce and true.

4. The Education of Henry Adams

The last, powerful yawp of a family full of Boston snobs who were nonetheless so mad for human liberty, they failed to see where it all would lead or, in the case of great-grandpappy John, appreciate it very much when they got there. Adams rings in the twentieth century, buys a car, and deeply regrets that his high-rent formal education has left him unprepared for the wonders to come. "Chaos often breeds life," he concludes. "Order breeds habit."

3. U. S. A. by Dos Passos

The Frankfurt School-Bolshevik (2011-04-06 12:00)

Since the Frankfurt School is barely breathing, I been wondering if Barack Obama took all the state-capitalist Bolshevik theories from Tony Cliff and CLR James and made a council (a page out of the Frankfurt school) out of it. The Czars could double as a Vanguard Party and a communist committee.

It looks like Obama is using Deflected Permanent Revolution and directive planning.

They added all the Frankfurt School theories to it

5th wheel to theoretically increase camping fun (2011-04-08 10:33)

Last year I went camping in a small ultra-light Europeanized Heartland Edge trailer. This year is a Copper Canyon 5th wheel with two doors. The Heartland Edge was cramp, and the three of us couldn't move around much in it so this one solves that dillima. The Edge was originally pulled by a 6 cilinder vehicle, but now that they have a V8 Pickup, a 2x larger 5th wheeler can be pulled. This is the appropriate size. The Heartland Edge was the 2nd smallest in the park with the smallest being the inexpensive Coleman popup trailers.

Top 20 Simpsons episodes (2011-04-08 19:50)

"Bart the Daredevil"

"Bart Simpson and Skateboard" Twentieth Century Fox

In "Bart the Daredevil," Bart embarks on a life of death-defying feats when he sees a daredevil perform at a Monster Truck Rally. This episode makes my list mainly because of Homer's long, painful fall down the cliff... twice. "Bart the Daredevil," like other early episodes, isn't as much about Homer being a doofus, as a father whose trying his best, fails, and then redeems himself.

Air Date: Season 2, 7F06

"Burns Verkaufen der Kraftwerk"

"Mr. Burns" Twentieth Century Fox

In "Burns Verkaufen der Kraftwerk" (translated means "Burns Selling That Power Station") Mr. Burns sells the Springfield Nuclear Power Plant to a group of Germans. While I enjoyed the humor of Homer and the other workers either sucking up to or alienating their new German bosses, the best part of the episode has nothing to do with corporate takeovers or job loss: Homer in the Land of Chocolate. Homer imagines a Land of Chocolate, in which he prances through, eating even a passing dog. He gets excited about a 50 % off sale, when the chocolate is all free. Who wouldn't love the Land of Chocolate?

Air Date: Season 3, 8F09

"Cape Feare"

"Sideshow Bob" Twentieth Century Fox

In "Cape Feare," Sideshow Bob is at his devious best. The Simpson family enters the FBI's Witness Relocation Program to escape Sideshow Bob when he is paroled from prison. But Sideshow Bob, determined to get to Bart, follows them, which leads to a final showdown on a houseboat. Bart is only saved when his last request before dying is to hear Sideshow Bob sing the entire score to H.M.S. Pinafore. Sideshow Bob replies, with his usual wit, "Very well, Bart. I shall send you to heaven before I send you to hell." Who else but Kelsey Grammer could play Sideshow Bob, with his rich baritone and elegant elocution?

Air Date: Season 5, 9F22

"Duffless"

"Homer Simpson" Twentieth Century Fox

I can't think of another primetime comedy that appeals to all ages where alcoholism is the punchline. In "Duffless," Marge asks Homer to give up beer (not "deer," beer) for a month after he's arrested while driving drunk. We see Homer attending AA-like meetings (Ned Flanders drank schnapps!) and riding Lisa's bike when his driver's license is revoked. The subplot involving Lisa using Bart as a hamster substitute in her science experiment brings home the rivalry between syblings. This is a well-rounded, hysterical episode, ending with Homer choosing Marge over beer.

Air Date: Season 4, 9F14

"A Fish Called Selma"

"Selma Bouvier" Twentieth Century Fox

"A Fish Called Selma" showcases the considerable talent of Phil Hartman as Troy McClure. Troy McClure's agent (Jeff Goldblum) encourages Troy to be seen in public with a woman in order to boost his career. (There are rumors he does strange things with fish!) Troy starts dating Selma, and it pays off. Eventually they marry, but Selma, who really is in love, realizes that it isn't working. But during Troy's comeback, one of the best musical scenes of all Simpsons episodes has McClure starring in Stop the Planet of the Apes, I Want to Get Off! Sing with me, "I hate every ape I see, From chimpan-a to chimpan-zee."

Air Date: Season 7, 3F15

"Homer Alone"

"Maggie Simpson" Twentieth Century Fox

Marge freaks out from the stress of taking care of her family, and sends herself to Rancho Relaxo. Lisa and Bart stay with Selma and Patty, and Homer is left with Maggie. I can relate to Marge's breakdown. I, too, fantasize about ordering alcohol and a hot fudge sundae from room service while I'm relishing a bubbly bath. I also belly laugh at Bart giving his aunt a bunion rubdown. Yecch. But the scene I enjoy the most is after Maggie has crawled away from home, and Homer can't find her. He phones the missing children hotline. When he's put on hold he hears Player singing, "Baby Come Back." Hysterical!

Air Date: Season 3, 8F14

"Homer: Bad Man"

"Groundskeeper Willie" Twentieth Century Fox

"Homer: Bad Man" originally aired in 1994, and sexual harassment was a hot issue in America. Only on The Simpsons could we watch an episode that begins at a candy convention and ends with Homer narrowly proving his innocence in allegedly sexually harassing his babysitter by showing a video made by a Scot named Groundskeeper Willie. (Homer only wanted to grab the rare Gummi Venus de Milo, which was stuck to her behind.) The end of "Homer Bad Man" provides great opportunities for trivia and the pause button: TV magazine Rock Bottom's fast-scrolling list of corrections.

Air Date: Season 6, 2F06

"Homer the Great"

"Homer Simpson" Twentieth Century Fox

"Homer the Great" is ridiculous, musical and features a wonderful guest star. Homer is inducted into the Stonecutters, a secret and exclusive group who have powerful means and influence. My favorite things about "Homer the Great:" The Stonecutters song (We do! We do!); the sly joke about Number One referring to the leader, who is played by Patrick Stewart, a.k.a. Captain Picard from Star Trek: Next Generation, (stay with me) who referred to his second in command as Number One; the birthmark that declares Homer is the Chosen One; and the secret tunnel that allows Homer to zoom to work, bypassing a huge traffic jam.

Air Date: Season 6, 2F09

"Hurricane Neddy"

"Ned Flanders" Twentieth Century Fox

In "Hurricane Neddy," Ned Flanders' home is the only one destroyed by a hurricane. It shakes his faith in God and sends him to the psych. ward. I love the crazy, dilapidated home Springfieldians put together for Ned, including the hallway that gets narrower and shorter, like something out of Alice in Wonderland. I also love seeing Ned go off his rocker, giving his neighbors a piece of his mind. It's one of the only times we've seen him crack. The best scene, though, is the flashback to his childhood, where we get to see his beatnik parents.

Air Date: Season 8, 4F07

"The Itchy and Scratchy and Poochie Show"

"Itchy and Scratchy" Twentieth Century Fox

Another favorite episode of mine from the eighth season is "The Itchy and Scratchy and Poochie Show." In this episode, Homer is hired as the voice of a new character on the "Itchy and Scratchy Show" named Poochie. Though Homer, and his writers, try to make the character cool and hip, Poochie is rejected. The entire story, though, is also played out as a new character, Roy, moves into the Simpson house. As Poochie is canceled and leaves Itchy and Scratchy to visit another planet, Roy leaves the Simpsons. The entire episode is a tongue-in-cheek take on the business of making cartoons.

Air Date: Season 8, 4F12

"Last Exit to Springfield"

"Lenny" Twentieth Century Fox

"Last Exit to Springfield" finds Homer Simpson the head of the union at Springfield Nuclear Power Plant. Because Lisa needs braces, he fights for the employees keep their dental plan. The episode is filled with great moments, such as Ralph Wiggum being shown "The Big Book of British Smiles" to get him to brush his teeth. Then there's Homer's "train of thought" when he hears Lenny shouting, "Dental plan!" and then Marge, "Lisa needs braces!" Mr. Burns asks, "Who is that firebrand, Smithers?" Why, it's Homer Simpson, Union Boss.

Air Date: Season 4, 9F15

"The Last Temptation of Homer"

"Mindy Simmons" Twentieth Century Fox

In "The Last Temptation of Homer," Michelle Pfeiffer guest stars as Mindy Simmons, the new employee at the power plant. Homer falls for her because she's gorgeous, loves donuts and burps frequently. In the end, Homer realizes he loves Marge too much to cheat on her. Michelle Pfeiffer is so elegant and beautiful, that the irony of her playing a burping love interest for Homer Simpson is funny enough. Also, the thorny issue of adultery is tackled in a way only The Simpsons could. Though Homer is contemplating cheating, he's a sympathetic and almost innocent character.

Air Date: Season 5, 1F07

"Life on the Fast Lane"

"Marge Simpson"Twentieth Century Fox

When Homer gives Marge a bowling ball as a birthday present, Marge vows to take up lessons. (At Bowl-a-rama, she declines a lane saying, "No thanks, I'm just here out of spite.") But she finds herself attracted to the charming instructor, Jacques (Albert Brooks). On her way to his apartment, she changes her mind, and my favorite scene of the episode takes place: In a parody of An Officer and a Gentleman, Marge marches through the power plant to find Homer. Then Homer announces, "I'm going to the back seat of my car, with the woman I love, and I won't be back for ten minutes!"

Air Date: Season 1, 7G11

"Marge vs. Monorail""Mayor Quimby"Twentieth Century Fox

"Marge vs. Monorail" has many scenes and moments that are considered classic by Simpsons fans. For instance, Lyle Lanley's Music Man-inspired song and dance at the town hall meeting. Leonard Nimoy (Star Trek) serving as Grand Marshall while confused Mayor Quimby exclaims, "May the force be with you!" And the line my husband frequently quotes to me, much to my chagrin, occurs when Homer is considering what to use as an anchor for the runaway train. As he is regarding Bart, Bart says, "Think harder, Homer." There are too many sight gags to list, and seeing so many of Springfield's characters is always fun.

Air Date: Season 4, 9F10

"Mr. Plow""Barney Gumble"Twentieth Century Fox

In "Mr. Plow," unlike other episodes, Homer starts a business that becomes successful. But his snow plow business is so successful, his friend Barney starts one, too. The competition becomes too fierce, but in the end, their friendship proves to be more important than money. The crowning glory of "Mr. Plow" is the jingle Homer composes for his late-night commercial. What fan can't sing, "Call Mr. Plow, That's my name, That name again, Is Mr. Plow?" Who needs Linda Ronstadt?

Air Date: Season 4, 9F07

"Natural Born Kissers""Homer and Marge Simpson"Twentieth Century Fox

Homer and Marge re-discover passion when they start making love in places where they could get caught. There aren't many couples on TV who work hard at staying together. It's heartening to see even if a cartoon couple dealing with the same issues everyone else does. My favorite scene is the one at the miniature golf course, with Ned, Maude and everyone else poking into the windmill, trying to retrieve a golf ball. Then, Homer and Marge flee, escaping in a hot air balloon. But during the ride, Homer winds up hanging onto the rope, being flown over Springfield in the buff. Naked Homer Simpson is always funny.

Air Date: Season 9, 5F18

"Radioactive Man""Milhouse Van Houten"Twentieth Century Fox

Milhouse is one of my favorite characters, and he gets more than his 15 minutes in "Radioactive Man." In this episode, Milhouse wins the part of Fallout Boy in the Radioactive Man movie that's being made in Springfield. But Milhouse finds that movie-making isn't much fun. "Radioactive Man" focuses on the friendship between Bart and Milhouse, which is endearing and touching. The episode also pokes fun at Hollywood very effectively. To top it off, funny favorite characters Rainier Wolfcastle ("My eyes! The goggles do nothing!") and Lionel Hutz (Phil Hartman) are also in the episode.

Air Date: Season 7, 2F17

"Rosebud""Maggie Simpson"Twentieth Century Fox

"Rosebud" focuses on Mr. Burns, a favorite character on The Simpsons. Mr. Burns searches for a stuffed bear from his childhood, Bobo. Back in season five, Homer wasn't as crass and shallow. When he discovers Maggie's bear is Bobo, he lets her keep it instead of taking $1 million from Mr. Burns. Though Mr. Burns makes Homer's life miserable, including depriving him of TV and beer, Homer never gives in. Finally, sweet Maggie gives back the bear. Also in this episode, we begin to learn Smithers' true feelings for Mr. Burns, and suspicions about his sexuality are, shall we say, aroused.

Air Date: Season 5, 1F01

"Selma's Choice"

"Lisa Simpson" Twentieth Century Fox

In "Selma's Choice," the family goes to the funeral of Aunt Gladys, who, in her video will, warns Selma and Patty that she should marry and have children before it's too late. Selma takes it to heart, but when she takes Bart and Lisa to Duff Gardens, she changes her mind. "Selma's Choice" is an example of an episode of The Simpsons dealing with real life issues, big ones, in a humorous and touching way. Scene after scene is full of jokes, from the funeral home, to Selma's experience with the dating service, to the entire disastrous visit to Duff Gardens.

"A Streetcar Named Marge"

"Marge Simpson" Twentieth Century Fox

"A Streetcar Named Marge" not only showcases the musical talents of composer Alf Clausen and the singing talents of the cast, but also the buff upper body of Ned Flanders. Who knew! Why this episode? Let me count the ways. Jon Lovitz as director Llewelyn Sinclair. Apu ending his scene as the newspaper boy on a high, sad note. Maggie's covert liberation of everyone's pacifiers at the Ayn Rand School for Tots. Genius all!

Force Fields for tanks (2011-04-09 11:49)

At one time, we had Mobile Tactical High Energy Laser for ships and fighters. This is a defensive laser that will destroy missiles out of the sky and weighs less enough to fit inside airplanes.

Now DARPA has created force fields, electric current armor that will possibly stop an RPG. It weighs 1 to 2 tons instead of 10 ton armor that protects against the same damage. The army spends $74 million on electromagnetic armor and gun research and development. The impacts have only left dents and scruffs. The British's Defence Science and Technology Laboratory are also working on their own.

It would last for only a fraction of a second, if timed correctly it could prevent rocket propelled grenades, which detonate on impact, from reaching their target. The supercapacitor could then be rapidly recharged ready for another attack.

Privatization of bankrupt Medicare, Medicaide. (2011-04-10 13:59)

Plouffe said the {frankfurt school) president feels comfortable with the spending deal the White House! Spending cuts are draconian and extreme and radical for the average Trotskyist and/or neo-marixst!

House Majority Leader Eric Cantor (R-VA) responded to Plouffe's insistence that the president's focus has always been on cutting spending.

"I sit here and I listen to David Plouffe talk about, you know, their commitment to cut spending and knowing full well that for the last two months, we've had to bring this president kicking and screaming to the table to cut spending," Cantor said, adding, "I then hear they're going to present a plan as far as how to address the fiscal situation. So, on one hand, we're going to defend that tax agreement but then go ahead and violate it."

The House Majority Leader said of the White House's shift in strategy, "I have to believe that the president and the White House are beginning to sense the American people get it. You know, we have a fiscal train wreck before us. And unless we act, and act deliberately, we're not going to enable our kids to have what we have. It's plain and simple as that."

Cantor pointed to the Ryan budget plan and said it "lays out our plan of how we're going to address the fiscal challenges of our country."

Anchor Chris Wallace asked whether Republicans are prepared to take on entitlements, as laid out in the Ryan plan, in the face of the elections next fall.

Cantor said yes, adding "what we've said is this: we're going to protect today's seniors and those nearing retirement. But for the rest of us, all of us who are 54 and younger, I know those programs are not going to be there for me when I retire, just like everyone else 54 and younger. They can't. We cannot sustain that kind of trajectory."

7.4 million blogs published a post over the past four months! (2011-04-12 10:31)

According to Technorati, only 7.4 blog posts have been published in the last four months. I we know that via Alexa rankings, Facebook is #2 and Twitter is #7!

Blogging must have turned into a business adventure to update stakeholders on business things. I still don't understand why they put a limit on the amount of strangers you add in a day or that they need to know you and why that threshold rule should damn well be first amendment of the US Constitution infringement! What a moron LIBERAL rule when Facebook has average joes with 250-300 friends out there! Once I go pass the invite threshold, facebook says I'm not allowed to add people for 2, 4, 8 days. People are aware of this limitation and Twitter still dead in these people's eyes! If Facebook people aren't brainwashed, they would move to Twitter and have 700+ friends.

in the future, US will be alone near the top ... (good thing) (2011-04-12 11:11)

By 2030, it will be stagnant or contracting in nearly all developed countries, the only major exception being the United States. Unless immigration or birthrates surge, Japan and some European nations are on track to lose nearly one-half of their total current populations by the end of the century. To begin with, they directly affect population size and GDP size, and hence the manpower and economic resources that nations can deploy.

For the world's wealthy nations, the 2020s are set to be a decade of rapid population aging and population decline. The developed world has been aging for decades, due to falling birthrates and rising life expectancy. In Italy, Spain, and Japan, more than half of all adults will be older than the official retirement age—and there will be more people in their 70s than in their 20s.

Although population size alone does not confer geopolitical stature, no one disputes that population size and economic size together constitute a potent double engine of national power. A larger population allows greater numbers of young adults to serve in war and to occupy and pacify territory. A larger economy allows more spending on the hard power of national defense and the semi-hard power of foreign assistance. Even at full employment, growth in real GDP could stagnate or decline, since the number of workers may be falling faster than productivity is rising. According to the Global Entrepreneurship Monitor's 2007 survey of 53 countries, new business start-ups in high-income countries are heavily tilted toward the young. Graying means paying—more for pensions, more for health care, more for nursing homes for the frail elderly. According to projections by the Center for Strategic and International Studies, the cost of maintaining the current generosity of today's public old-age benefit systems would, on average across the developed countries, add an extra 7 percent of GDP to government budgets by 2030. Faced with the choice between economically ruinous tax hikes and politically impossible benefit cuts, many governments will choose a third option: cannibalizing other spending on everything from education and the environment to foreign assistance and national defense.

We may also see increasing pressure on governments to block foreign competition. Historically, eras of stagnant population and market growth—think of the 1930s—have been characterized by rising tariff barriers, autarky, corporatism, and other anticompetitive policies that tend to shut the door on free trade and free markets.

Elder-dominated electorates may tend to lock in current public spending commitments at the expense of new priorities and shun decisive confrontations in favor of ad hoc settlements. Smaller families may be less willing to risk scarce youth in war.

Aside from Israel and Iceland, the United States is the only developed nation where fertility is at or above the replacement rate of 2.1 average lifetime births per woman the United States will still have the youth and the economic resources to play a major geopolitical role. The real challenge facing America by the 2020s may not be so much its inability to lead the developed world as the inability of the other developed nations to lend much assistance.

China's coming age wave—by 2030 it will be an older country than the United States—may weaken the two pillars of the current regime's legitimacy: rapidly rising GDP and social stability. Imagine workforce growth slowing to zero while tens of millions of elders sink into indigence without pensions, without health care, and without large extended families to support them.

By the 2020s, Russia, along with the rest of Eastern Europe, will be in the midst of an extended population decline as steep or steeper than any in the developed world. The Russian fertility rate has plunged far beneath the replacement level even as life expectancy has collapsed amid a widening health crisis. Russian men today can expect to live to 60. If the correlation between extreme youth and violence endures, chronic unrest and state failure could persist in much of sub-Saharan Africa and parts of the Muslim world through the 2020s, or even longer if fertility rates fail to drop. During the era of the Industrial Revolution, the population of what we now call the developed world grew faster than the rest of the world's population, peaking at 25 percent of the world total in 1930. Since then, its share has declined. By 2010, it stood at just 13 percent, and it is projected to decline still further, to 10 percent by 2050. Again, there is only one large country in the developed world that does not face a future of stunning relative demographic and economic decline: the United States. Thanks to its relatively high fertility rate and substantial net immigration, its current global population share will remain virtually unchanged in the coming decades.

Now that I have the Trailer Park Boys seasons 1 - 5, and 7, I should go back to collecting videogames! At least I have people to talk to at Gamespot...

Actually collecting games was so brilliant, I kept collecting them and not anything else until 2010 when i bought anime. But now I'm going back to the previous hobby There is more hype, choices, and gaming is a cultural phenomenon ! Just nobody giving their phone to me. Mensa thinks gaming (Twitter) replaces hollywood and just about anything else.

Maybe Gamespot is a brilliant place to be.

Big Short (2011-04-21 08:41)

That's not because Lewis has put together the most comprehensive or authoritative analysis of all the misdeeds and misjudgments and missed signals that led to the biggest credit bubble the world has known. What makes his account so accessible is that he tells it through the eyes of the managers of three small hedge funds and a Deutsche Bank bond salesman, none of whom you've ever heard of. All, however, were among the first to see the folly and fraud behind the subprime fiasco, and to find ways to bet against it when everyone else thought them crazy.

Nor would anyone – including Lewis, I'm sure – claim this is an even-handed history that reflects the differing views of investment bankers, rating-agency analysts and industry analysts, all of whom he holds up to ridicule for their arrogance, their cynicism and their relentless incompetence.

On January 30, 2007, Jamie Mai wrote an email to his partners Charlie Ledley and Ben Hockett. "If a broad range of CDO spreads starts to widen," he said, "it means that a material global financial clusterfuck is likely occurring."

On January 31, 2007, a broad range of CDO spreads started to widen, dramatically. The long-feared meltdown was upon us all – not that most of us knew it, at the time – and a very small number of investors was about to get paid out on the trade of their lifetimes. Mai, Ledley, and Hockett were part of that select group, whose tale is grippingly told by Michael Lewis in The Big Short.

The Big Short is not the story of the crisis, as the crisis is commonly understood. The failure of Lehman brothers and of Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac; the stock-market crash; the bail-out of Detroit; the fevered all-nighters pulled at Treasury and the New York Fed; the fears that the entire global financial system was on the brink of collapse – little if any of that is in this book.

Instead, Lewis has found a different story – one which he started mining for a spectacular cover story in the December 2007 issue of Portfolio magazine, and which has culminated in this book, over two years later. It's the story of what used to be called the "subprime crisis" before it metastasized into something much larger and more dangerous than that. And it's also, like all Michael Lewis tales, a human story, which takes us deep inside unique characters like Steve Eisman and Mike Burry.

On the face of it, there's almost nothing sympathetic about these men. Their social skills are all but nonexistent; they live in a world of arcane financial analysis which might as well be a different planet for all that it has any bearing on the way that most of us live our lives; and they made their outsize profits by wagering hundreds of millions of dollars on the proposition that Americans across the country would end up being thrown out of their homes after they found themselves unable to make their mortgage payments.

What these men did was not "socially useless," to quote the chairman of the UK's Financial Services Authority, Lord Turner. It was worse than that: it was actively harmful, since they provided the fuel which kept the subprime mortgage furnace burning even when the country was running out of new junk mortgages to write. In most financial markets, bearish bets act as a dampener; in this one, they were a necessary part of the subprime-mortgage machine, and a Deutsche Bank mortgage trader named Greg Lippmann ended up making billions of dollars for his employer – not to mention a $50 million bonus for himself – by aggressively going out and finding fund managers to put on the short bets needed to keep the market ticking. (This is the same Lippmann who, when accused of being a "Chicken Little" responded by saying "Fuck you, I'm short your house.")

But Lewis has a soft spot for these misfits – fund managers who stumbled into the bond market from careers making bets on stocks, who suffered ridicule and ostracism even from their own investors before their bets paid off, and who he has now chosen to immortalize in print as the few clear-eyed men in a world of deluded bankers and investors.

At the same time, Lewis aims both barrels at the ratings agencies, happily quoting someone describing the staff there as "basically like brain-dead." He also sets up a hapless fund manager named Wing Chau as a major villain for taking the long side of the bet and making millions of dollars by doing so, despite being spectacularly wrong.

The result is a rollicking narrative: a tale of beleaguered little guys betting against monster banks and fund managers, and, in the end, winning. (Lewis barely mentions the biggest and most famous of the shorts, John Paulson and Andrew Lahde, perhaps because they were too rich and successful to begin with.)

Amazingly, despite the fact that the book is so one-sided, it also functions as a peerless guide to exactly what went so very wrong in the credit markets generally, and the mortgage markets in particular, over the course of the last decade. It's not easy to explain synthetic subprime-backed collateralized debt obligations, but Lewis does an excellent job on both the micro level – what these thing are, and how they worked – and the macro level – how the market in such exotica helped to destabilize the entire financial system.

Most impressively, Lewis has backed up his story with an enormous amount of old-fashioned reporting, spending a lot of time with the characters in his book and their families, as well as getting the important complex financial details correct. (Not everybody will understand the grittiest of the details, of course: that's inevitable. But everybody will be gripped by the book's narrative, all the same.) The Portfolio story on which this book is based was a great tale which was sometimes a bit fuzzy on the finance; the book is an even greater tale with the facts nailed down.

The result is that rarest of beasts in a world drowning in financial-crisis books: a new book which actually breaks news. For instance, Lewis uncovers what could possibly be the single greatest trade that any Wall Street banker ever made: in December 2006 and January 2007, Deutsche's Greg Lippmann paid an insurance premium of 0.28 percentage points to take out insurance on $4 billion of triple-A-rated bonds from Morgan Stanley's Howie Hubler. Less than a year later, that $11 million bet paid off to the tune of a whopping $3.7 billion. I'll save you the math: that's an annual return of more than 33,000 %.

There's lots more where that came from: this is an assiduously-reported and beautifully-written book. There aren't many reasons to be happy about the global financial crisis, but here's one: that it brought Michael Lewis back to his roots, to produce what is probably the single best piece of financial journalism ever written.

On Youtube (2011-04-25 19:40)

Usually, I am looking at videogames videos and video-game collections. Mine doesn't measure up.
I'd probably pirate these CD/DVD games via SNESoRAMA links to rapidshare, megaupload like always. I cannot find Wisconsin hits interesting enough. The point is too look at people's rooms and how much they massacre your budget.
I used to hang baseball cards on my wall with scotch tape. It looked stupid within a year.
I updated my best trance cds.

Neo-Conservatism (2011-04-27 10:32)

President Bush's neo-conservative politics mixed with communitarian?

Bush could be a neo-conservative politician experimenting with communitarianism. if Pres. Bush experimented with it, I still would listen to all the right-wingers.

I know the difference between neo-conservative and communitarism after reading neo-con Weekly Standard articles.

Top 10 Hunting Rifles (2011-04-30 14:38)

1.) Winchester Model 70

Doctor Olmsted hit this nail. The Win. M70 it is. I'd like to give the nod to the Mauser 98, but it was too long a military configuration. Since Winchester had the smarts to sporterize it in an elegant, durable, accurate package, here's your prize. Kimber may overtake the M70 with its sleeker 84M and 8400s, but for now, it's Winchester.

2.) Remington Model 700

I tried, but couldn't justify bumping the Remington M700 from second. It's just too consistently effective and popular. Custom gunmakers love to tailor it into some of the most accurate rifles on the planet. Controlled feeding is the only reason Winchester gets top spot.

3.) Ruger No. 1

This rifle is too elegant, smooth, tough and durable to ignore. Once you get over the idea you need three follow-up shots, the No. 1 is an obvious winner. The Dakota Model 10 is more elegant, but not quite as durable.

4.) Winchester Model 52

This accurate, "real" bolt-action rimfire brought the .22 LR up to standards long established for quality centerfires, making it not only a plinking rifle but also a true practice rifle for anyone hunting with a bolt-action centerfire. The M52 set the stage for today's quality rimfires like Kimber, Cooper and New Ultra Light Arms.

5.) Winchester M94

Yes, you could argue for the Marlin, but Winchester started the lever-action repeater, and the 94 epitomizes the slab-sided efficiency of this action type. Trim, quick, open sights. In .30-30 it's an American classic, even though the Savage M99 is a more modern lever-action design.

6.) Ruger 10/22

This is not the classic all-steel hunting rifle, but you can't argue with success. The 10/22 can be dressed up or down, take a licking and keep on shooting quickly and darned accurately.

7.) Mauser 98

The only problem with the Mausers was inconsistent sporter designs. There was never one definitive manufacturer. Today firms like Empire Rifle are manufacturing Mauser-design actions that could propel this classic to the top.

8.) H &H Royal

We do need a double rifle in the group, considering how important it was/is in dangerous-game hunting, so the H &H gets the nod.

9.) New Ultra Light Arms Model 20

One of the most significant, lasting trends in hunting rifles is lighter weight, and the M20 set the standard. At roughly 5 pounds, these push-feed actions do everything the 8-pound standard rifles do with less sweat.

10.) Kentucky Long Rifle

The Hawken was a refinement of the early flintlocks that evolved in the original American wilderness as an awakening nation discovered its identity.

Can someone explain to me the difference between the Remington 700— —SPS and the ADL model— —the ADL is a couple of hundred dollars cheaper but is the SPS worth the difference??

My CAANOO review (2011-05-02 16:31)

I remember I wanted a Gamepark GP32 long time ago, but I waited for a device to get 128 MB of RAM in it so it wouldn't be limited. The GP2x Wiz only had 64 MB of RAM.

Download firmwares, emulators

The Caanoo is a solid build device with a light but tight feel. The buttons feel good when you press down on them and the analog stick feels good when in use but sometimes it feels weird to use when you are playing a game that was originally built for a D-Pad. it will take some time to get use to that in some cases but its not too bad.

The screen is a 3.5in 320x240 LCD with a resistive touch screen that makes the 16-bit style games look awesome while still giving off good quality when playing video and pictures. The touch screen is ok but not the greatest but a stylus is available to make the experience easier. I'm sure a resistive screen was chosen to lower cost and its not a main feature that will be used on the device so.

The 533mhz processor runs fine for most games but there can be slow down in some games that are heavy on the animation with a lot enemies on the screen. The dual stereo speaker are nice and loud and have good quality sound.

The build in Wi-Fi is used to allow you to play network enabled games against friends and upload your high scores. Storage is done via SD card which support up to 32GB of storage and you download content on the device via the proprietary USB cable included. Overall the hardware package is solid and gives you what you need to have a good experience.

Software

The UI of the Caanoo is a Linux based system that is an open platform so anyone can develop for it. The system allows you not only to play games you can also listen to music, view pictures, watch movies, use apps and read e-books via text. The Caanoo supports your most common file formats with music that supports MP3, WMA, WAV, OGG files and for video the device supports Xvid, Divx, Avi and MPEG 4. Pictures support is JPG, BMP, GIF, and PNG files. E-Books are supported via text only.

Games

CAANOO is practically paid for if I instead bought Earthbound and Final Fantasy III for Super NES.

The system comes with games preloaded such as Hellfire, Rhythmos, Snow Bros 2 and other games made by FunGP. The system also comes with an MAME emulator and Neo Geo emulator as well with preloaded games. Games do load up fast and play well although some games will run a bit slow when there is a lot of sprites on the screen but its nothing that you haven't experience before in the 16 bit era of gaming. Flash games are also supported as well.

update

I played SNES, Genesis, NES, Neo Geo on it. The emulators didn't read all the roms (roms damaged). The Caanoo runs Linux kernel 2.6.22. The 1.6 firmware has the same 2.6.22 kernel as 1.0.1. I always format my Linux OS, because it is hard to update. I saw a few kernel panics years ago.

Actually, I had problems with the 1.6 firmware and went back to 1.0.1. The stock 1.5 firmware was stable. Don't upgrade the firmware. If you do download firmware, just trust the fungp.com downloads area. I got my file from the unofficial site and failed. It took me 5 attempts, around 15-20 minutes to restore the firmware to 1.0.1.

I don't think I needed the 1.6 firmware. I didn't need AD-HOC support with a dongle.

The SD cards are formatted in FAT-16.

Grand slam! (2011-05-04 19:15)

^Bin Ladin

Grand slam! Decade long most wanted terrorist dead. I find it strange the Military were looking at Bin Ladin's million dollar compound in Pakistan for eight months, and picked an a day of Adolf Hitler's death to send in the Navy Seals. If Muslims are looking for a powerful military, look no further than the Navy Seal. The neo-marxist Frankfurt School hates fascism, National Socialism. That would explain the chosen dates.

Signs of dark matter from Minnesota mine (2011-05-06 08:23)

An experiment in Minnesota is the first to bolster a long-contested claim that detectors a continent away have found evidence of particles called WIMPs.

WIMPs are theorized particles considered to be leading candidates for dark matter, invisible material believed to make up more than 80 percent of the matter in the universe. In the Minnesota experiment, called COGENT, a hockey puck-sized chunk of germanium deep in a former iron mine attempts to record rare collisions with WIMPS.

In 15 months' worth of data, COGENT researchers detected a seasonal variation in the collision rate — higher in summer and lower in winter — similar to that seen for 13 years by a larger experiment, using different detectors, in Italy. Researchers with that experiment, DAMA/LIBRA, have attributed the results to the Earth's motion through a cloud of WIMPs (for weakly interacting massive particles) (SN: 5/10/08, p. 12). But many physicists have doubted that interpretation because, until now, no other experiment had found similar results.

Run Mac OS X inside Virtual box (2011-05-10 14:11)

Even if you're a Windows fan, you've probably thought about trying OS X. Maybe you'd like to test drive OS X before switching to a Mac or building a Hackintosh, or maybe you just want to run that one killer OS X app on your Windows machine. Whatever your reason, you can actually install and run OS X on any Intel-based Windows PC with a program called VirtualBox. Here's how.

Running OS X on your Windows desktop will take a bit of work, but it's pretty easy to do and the final product is awesome. To see what the whole setup will look like when you're done, check out the video above. Then, head to the instructions below to set it up for yourself. Thanks to MacBreaker for figuring out a lot of the original instructions!

What You'll Need

Before you start the installation process, you'll want to gather the following:

- A PC running 64-bit Windows with at least a dual-core processor and 4GB of RAM. Mountain Lion is 64-bit, and thus requires your copy of Windows to be 64-bit. If you're on a 32-bit version of Windows, you can install Snow Leopard instead. For more info, check out the difference between 32-bit and 64-bit operating systems. Note that your processor also needs to support VT-x. This list should help you find out whether yours does.
- VirtualBox and the VirtualBox Extension Pack: VirtualBox is our favorite virtualization tool for Windows, and it's completely free. VirtualBox doesn't officially support OS X, but it's actually very easy to get up and running. You should download the main program and the Extension Pack, which will give you support for USB devices.
- A hacked Mountain Lion disc image. Sadly, this won't work with a vanilla Mountain Lion installer, so you'll have to find a compatible hacked version. The hacking group Olarila has put a great installation ISO together, and you can find it by searching Google. If that doesn't sit well with you, you can head over to the Mac App Store and buy a legit copy for yourself, so you can at least pirate with a clear conscience.
- The HackBoot 1 and HackBoot 2 ISO files. These will help you boot into the installation.
- MultiBeast 4, which will help you get audio and other things working correctly after installation. You'll need to register for a free account over at Tonymacx86.com to download this. Make sure to download MultiBeast 4—it's labeled "Lion", but for our purposes the Lion version works better than the Mountain Lion version.

Step One: Install and Set Up VirtualBox

Before we install OS X, we'll need to set up VirtualBox so the OS X install disc can boot correctly. Here's what you need to do:

1. Start up VirtualBox and click the New button. Give your new virtual machine a name (I just called it "Mac OS X") and set the operating system to "Mac OS X Server (64-bit)".

2. Click Next and choose how much RAM to give your virtual machine. This depends on how much RAM is in your system—you can get away with 2GB, but if you have more, give it more. 4GB of RAM should be a good amount, though I gave mine 6GB since I had RAM to spare.

3. Click Next again, and choose "Create New Disk". Create your new disk in VDI format and with dynamically allocated storage. When you're done, VirtualBox should take you back to the main screen.
4. From here, right-click on your OS X machine in the left sidebar and click Settings. Go to the "System" section and uncheck "Enable EFI".
5. Click on the Storage section of the settings and click on the CD icon that says "Empty" under Storage Type. Then, click the CD icon next to the "CD/DVD Drive" dropdown, and select "Choose a Virtual CD/DVD Disk File". Choose the HackBoot 1 ISO and click OK.

Now, your machine is ready to boot for the first time. Make sure you have your Mountain Lion ISO ready to go and proceed to the next step.

Step Two: Install OS X in VirtualBox

The next step involves actually installing OS X to your new virtual machine. When you're ready, start up VirtualBox and follow these instructions:

1. Select your OS X machine in VirtualBox's left sidebar and click the Start button in the toolbar. It'll bring you to the HackBoot boot screen, with one icon in the middle labeled HackBoot.

2. Click on the CD icon at the bottom of the VirtualBox window and select "Choose a Virtual CD/DVD Disk File". This time, choose your hacked Mountain Lion ISO.
3. Go back to the HackBoot boot screen and press F5. It should reload the boot menu, this time showing you an "OS X Install DVD". Select this option and press Enter. After a moment, it'll take you to the OS X Installation screen.
4. After you choose your language and agree to the terms and conditions, you'll see that OS X doesn't detect any valid hard drives. To fix this problem, head up to the menu bar and go to Utilities > Disk Utility.
5. Click on your VirtualBox hard drive in the left sidebar, then click the Erase tab in Disk Utility's main pane. Give your drive a name (like "Macintosh HD") and click "Erase".

6. Once Disk Utility has finished formatting your drive, you should see it show up in the left sidebar. When you do, exit Disk Utility and continue with the OS X installation as normal.

The rest of the installation should be pretty self-explanatory, and should go off without a hitch. It took me about 20 minutes to install OS X. When it finishes, it'll take you to a black screen with white text. At this point, you can click the "X" in the upper-right corner of the window to power off the virtual machine.

Step Three: Smooth Out the Rough Edges

You're almost there! You've installed OS X, but you'll still need to tweak a few things to get audio and graphics working properly. Here's what you need to do.

Fix Audio with MultiBeast

1. Open up VirtualBox and right-click on your OS X virtual machine in the left sidebar. Head back to its Settings and go to the Storage section. Once again, click on the disc icon on the right side of the window, this time choosing the HackBoot 2 ISO.
2. Click the Start button to reboot your virtual machine. You should see the HackBoot menu again, this time with an option to boot into your new virtual machine. Select that option and press Enter.

3. After a minute, you should see the Mountain Lion desktop with the familiar galaxy wallpaper. Open up Safari, head to TonyMacx86.com, and download MultiBeast as described in the "What You'll Need" section.
4. Open up System Preferences > Security. Click the lock in the bottom left-hand corner, enter your password, and set the "Allow Applications" preference to "Anywhere". This will let you run apps from untrusted developers, which includes MultiBeast.
5. Launch MultiBeast. When you get to the Installation Type section, Choose the options pictured below:

Click continue and finish the MultiBeast installation. It may take a few minutes.

Your audio won't work just yet, but we have a few other things we need to do before we restart.

Boot OS X Without HackBoot

In order to boot OS X without the HackBoot CD, we'll need to delete a problematic kext. You can do this through the following steps:

1. Open up the Finder and select Go > Go to Folder from the menu bar. Type in /System/Library/Extensions and press Enter.
2. In this folder, find the AppleGraphicsControl.kext file and delete it. This will allow your virtual machine to boot up without the HackBoot ISO.

3. Click on the disc icon at the bottom of VirtualBox's window and uncheck the HackBoot 2 ISO, since you won't need it anymore.

Get Higher Resolution Virtual Machine

Lastly, you've probably noticed your VM is running at a pretty low resolution. That's totally lame, so we're going to make it run at the same resolution as our monitor with a few tweaks. To do so, just:

1. Head back to Go > Go to Folder and go to /Extra/. Double-click on the org.Chameleon.boot.plist file and add the following to the bottom of the file, above the

Graphics Mode
1920x1080x32

Save the file and close TextEdit. This allows OS X to start up with a higher resolution. Note that you can set whatever resolution you want; just replace 1920x1080 with the resolution you want.

If the resolution you picked is bigger than 1280x1024 and/or is widescreen, you'll need to do one last thing to get it working properly. Shut down your virtual machine and open Windows' Command Prompt. Type the following commands, hitting enter after each one:

cd "C:\Program Files\Oracle\VirtualBox" vboxmanage setextradata "MyVirtualMachine" "CustomVideoMode1" "1920x1080x32"

Replace the first line with the path to your VirtualBox program folder. In the second line, replace MyVirtualMachine with the name of your machine (in our case, "Mac OS X"), and 1920x1080x32 with the same resolution you added to your Chameleon plist.

Expand

When you're done, restart your OS X virtual machine and you should be greeted with a full-res desktop and working audio! You can now continue to install your favorite apps, set up your keyboard and mouse, and do anything else you like. You've got a fully working virtual Mac on your Windows desktop!

George Washington @ Minnesota History Center (2011-05-10 21:34)

Mirror of the official page

I saw George wax models, mount vermon, some guns from the French and Indian war, some native american attack on a fort in the french and indian war that he commanded after some General died. He was the British General's Secretary. He became President and died 3 yrs after the presidency.

The Minnesota History Center had LCD TVs showing chapters of a History Channel documentary of George Washington.

Part 1

Part 3

There was a nice World War II exhibit on display. My grandfather was in the Civilian Conservation Corps, because he was the youngest before becoming drafted into company that didn't see action. There was a CCC uniform. There was a fake movie theater, a drug shop, a 1945 Ford car, a marine carrier vehicle. an interactive B29 Stratofortress simulation that crash landed (with three paratrooper survivors) as a ride.

It was overall alright way to spend the day. I also spend the other half looking at King Tut jewelry, artifacts, busts, statues at the Science Museum of Minnesota. Saw some dinosaur remains.

Our family always likes this to explain the war.

My 600cc motorcycle (2011-05-13 17:05)

My used 2006 CBR600RR for $4280

It was the lowest CCs in this performance list behind Honda CBR1000RR (999cc), Triumph Daytona 675 (675cc), Ducati 1098S (1099cc), and Aprilia RSV1000 (1000cc).

I was going to buy an used Aprilia RSV1000, but was worried about cost of new parts.

Maybe some other novice whose reading this should go out and buy an Aprilia RSV1000. I probably fucked up on my Honda purchase due not putting faith into this brilliant list. Save yourself :)

The Aprilia RSV1000 was seen in Transformers: Revenge of the Fallen

Now i can start searching for girlfriends.

I think Mitt Romney is unstoppable (2011-05-19 12:55)

Newt Gingrich would've been the perfect presidential candidate if he didn't make that argument ridiculing Republican Paul Ryan. He was going to build new nuclear power plants, drill at home, make Medicare work, fix the economy with a national sales tax, undo the IRS tax code and create a new national sales tax same on everything.

Mitt Romney is seen as the best CEO in the Republican Party, formerly Donald Trump's main feature. Mitt Romney knows how to get the private sector from getting started if not for Romneycare (a prototype for Obamacare). Newt didn't have Romneycare. The reason why Newt is second place after Mike Huckabee and Donald Trump dropped out is Mitt Romney can raise 50 million dollars in one fundraiser.

Newt Gingrich is going to win the debate against Michelle Bachman who is inexperienced. Michelle isn't in the same league as Newt Gingrich. There is now something going on with Newt Gingrich's wife owing a lot of money to Tiffani's Company (she worked there) and Newt cannot answer. Newt's sliding down the poll numbers.

Lets see if I'm right and Romney is unstoppable from now and the September Republican debate. I originally picked Newt Gingrich, because Romneycare sounded like deja-vu of the Obama medicare bill.

I think there should be a huge story evolving around Hillary Clinton's involvement with the Maoist Black Panther Party. She was a firewoman for the Black Panther Party during her early political career. Bill Clinton studied Saul Alinsky. That's why Attorney General Eric Holder cannot prosecute the Black Panther Party scaring ppl off during the 2008 election case.

Right now, this early in the race, Ron Paul is the safest candidate. It's getting tricky when the only billionaire CEO Donald Trump goes back into the race.

The Zelda demo re-imagined the Temple of Time from Twilight Princess and Link's battle with Armogohma, a ghastly, colossal spider boss monster. Not playable, but interactive, I watched as Link stepped onto a polished marble floor, his reflection sharply visible as light from stained glass windows danced on its surface. The fairy Navi appeared as a softly glowing orb of light. We could see the stitching in Link's tunic, the leatherwork of his boots and sheath in detail. Smoke pouring from flaming braziers was lit with a soft orange glow.

Needle Blood Draws optional? (2011-05-21 14:43)

Some of the 2007 awards have gone to inventions that seem just short of miraculous and the Electro Needle Biomedical Sensor Array comes close. This is a small patch device with electro-chemically treated probes. When the patch is applied to the skin, it has the ability to ascertain chemical readings present in a patient's blood without having to withdraw any blood. Thus, readings such as "carbohydrates, electrolytes, lipids, enzymes, toxins, proteins, viruses, and bacteria can be detected in a patient's blood or interstitial cellular fluid." No more searching for "good" veins? You mean no more vials and vials and vials taken? One great step for medicine; 15 great steps for the sick folks in the emergency room.

I don't know, I kind of like shots. Now we're going to have to wait until 2020 before hospitals get around to converting needles to Electro Needle Biomedical Sensor Array. Needles obviously will be around in 2111. I'm a man and can take some needles.

I found it interesting that ppl scoring high SAT scores listen to that short lived Counting Crows. I listen to their albums and they get 80 % out of 100 on reviews

This legend was compiled by Wikipedia editors listing their SAT score and what music . I got 60 Radio head music files, 5 albums on my PC that I barely listen too.

Best Reactor Designs (2011-05-24 06:49)

1. Supercritical-water-cooled reactor (SCWR) is a concept that uses supercritical water as the working fluid. SCWRs are basically light water reactors (LWR) operating at higher pressure and temperatures with a direct, once-through cycle. As most commonly envisioned, it would operate on a direct cycle, much like a Boiling Water Reactor (BWR), but since it uses supercritical water (not to be confused with critical mass) as the working fluid, would have only one phase present, like the Pressurized Water Reactor (PWR). It could operate at much higher temperatures than both current PWRs and BWRs.
2. lead-cooled fast reactor features a fast-neutron-spectrum lead or lead/bismuth eutectic (LBE) liquid-metal-cooled reactor with a closed fuel cycle. Options include a range of plant ratings, including a "battery" of 50 to 150 MW of electricity that features a very long refueling interval, a modular system rated at 300 to 400 MW, and a large monolithic plant option at 1,200 MW.
3. very high temperature reactor concept uses a graphite-moderated core with a once-through uranium fuel cycle, using helium or molten salt as the coolant. This reactor design envisions an outlet temperature of 1,000 °C.
4. A molten salt reactor is a type of nuclear reactor where the coolant is a molten salt. There have been many designs put forward for this type of reactor and a few prototypes built. The early concepts and many current ones rely on nuclear fuel dissolved in the molten fluoride salt as uranium tetrafluoride (UF₄) or thorium tetrafluoride (ThF₄), the fluid would reach criticality by flowing into a graphite core which would also serve as the moderator. Many current concepts rely on fuel that is dispersed in a graphite matrix with the molten salt providing low pressure, high temperature cooling.
5. Lead-cooled fast reactor (LFR) - The lead-cooled fast reactor features a fast-neutron-spectrum lead or lead/bismuth eutectic (LBE) liquid-metal-cooled reactor with a closed fuel cycle. Options include a range of plant ratings, including a "battery" of 50 to 150 MW of electricity that features a very long refueling interval, a modular system rated at 300 to 400 MW, and a large monolithic plant option at 1,200 MW.
6. B & W mPower is a proposed 125 MW modular, advanced light water nuclear reactor.. The reactor's power output is approximately 125 MWe, or approximately 10 % of a typical reactor. The reactor's design includes an underground containment facility that would store all of the spent fuel the reactor would use during its expected 60 year operating lifetime.
7. The AP1000 is a two-loop PWR planned to produce a net 1154 MWe. The design is less expensive to build than other Gen III plants partly because it uses existing technology. The design also decreases the number of components, including pipes, wires, and valves. Standardization and type-licensing should also help reduce the time and cost of construction.
8. The Canadian Advanced CANDU Reactor is a light-water-cooled reactor that incorporates features of both Pressurised heavy water reactors (PHWR) and Advanced Pressurized Water Reactors (APWR) technologies. It uses a similar design concept to the Steam Generating Heavy Water Reactor (SGHWR).

Can Am are peice of crap (2011-05-25 18:49)

I cannot tell you how much I laughed when a guy and his girlfriend under the Petite bourgeoisie category waved/smiled at me on their trike (Can Am Spyder). If you've ridden a snowmobile, you will be good at riding a Spyder. I was on a 1950s tricycle before I road my 21 speed Mt. Bike after I got balance and never looked back. Now I may be right when I say that Cam Ams are a piece of shit by review score. Your Can Am engine is Bombardier-made. What these Cam Am riders should own is a Campgana T-Rex. Nobody knows about these guys so their supply and demand are low. I've been seeing 2 1/2 3 or star Can Ams Spyder reviews and 5 star Campgana T-rexs. They don't even buy from the right company and yet they (wrongly) ride like their as cool as a Harley Davidson rider. Cam Am owners offend my intelligence. The T-Rex has a brilliant mainstream Kawasaki ZX-14 engine in it, very affordable. Can Ams have all of the dangers of a motorcycle with none of the fun. You're tossed from side to side on bumps and turns want to toss you off the bike. Can Am is expensive and shotty. You get none of the typical trike advantages (higher G-loading than either car or bike, can't fall off, some weather protection) and all of the disadvantages (heavier than a bike, less cargo/passenger room than a car, dodgy rear suspension).

Now a Kawasaki ZX-14 is always cooler than a Campgana T-rexs, because tricycles are stupid looking. Campgana is the right way to buy if you're into intelligence offending trikes.

ALT Linux beats RedHat or OpenSuse in Security tests (2011-05-26 07:40)

In this Cyber Cold War (2009 -) between NATO and Russia/China , experts think that the Russians know more about security than RedHat. ALT Linux is a XFCE edition with a firewall utility not unlike RedHat Firewall. Is that why we're losing the Cyber Cold War? Bias towards redhat?

ALT server edition has:

class of protection from unauthorized access to information — class 5

by the level of monitoring for non-declared features — level 4

I would theorize that Scientific Fermi Linux is the most secure Linux on Earth, yet is still using that ancient 2.6.18 linux kernel from 2006 (patched to 2.6.18-268-9)!

Top 10 beaches in US (2011-05-28 11:28)

1. Siesta Beach

Sarasota, Fla.

"Siesta Beach in Sarasota boasts that it has the finest and whitest sand in the world, and I cannot argue with this claim; the powdery sand is nearly pure quartz crystal," Leatherman said. "The beautiful blue-colored water is clean and clear, making it so inviting to bathers and swimmers. The beach is hundreds of yards wide, attracting volleyball players and beachcombers as well as those who just want to find their place in the sun."

2. Coronado Beach

San Diego, Calif.

"Coronado Beach is the toast of Southern California; it is a veritable oasis by the sea, measuring hundreds of yards wide," Leatherman said. "With its lush subtropical vegetation, unique Mediterranean climate, and fine sparkling sand, beach-goers flock to this beach for great ship watching and the summer's mild surf."

3. Kahanamoku Beach

Waikiki, Oahu, Hawaii

"This beach was named in the honor of Duke Paoa Kahanamoku who was a gold medal Olympic swimmer and credited with introducing surfing to the outside world," Leatherman said. "Kahanamoku Beach is bounded by the Ala Wai small boat harbor and the Hilton Hawaiian Village catamaran pier. A shallow offshore reef protects this beach from the big waves, making it a great swimming area for families with children."

4. Main Beach

East Hampton, N.Y.

"Main Beach provides the perfect blend of nature and built environment," Leatherman said. "Wealthy summertime residents flock here to the beaches protected by a conservation easement, dating back over 300 years. Main Beach is a great place for star-spotting, since many actors and actresses frequently visit this beach for its idyllic setting in a small village."

5. Cape Hatteras

Outer Banks of North Carolina

"Bulging far offshore of the mainland coast as a barrier island, Cape Hatteras was the first National Seashore," Leatherman said. "Providing some of the best board surfing along the East Coast, as well as the most famous lighthouse in the United States, Cape Hatteras attracts beachgoers to its historic fishing villages. Nature lovers adore the excellent beachcombing and superb fishing."

6. St. George Island State Park

Florida panhandle

"The Florida panhandle beaches are back as oil from the BP spill has vanished, and the sand is squeaky clean," Leatherman said. "The brilliant white sands and clear waters of St. George Island were fortunately not even impacted last summer. Stingrays are sometimes resting in the shallow waters so shuffle your feet when entering. Birding and fishing are very popular activities here."

7. Beachwalker Park

Kiawah Island, S.C.

"South of Charleston, Beachwalker Park is the public beach located on the southern end of Kiawah Island," Leatherman said. "Tennis and golf are featured here, as well as interpretative tours of the fauna and flora of the island. This is certainly a nature-lovers coast, so visitors should pack their canoes and kayaks to paddle through the tidal inlets or walk down to St. Sam's Inlet to see thousands of birds."

INside Boston.com

8. Coast Guard Beach

Cape Cod, Mass.

The Eastham beach fell one spot from last year's rankings. "Coast Guard Beach, accessible by bicycle or via shuttle bus from the Salt Pond Visitor's Center, was formed where a sand spit attached to the eroding glacial cliffs," Leatherman said. "The sand is fairly coarse, so the beach slopes steeply into the water. The picturesque old Coast Guard station still sits atop the glacial bluffs, allowing for a spectacular view down upon the Nauset Spit barrier system and bay. During the summer, beach-goers take quick, refreshing dips in the ocean, as water temperatures only reach 60-70 degrees."

9. Waimanalo Bay

Oahu, Hawaii

"This park has ample parking, restrooms, outdoor showers, and a good beach for swimming," Leatherman said. "While not as stunning as some other Hawaiian beaches, it is a safe beach because big waves and dangerous currents are rare and lifeguards are present. Hawaiians who live on Oahu frequent this beach."

10. Cape Florida State Park

Key Biscayne, Fla.

"Cape Florida State Park, located at the south tip of Key Biscayne, provides clear, emerald-colored waters and gentle surf," Leatherman said. "This fine, white coral sand beach is great for swimming, as waves are knocked down by a large sand shoal offshore. In addition, the Cape Florida Lighthouse allows for a breath-taking view of this beautiful beach."

Galactic Cold War (2011-06-04 09:04)

Since Neil Armstrong discovered a moon base and mining operation during the Apollo 11 mission, Earth has been building Battlestars with non-terrestrial US Navy personnel on board. The UFOs on the moon were watching the Apollo 11 mission taking place.

Neil " These "Babies" are huge, Sir! Enormous! OH MY GOD! You wouldn't believe it! I'm telling you there are other spacecraft out there, Lined up on the far side of the crater edge! They're on the Moon watching us! "

A ship similar to Battlestar Galatica orbiting the moon as we speak.

Are the TAW-50s our space superiority fighter? TAW-50 is armed with its own Kill Laser system, which can track and immolate SAM (Surface-to-Air missiles), STTA (Surface-To-Trans-Atmosphere missiles), ATA (Air-To-Air missiles), and ATTA (Air-To-Trans-Air missiles). The TAW-50 has a crew of four. Nevertheless, the TAW-50 flies so fast that it requires computers to fly it. These were developed by American Computer Company, who derived them from its Valkyrie XB/9000 AI. The TAW-50's power supply is provided by a small nuclear power generator that the contractor said is "Normal-Inert".

The contractor said that the spaceplane uses electromagnetoferrimetric power generation by the immersion of pellets in heavy water (deuterium) and specially-designed coil superconductive magnets, which yield enormous amounts of free electrons when placed in an immersion which has been triggered into an oscillating field state flux.

The TAW-50 utilizes electrogravitics to maintain its own artificial gravity while in weightless space, as well as to nullify the vehicle's mass during operations.

It can hide in orbit many hundreds of miles into space, orbiting at times at 22,000 mph. Then, without warning, it can dive straight down through the atmosphere at over 38,000 miles per hour on an 80-degree attack vector, reverse direction within 150 feet of the ground with very little loss of motion and without a glide turn, and almost instantly go vertically straight up at over 38,000 mph until long after it leaves the atmosphere and resumes orbiting in space.

Military astronauts are trained at the Secret Air Force Academy, located in the hills west of the official Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, CO.

Obama is non-Denominational? (2011-06-05 08:59)

Archbishop Chrysostomos of Etna picked out that Barack Obama's political correctness is non-denominational for a Protestant. He adds that close encounters of the third kind are unholy. Archbishop Chrysostomos of Etna synod departed from Orthodox Church of Greece. The synod had lots of experience involving the Bolshevik's political correctness when Holy Synod in Resistance synod had been in full communion with the Russian Orthodox Church Outside Russia.

Alien abductions were "life in terms of cycles of birth and death, identifying with other beings and entities, the cessation of personhood, and looking to the "cosmos" for a "home"—these are all undefined, vague, and eclectic things that violate the precise, Christocentric teachings of Christianity and the life of discipline and obedience that spiritual transformation entails. He reported that after his initial impression that the aliens were "sinister" or "malicious".

Gnutella searching (2011-06-05 13:26)

Some of the electronica CDs I download aren't available on rapidshare so I need that Gnutella network. Limewire/Wireshare (successor) are dead, because of a court case. Frostwire no longer has Gnutella after version 4. That leaves bearshare and Shareaza. Gnutella is sometimes good, because not all the mp3s are 360 kbps or you could easily find the file without rapidshare, hotfile, megaupload. eMule is always hassle and never successfully downloaded anything.

I like the Kawasaki ZX-10R (2011-06-06 11:37)

The Kawasaki ZX-10R has a state-of-the-art traction-control system that comes standard. There is no TC-equipped sportbike less expensive than the ZX-10R. Fully fueled, this puts the new ZX-10R in a tie with the 2010 CBR1000RR.

As the tire wore in a predictable manner, TC level 2 allowed enough movement from the rear end that I was able to confidently ride through the powerslides and spins while in Full power mode. Not once during my ride did it cut in abruptly and cause the bike to stumble and sputter, even when in level 3. The system's activation is notably seamless and not nearly as assertive as Ducati's DTC.

Review

No doubt this new ZX-10R is more fun than my Honda CBR600, yet how much fun can I have at 70 MPH freeway speeds? Slim at best? The Honda engine is just as top-notch quality, though more dated. The carsoup selection at the time didn't give affordable price points for 09s, 10s, and 11s for any of used 600cc or 1000cc bike last month.

Android 3.1 or Asus Eee PC (2011-06-08 04:21)

Android 2.3 had a huge security hole inside its code that allow hackers to get in it. At least Android 3.1 runs 2.6.36 with more security. The standard in stability is EXT4 and I will make sure I get one with it.

That means I have to wait until something on Ebay appears within my sub- $130 price range with Android 3.1 in it. Android 3.1 devices have 512 MB of RAM and 1 GHz RISC CPUS in them! First thing is I'm getting antivirus for it. AndFire is a must-have and I need enough RAM.

I have a Archos 7 running Android 1.6, and I use it for JPEG and Gmail. The facebook users aren't impressed I bought it. This isn't pushing their culture, a lot of normal people have Android tags on their wall this month.

I wonder why Android is popular even with the security risks. I could get Internet and office suites with Asus Eee

PC 701SD Netbooks. I would be immune to made-for-Android malware out to steal my microblogging password (facebook, twitter). I know after a few years on the same kernel, there would be Ubuntu Netbook edition. Bottom line, screw Android tags on walls. I'm getting a Asus Eee PC someday.

I drop a leave a response when I appreciate a article on a blog or if I have something to contribute to the discussion. It is a result of the sincerness displayed in the post I looked at. And on this article "Android 3.1 or Asus Eee PC". I was excited enough to post a thought ;) I actually do have 2 questions for you if you usually do not mind. Could it be only me or does it seem like some of these comments look like they are coming from brain dead folks? :-P And, if you are posting at other online social sites, I'd like to keep up with everything fresh you have to post. Would you make a list all of all your community sites like your Facebook page, twitter feed, or linkedin profile?

no daily nutritional supplementation is heathier (2011-06-08 08:05)

Writing in the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA), Dr. Starfield has documented the tragedy of the traditional medical paradigm in the following statistics:

Deaths Per Year -

106,000 Negative effects of drugs

80,000 Infections in hospitals

45,000 Other errors in hospitals

12,000 Unnecessary surgery

7,000 Medication errors in hospitals

Total deaths per year from iatrogenic* causes 250,000.

The term iatrogenic is defined as : induced by a physician or surgeon, or by medical treatment or diagnostic procedures

The proven, scientifically validated, plan to stay healthy is very simple.· Exercise daily! As little as 30 minutes a day will significantly protect your good health· Eat sensibly and be aware that good choices (salad rather than ice cream) will pay good health dividends· Use high quality nutritional supplementation (see study below)

Finally a "landmark" (20 year) nutritional study has been done that compares the dietary supplement usage patterns, health, and nutritional status of:

Long-term multiple dietary supplement users, (persons who consume several high quality, organically sourced, cold processed nutritional supplements, Shaklee) to persons who use multivitamin/mineral vitamins (products sold at the grocery store, drug store and usually taken as one capsule a day) to non-users of nutritional supplements

Probably the most striking result of the study is that person who used no nutritional supplementation at all were actually healthier than the person who used the one capsule a day products.

Wii U Impressions (2011-06-10 13:50)

For anyone who suspected otherwise after seeing the Nintendo Wii U for the first time – and to be fair, in photos they do look a little too high up on the unit – trust me when I say that it wouldn't be the same if they weren't exactly where they currently are. At first glance they look as if they're going to be uneasy fit for the upcoming slew of new 'hardcore' software that Nintendo's top dogs have been barking about, but once it's in your hands, the concern vanishes into thin air.

One player is Mario, and they controls the inimitable Italian plumber around a map by using the Wii U tablet; whilst four other players use sideways-on Wiimotes in order to pursue him. The benefit of having the Wii U tablet is that you can always see where everyone is on the map, and can avoid them accordingly. Every thirty seconds or so you're also given the chance to collect a power star that sits (and respawns) in the middle of each level, and gives you a speed boost and brief period of invincibility; a risky manoeuvre that's only advisable when things get really dicey.

The press conferences are over, though the gaming news still has another day to go. But for me E3 this year represented something else: a chance to learn. A lot of people felt that I took on an apologist stance when I gave Microsoft a C+, but that simply wasn't the case. I've been dealing with my marketing courses and I've been trying my best to approach these conferences all with that core marketing concept in my mind because that's exactly what E3 is. How well do these guys market themselves? And a lot of people felt content to say that Microsoft failed E3 this year, but at the time of their conference that simply wasn't the case. They did an average job of it. But people on here don't care about that, they want their games and so I understand the nature of saying Microsoft failed in that regard, but they showed themselves decently. At the time at least.

A lot of people felt that Sony did really well, but how could anyone possibly say that when they, word for word, did exactly what Microsoft did? Microsoft showed off Gears of War 3, then they went and showed off Kinect functionality for everything else they had at their conference. Sony showed off Uncharted 3, then they went and showed off Move functionality for everything else they had at their conference until they got to showing off the PS Vita. And while the Vita tech certainly looks cool and has some neat functionality and at a decent price, they also failed to show how it could be relevant in this market. They basically showed a mini-PS3 and as I and many, many others have expressed already, what's the point?

Honestly, did anyone else see a tangible difference between the two Uncharted games that were shown at Sony's conference? Nope. So what's the point of the PS Vita version, Golden Abyss, if it just wants to be the same thing as the console versions?

Anyway, it was in keeping with my marketing courses and lectures that I approached each conference, but it was clear that both Sony and Microsoft are stuck playing catch up with Nintendo. They're trying to show that they're the dominant force with an idea that Nintendo pioneered in 2006. And no, I don't give a crap if there were motion controls before the Wii, the fact is, Nintendo marketed their system to a whole new audience and came away wildly successful. The problem became that people consistently bagged on them, saying that there's no 3rd party support (a lie, of course) the tech is underpowered, the controls are a gimmick (another lie) and that Nintendo don't release anything other than their established library of games (though tell me how many new IPs Sony and Microsoft revealed, and no, using the excuse that Sony and MS's IPs aren't as old as Nintendo's IPs is not a valid excuse since neither company has been in the gaming business for as long as Nintendo).

There come various concepts that a company needs to go after for consumer attention and Nintendo addressed all of them with the Wii U (and the Wii back in 2006). It's preemptive, no one else has attempted it before. The one thing that I remain unsure of is how affordable it will be since a price was not mentioned, but they certainly hit that mark with the Wii in 2006, nor do I know if it will be profitable, but again, they hit that mark in 2006 with the Wii. But it's communicable, it's distinctive and above all else it is both important and superior. stripesonfire is currently the only other user I can see sharing the same sentiments as me and quite frankly it's because stripes is one of the most intelligent people around on this site.

Sony and Microsoft are both stuck in 2006 and in 2006 they were stuck in 2000. There was of course Sony's stupid marketing myopia fiasco with the PS3's reveal and later launch where they chose to focus on the product rather than the consumer, but Sony have righted their wrongs and did a 180. That is until they released move and reverted 90 degrees back the way they came. As far as Microsoft? Those retards have been stuck in a perpetual circle ever since they launched the NXE. Let me be blunt, I've made it clear many times before, but I am not purchasing an Xbox after the 360. I've been paying attention to Sony in the hopes that they would somehow do something to convince me that they can be the replacement but they're stuck trying to mimic the Wii.

Nintendo saved the industry once from collapsing due to Atari. I want you all to know that even if many of you aren't aware, they just preemptively saved gaming again, this time from the hapless hands of Microsoft and Sony. I said that MS and Sony marketed themselves as average and had Nintendo done the same we'd have been in the same boat as them remaining average. As it stands, Microsoft and Sony both failed. Nintendo was the only success at E3. I don't want to hear any apologist nonsense of what you enjoyed due to brand loyalty that you don't want to mention. Since 2001 I had been an Xbox kid singing the praises of Halo and I'm tired of Microsoft, but seeing Sony trying to do the same thing as opposed to showing off their excellent line-up put us all in a sorry state. Many argued with me that I was wrong to say Sony gets a C+, and now I admit it, I was wrong. I should have given them and Microsoft F grades. There was no way to know what was coming from Nintendo.

People act like Nintendo wasn't impressive this year, but the Nile is more than just a river that runs through Egypt. Nintendo preemptively saved this industry from an eventual collapse. Motion controls forced into everything that don't need them. Voice recognition in games that don't need them. Games losing their freedom to put me on rails so I can play without my hands. These ideas, these concepts, these were the signs of bad times. But I said something that I regret saying. I said that this would become an inevitable part of the future of gaming and that we had to deal with it and just play what was released with our preferred method of play. And then Nintendo came on the stage. They rendered both Kinect and Move as obsolete. They shut-up both Microsoft and Sony. They just made gaming a level playing field again and that was what was so unexpected.

When it all came down the line, Nintendo saved gaming over two decades ago from collapsing. They broadened the market in 2006 to an untapped and unserved audience and now they are ready to unite all audiences, and if they succeed they will dominate the market in a bigger way than they ever did with Wii. No you may not care for Nintendo, and that's fine. What you need to care about is that next year, Microsoft and Sony are going to walk on stage with their heads out of their asses. That Microsoft and Sony are going to be fully aware that suddenly Nintendo holds all the momentum again. That suddenly they are going to announce and show games you care for because Nintendo didn't rely on a gimmick add-on. Because Nintendo built their vision from the ground up in 2006 and are doing so again for 2012. Because Nintendo just rocked all the third party support, with full Wii remote support so that owners of the Wii won't waste a damn thing. All accessories and games are backwards compatible. And suddenly households like mine with an Xbox and a Wii, suddenly only need Nintendo's system. Because they have all the games the others have and they have Nintendo's innovative ideas to make something everyone can enjoy.

It's still too soon to say whether or not the Wii U will be the runaway hit that the Wii was, but I'll tell you this much, the ball is in Nintendo's court and Kinect and Move both just died. Oh, they'll stick around on life-support. Kinect doesn't let us play games the way we want to but the way Microsoft wants us to. Be unimpressed with Nintendo. Tell me Sony was a success. It just means you have no idea what you're saying. Nintendo did something no one expected them to do: bring everyone back to the same level. They just balanced everything and whether you enjoy Xbox, PS or Wii, it doesn't matter anymore, because Nintendo just bounced Kinect and Move out of the picture. The beginning of the end is here in a good way.

Here's a potential new arrival: "Kirov" where the formidable Russian battlecruiser experiences a "Final Countdown" like accident and shifts in time to 1941 where she is soon discovered by a Royal Navy carrier task force and presumed to be a new German raider. Kirov runs the Denmark Strait and squares off against the whole Royal Navy and US Atlantic Fleet.

Asking for Radeon HD 7970 or Radeon HD 6990 for Christmas (2011-06-12 01:12)

I believe I have 850 watt PSU that can handle a XFX Radeon HD 6990 4 GB GPU or a XFX Radeon HD 7970 (4 GB?) inside the Core i7 980x 2010 PC. Then I can put the Radeon HD 5970 that was originally in the Core 2 Quad 9550, back inside it. I expect the Radeon HD 7970 to have a faster frames per second, but it really comes down to $450 price point by mid-December.

The point of this is to own two DirectX 11 GPUs. The Playstation Vita would make an okay Birthday present. I would buy some games for it (Final Fantasy, mainly RPGs).

I have 60 trance albums, yet I haven't burnt them yet. I was too much of a gamer or TV watcher. Now I spent the last three days doing just that. I have at least that much old trance. I have 300 albums of various rock genres. 50 albums of country. 25 albums of R &B. 25 albums of rap.

Hometown (2011-06-15 13:38)

I mostly go downtown to get my computer built at PC Garage. I can add HDDs, RAM, GPUs myself. I outsmart viruses or BSOD or the Win7 equivalent, because openSUSE. I buy Carbones Pizza downtown, yet theirs is twice as expensive as same size pizza at the County Market (which tastes just as good Carbones Pizza). I usually don't eat at a restaurant, usually make cheaper food @ home.

Nice invention (2011-06-15 22:11)

The new heart turbine uses turbines to eliminate both heartbeat and pulse while quietly and efficiently keeping you alive. Instead of a heart beat, you get a faint humming sound. The implantable device can function as a mini hydro-electric generator, using your blood to generate endless supply of power.

The heart produces around 1 or 1.5 watts of hydraulic power, and it takes only one milliwatt to spin the turbine.

RIP Elementry Cursive (2011-06-19 15:35)

I've read elementary schools are not teaching cursive in Indiana. Indiana is the first school that marked classes optional. They all expect the keyboard to replace handwriting entirely with the exception of your check cursive. I guess adults can eye cursive and duplicate it without the public school system teaching it?

First encounter with Linux Mint yesterday (2011-06-21 01:30)

I have this PC that rejects OpenSuse 11.4, but accepts Ubuntu 10.10. Ubuntu 10.10 runs very stable. It reads my WiFi doogle. Linux Mint is good, because it is based on Ubuntu and packaged with much more software. It suppose it comes with the whole slot of Gnome games. I really needed the games installed. I could have done music with Winamp and VLC with the aid of Crossover Linux 9.1 (installed). One of the most advanced security systems from OpenSuse, AppArmor, made it to Mint so I can use it. Linux Mint is running 2.6.38.

Mother wanted to try more than 4 games in Ubuntu so upgraded to Linux Mint on her PC. She usually plays Klondike, Sudoku, Mahjongg and TextTwist 2. She hates Quadrapassel).

In other events, I find playing Super Mario Galaxy very difficult. I was caught by surprise that it was as hardcore. I kept dieing with the second solar system. Times have gotten hardcore since Super Mario Sunshine (played in 2k2).

The average gamer is 37 yrs old! (2011-06-21 09:48)

I must be in a good position here being 27 and the average gamer being 35-37. I've been on Gamespot and PS3forums since 2005. The ESA said that 45 percent of parents play games with their kids "at least weekly."

I had a N64 in 1997 and NES & Genesis roms & emulator since 1999. I was already in 11th grade when Xbox launched in November 2001. My cousins had a Nintendo Entertainment System and Sega Genesis in the mid-1990s and I went over there to play Sonic the Hedgehog 1 - 3D, Super Mario Bros., Super Mario Bros. 3, Contra, Spy Hunter. When I had a shrink I didn't like, I told him I'm on single player in 1997-1998, but he didn't give a damn! I'm unsure ESA data was available to the shrink in 1998, because the shrink knew what Nintendo was. It could have well been available. The shrink should have been a bitch. I must have brought this parental topic up at thrift stores dozen times.

Mine are way too old / techno-dumb to play any videogames with me. They only play Mario Kart. A brilliant way to show my life was worse My relationship with my parents were great, because there was nothing I could done about it. They just help me with editing essays and a place to stay.

I had to beat all the PS or PS2 RPGS by myself, maybe with the aid of a FAQ and Action Replay.

Hoping MtG phenomenon isn't "do or die" scenario (2011-06-28 05:09) hates that income sucking [drug addiction sucking] Magic the Gathering overthrown poker, uno, blackjack, Crabs, golf, solitaire, chess, checkers, Battleship, Connect 4, risk, monopoly, Mahjongg, Sudoku, Jenga, sports cards, Yahtzee, and most videogames .

MtG is expensive addiction. You must buy cards to win to break even like casinos. like ur hobby is gambling [for minors]. Nobody "wins", they're all poorer. With videogames, there is a boss, u beat boss, brag and that is inexpensive in comparison. Videogames are worth more than 90 % of sports cards.

Progressive churches rule Wisconsin = Democratic majority (2011-06-29 09:25)

The reason why St. Croix County is progressive is the county has a lot of progressive churches. Evangelical Lutheran Church in America owns the Wisconsin synod and thus Democratically elected Senate and State Assembly majority of elections. Union backed Evangelical churches. Also the Catholics are mostly liberal, unless you're a traditionalist catholic. United Methodist does progressive brainwashing too.

I have a Russian edition of your book, "Audacity of Hope". This is for you, Mr. President.

THE PRESIDENT: Oh, thank you so much.

THE PRESIDENT: Yes, we did, but these days now I have 15 Secret Service cars – (laughter) – and helicopters and so I miss sometimes being able to just walk around like an ordinary person. But it's a small sacrifice to make for the privilege.

Q Well, I tell you a secret, Mr. President. Maybe you don't know, but your wife, Michelle, may be more popular in Russia than you. You know why?

THE PRESIDENT: Why?

Q Because of the garden kitchen.

THE PRESIDENT: Oh.

Q Because kitchen gardens very popular in Russia, and when she started to make a kitchen garden around the White House she became very popular.

Q All Democrats inside.

THE PRESIDENT: You've got only Democrats. (Laughter.)

Nintendo relies on the US market (2011-06-30 21:06)

The reason why Nintendo's stock only fell 10 % in the wake of the Wii U's unveiling was because the US capitalist market isn't stable yet. I read somewhere that anime series are funded by American distributors; whereas, Japan cannot keep their anime studios from losing profit. Rumor is the average age of a gamer is 35 and they increasingly deal with marriage, raising children. There is more cinematic movie games that fail to stop the decline of videogamees. Maybe Wii U and 3DS can save the game industry with their Legend of Zelda, mario kart, super mario WIIU, Super Mario 3DS, Metroid Prime, Super Smash Bros., Pikman, Luigi's Mansion 2, and third party titles Metal Gear Solid and Final Fantasy.

Camping 2k11 (2011-07-04 14:11)

Did this week for three days and this week for three days. I hate that there is nothing special on TV, except the Eau Claire PBS broadcasts Vietnam news at 8PM (large Mung population), and the Bolshevik anchors constantly naught yes. Anchors showed that Obama and laughed at stupid president. I golfed and wanted to be home to watch what I wanted to watch. I didn't drive myself (to save mileage) and I don't subscribe to a 3G service. I think that amateur fireworks are stupid. Why do you always do it at dusk when it isn't even that dark yet? Dropping $500 bucks on Roman Candles, Sparklers Bottle Rockets and Firecrackers doesn't really make sense. Throw in the fact that all the good fireworks are illegal. Light up a stack of cash And throw it high, high into the night's sky.

Medical and Health Services Manager (2011-07-07 05:51)

I plan on getting a Medical and Health Services Manager Bachelor's degree completed in 4 1/2 years. Some of the courses include Financial Management of Healthcare Organizations, Healthcare Planning and Policy Management, and Advanced Healthcare Law and Ethics. The jobs are in this field. I'll get 40k less in healthcare manager than in Network administration BS engineer annually. It is easier to pass certification in health, sponsored hospitals supply internships. The information technology sector isn't hiring right now, and this scope of layoff wouldn't happen in the healthcare field. Medical and Health Services Manager is not as aggressive as the Administrative Services Manager or Sales Managers Bachelors. Sales managers end up in a mall.

The Pentagon was hacked into and a trillion dollars lost this month via Russia or China. I am not ready for that kind of rigorous certification studying and commitment to security, and hustling. I just know it is their bias towards Windows XP/7. The Pentagon and companies with Red Hat Enterprise Linux or Scientific Linux are secured.

Debian appears in The Social network (2011-07-08 03:56)

The only parts I picked up on is the college life on the Internet, and that I was never a college life student. I take all my classes online. When I was at campus, everybody went home. Google+, launched 8 days ago is aimed to replace Facebook, just as Facebook overtaken google at Alexa this year. In the movie, Debian made an appearance. It matches the kernel.

Facebook is a place that turns adults into teenage girls. Instead of making things, We're telling people how great Gossip Girl is. Would your grandfather go on Facebook? Probably not. I think we've become a country thirsting for attention—Facebook is basically Googling yourself for people who don't have enough hits to warrant it.

US almost ready to asteroid mine (2011-07-08 21:12)

Our country is ahead of the European Union in asteroid mining.

now of roughly 750 S-class asteroids with a diameter of at least 1 kilometer. Many of these pass as near to the Earth as our own moon — close enough to reach via spacecraft. As a typical asteroid is 10 percent metal

The US is already sending lander near asteroids to to experiments as we speak. Within 3 years, Lockheed Martin, Boeing would send space excavators to bring small amounts of asteroid to US. A small metallic asteroid with a diameter of 1.6 km (1 mile) contains more than $9 trillion US dollars worth of industrial and precious metals.

Strip Mining - Material is successively scraped off the surface in a process comparable to strip mining. There is strong evidence that many asteroids consist of rubble piles, making this approach feasible.

Shaft Mining - A mine can be dug into the asteroid, and the material extracted through the shaft. This requires precise knowledge to engineer accuracy of astro-location under the surface regolith and a transportation system to carry the desired ore to the processing facility.

Magnetic Rakes - Asteroids with a high metal content may be covered in loose grains that can be gathered by means of a magnet.

Heating - For volatile materials in extinct comets, heat can be used to melt and vaporize the matrix..

Spacecraft can pull materials and fly it to Earth orbit where it can be flown in smaller amounts.

I don't believe US should worry about effects on China (that's stupid), as they can always buy domestic. It is the United States that needs to profit from something, because we are bankrupted nation with our inflation/spending problems. Republican Pres. and republican congress expansion of the the private sector is the long-time solution.

B2 Spirit in mass production (2011-07-09 20:03)

The US Airforces next generation bomber is based on proven technologies is a B2 Spirit with mass produced parts. It is going to have the same engine as the F-35 Lightning II, the Pratt & Whitney F135 and General Electric/Rolls-Royce F13. It would scare off any Tupolev Tu-160. IT would have Fleet size of 175 aircraft. Range: 5,000+ nautical miles. The bomber is designed to use off-the-shelf propulsion. The bomber would have a weapons load of 14,000–28,000 lb (6,350–12,700 kg)

Vietnam War had a wonderful side-effect! (2011-07-09 21:40)

After 1975, Vietnam contracted with the Soviet Union for financial aid. Jimmy Carter, as liberal and gullible, hadn't send aid to Vietnam. Vietnam couldn't get aid from China. Vietnam and the War with Afghanistan was the nail in the copen for the Soviet Union. I wonder if this scenario is compatible with modern day US and China is true. I read somewhere that Obama is turning US state capitalist.

It was liberal bias in the media that presented the withdrawal.

Wii U games list (2011-07-12 15:43)

This isn't a great Wii U selection. I'm thinking that the Super Mario platformer title is "Super Mario 3D World" based off Super Mario 64. Then the developers make a Paper Mario, and a Super Mario Galaxy 3 for Wii U. I would love to see some Final Fantasy remakes for Wii U like Final Fantasy VIII, X and XII, Chrono Cross and that's pretty much all Square-Enix's flagship titles which are ones worth replaying/re-paying. Sega could make Sega GT Wii U, Sonic Adventure 3 Virtua Fighter 6, and Resonance of Fate 2. Konami could remake Metal Gear Solid 2, 3, and 4 for Wii U. Capcom could develop Viewtiful Joe 3, 4, 5. Namco could port Tekken 7, Ridge Racer VIII and Soul Calibur V. As far as First Person Shooters go: The Orange Box, Crysis, Crysis 2, Unreal Tournament III, Far Cry II, Far Cry III, and Metroid Prime 4. Then adventure games Metroid Other M 2. RPGs include Mass Effect 1,2,3, Deus Ex Human Revolution, Dragon Age.

Oil Shale vs. High Speed Rail (2011-07-14 19:44)

I, personally pick Oil Shale over any HSR network. The high speed rail is an environmentalists wet dream so hell no to this. Passenger rail 150 years ago won't make it okay now-a-days.

Royal Dutch Shell have developed ways to tap the oil in situ, by drilling boreholes that are thousands of feet deep and feeding into them inch-thick cables that are heated using electrical resistance and that literally cook the surrounding rock. The kerogen liquefies and gradually pools around an extraction well, where the oil-like fluid can easily be pumped to the surface.

Meanwhile, construction companies can take the sand tar out of Utah with toe to heel air injection for American usage.

It is obvious that China is big on HSR, because they have 1.3+ billion and foreign nationals. That sounds like the only reason to be HSR biased. HSR is too expensive, has exaggerated benefits, is wasteful. You have to look at if HSR are five year plans of economic planning solely because China loves HSR to death.

There is something called the smart cars on 1000 cc engines or motorcycles if gas prices are too high.

Trying to speed up HSR construction is stupid. US will probably complete these HSR projects four decades in the future. Focus on all the vehicles and roads instead. I disbelieve if the government tells Americans to ride something, that they will listen unlike European citizens. Americans will still use their vehicles up to the point where it is entirely unaffordable, in which case they buy motorcycles.

SCAR-Light is a great M-16 replacement. The weapon also meets SOCOM's requirements for quick changes in the field. Within a few minutes, a SCAR-Light's 18-in.-long, precision-fire barrel can be replaced with a standard-length 14-in. barrel, or a shorter, 10-in. barrel for use in cramped, urban environments.

Camping 2k11 Episode II: (2011-07-18 14:22)

I saw Harry Potter Deadly Hollows Part 2 in a old Isle theater in Cumberland, WI. We went RVing near Spooner, WI passing Turtle Lake Casino. I stayed at the Scenic View RV park. The toilets and showers were real shitty so we smelled the four days. My family took meet from Louie's Finer Meats. I guess I was talking about A-10 Thunderbolt, early USN jets, M-16 machine gun, M1 Browning, cruise missiles on USS Wisconsin/USS Missouri battleship, Nimitz & Ford class supercarriers, China's larger supercarriers, PT boats with a pro-military Uncle of mine. He watches The Military Channel all the time. The temp was in the 90s so I didn't get to play miniature golf in Spooner over Legend of Zelda Phantom Hourglass. It wasn't a good vacation, because there weren't any decent looking girlfriend with me or 50 DirecTV channels. I had a California burger at the Prime Bar. The place looked like truck stop. My family is one of the most boring family there is with their conservative 1950s culture let me tell you! I ended up played Legend of Zelda: Phantom Hourglass for the four days. I had this choice of playing a stupid dice game.

I went inside Turtle Lake Casino and took a picture of a bunny for my silent visitors out there! I didn't stay long.

Obama's new Super Committee sounds like... (2011-07-19 09:30)

Obama's super committee to control the debt sounds a lot like GosPlan (economic planning) from the USSR. The council's decisions took the form of decrees and decisions to the Czars(The Pres's council of ministers/national committee).

Both the Republican Party and Democratic Party have central committees. The Union commissariats directed their designated branches of administration throughout the USSR directly or through subordinate agencies; the Union-republican commissariats directed their corresponding branches, based on registers of enterprises or institutions, through republican commissariats of the same name; and the republican commissariats were responsible only to the councils of people's commissars in their own republics.

One of the duties of Gosplan was creation of Five-Year Plans.

My Popular Blog Resurrected (2011-07-19 21:45)

In 2002 and 2005 I was a talented webpage designer. That was about the time, I tried integrating a window into my blogspot. My pages are on the wayback machine.

I liked to read videogame reviews when I was a hardcore gamer and some ancient Linux review I wrote. There was an about page, a gallery, a guest book, automated email. It was really ahead of its time. Nobody in my high school class made a personal webpage using HTML code with Dreamweaver. At least the viewer can see my creative webpages.

If I were to create a new webpage, would it just be more of the same. My geocities page was huge at 14 MB on FTP. I recieved no feedback! I try to get feedback on facebook without luck. I used Namo Webeditor 5.5 so often, updates became easy. At the time, I couldn't ask enough people to sign my guestbook. My webpage looks advanced compared to other geocities sites.

Here is my old modblog blog (my first blog)

There were people on my chatbox in 2003. I had 58,030 visitors on this blog. This is 20 times as many stats as most bloggers. My videogame list had 352 linkings, most on the entire modblog. This blog was a lot more successful than my myspace at the time. Very few myspace comments.

Most popular guns (2011-07-20 08:06)

Remington Model 870

This design makes it possible to shoot multiple projectiles, most often large pellets (buckshot) or small beads (birdshot), in a conical spray that can be devastating at close range. Shotguns can even fire less lethal rounds, such as rock salt or miniature tear gas grenades, to help control crowds. Bushmaster AR-15 Semiautomatic Rifle

The AR-15, which designates a rifle platform, not a specific manufacturer's model, remains a controversial weapon. Why? Many people mistakenly believe that "AR" stands for "assault rifle." In reality, the AR-15 is a semiautomatic rifle, which means it fires one round with each pull of the trigger. True assault rifles are fully automatic weapons, such as machine guns, that have been primarily restricted from civilian ownership since 1934.

The "AR" actually stands for "ArmaLite rifle," the company that invented the design in the 1950s. ArmaLite's chief engineer, Eugene Stoner, sought to develop a revolutionary weapon, one that was lighter and offered less recoil. His early efforts resulted in the AR-10, which weighed less than 7 pounds (3 kilograms). U.S. Army officials asked ArmaLite to downsize the AR-10 in 1956, leading to the AR-15. Smith & Wesson Model 10 Revolver

They have a cylinder containing multiple chambers, each of which holds a round. When the trigger is pulled, the cylinder rotates and a new chamber lines up with the barrel. In single-action varieties, the user must manually cock the hammer before firing. In double-action varieties, the user pulls the trigger to rotate the cylinder and draw the hammer back to a cocked position. Model 10 fires .38-caliber rounds through a 4-inch barrel. Beretta M9

The M9 is a short recoil, semi-automatic, single-action / double-action pistol which uses a 15-round staggered box magazine with a reversible magazine release button that can be positioned for either right- or left-handed shooters. The M9 was modified to the M9A1 in 2006. It added—among other things—a Picatinny rail for the attachment of lights, lasers, and other accessories to the weapon. The M9A1 has more aggressive front and backstrap checkering and a beveled magazine well for easier reloading of the weapon. M9A1 pistols are sold with Physical vapor deposition (PVD) coated magazines developed to better withstand the conditions in the sandy environments in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Playstation Vita impressions (2011-07-20 14:53)

The analogue stick is small compared to PSP and Dual Shock 3. The construction of the plastics are lighter than PSP or most smartphones. The transparent shoulder buttons don't feel much different than the ones on the PlayStation Portable, though perhaps a tad springier in their action, and between them there are a pair of iPod nano-like volume buttons and a pair of thin plastic covers. The pad works a lot better than PSP's analogue pad for first person shooters. Sony consumer products head Kaz Hirai said that Vita is expected to be profitable within 3 years. Sony picked the worst cellular provider, AT &T for 3g access. The best is Verizon.

I am waiting for Final Fantasy, Elder Scrolls, Square-Enix developed RPGs, Ridge Racer VIII. I don't have enough money to buy the 7.0 - 7.9 RPGs for DS or PSP or Vita. NIS America and Atlus never have good RPGs for PSP or Dual Screen. probably never would. More of the same is okay.

Hm, a remake of Final Fantasy 7 would be nice. They're going to remake 10, right? It's an odd choice, compared to the other possibilities, but I suppose that it doesn't really matter. It would be cool if they throw in some new and extra features for the Vita remake.

Final Fantasy X is for PS3, why care about Vita port! Vita port is inferior in every way. Vita is bought for unique games like Gravity Daze, Persona 4, Wipeout 2048 and Uncharted Abyss.

I agree that Square-Enix sets Vita up for FF7, because prequel Crisis Core:FF7 which was 8/10.

I basically bought PSP to show pictures of my game/CD collection w/o color ink and Wipeout Pure. I liked the whole Extreme-G 3 / Wipeout Fusion / F-Zero GX sub-genre. PSP had Metal Gear Solid for it so I kept mine.

private industry replaces Ares I rocket (2011-07-21 09:23)

NASA is simply transferring its costly bureaucratically sponsored spaceflights to the private sector. Newt Gingrich brought up private space flight on June 13, 2011 during republican debate. The next 50 years are going to be historic. There's intensifying economic and space competition. NASA is turning to private industry with fixed prices, contracts and profit margins. The space agency will be the customer, not the boss. NASA is hoping to launch its privately built rocket and capsule to the space station late this year. It won't carry astronauts, but if all goes well the unmanned ship will dock with the station and deliver food, water and clothing. It will take 40 tons of supplies to the space station in 20 flights. Boeing is going to privately send astronauts into space in 2014. SpaceX of Hawthorne, California, which also has its own ship, the Dragon, a "free-flying, reusable spacecraft.

President George Bush has set NASA on a mission to put men back on the moon by 2020, and then onto Mars between 2035 and 2037.

I'm flying on space jet when I am 50ish instead of Walt Disney World! I went to Walt Disney World in July 1997 for eight days and seen all the parks.

Most Expensive airplanes (2011-07-24 11:10)

10. F/A-18 Hornet: $94 million

First entering service in the 1980s, the twin-engine fighter plane was the U.S.'s first strike fighter — an aircraft capable of attacking both ground and aerial targets. It has seen action in Operation Desert Storm and as the aircraft of the Navy's Blue Angels Flight Demonstration Squadron. The F/A-18 is also used by Canada, Australia, Finland, Kuwait, Malaysia, Spain and Switzerland.

9. EA-18G Growler: $102 million

Hot off the presses, the Growler is a lightly armed version of the F/A-18 fighter that has been updated for electronic warfare (it is currently being delivered to the Navy). Growlers are capable of not only finding and disrupting anti-aircraft radar, but also jamming enemy communications.

8. V-22 Osprey: 122 million

This tiltrotor aircraft, which takes off and lands like a helicopter but can fly faster and farther like a fixed-wing plane, was first used in combat in Iraq in 2007. The Osprey's production has been bedeviled by design and construction problems: the craft claimed the lives of at least 30 Marines and civilians during its development alone (former Vice President Dick Cheney tried repeatedly to ground the plane). Still, because of its range and versatility, the Marine Corps plans to deploy a squadron of V-22s to Afghanistan by the end of the year.

7. F-35 Lightning II 122 million

Lockheed Martin's 2001 deal to build these stealth, supersonic fighter jets was at the time the largest military contract ever. The F-35s, intended to replace an aging aircraft arsenal, were developed as part of a Joint Strike Fighter program between the U.S. and its allies and were criticized as underpowered and overweight — and therefore easy targets. Making matters worse, from 2007 to 2008, cyberspies infiltrated the 7.5 million lines of computer code that powered the Joint Strike Fighter, raising concerns that enemies could copy the F-35's design and exploit its weaknesses. In April 2009, Lockheed Martin said it did not believe the program had been compromised.

6. E-2D Advanced Hawkeye: $232 million

A major step forward for surveillance and reconnaissance, the Advanced Hawkeye's powerful new radar system will increase the range of territory an aircraft can monitor by 300 %. "It can probably watch the pistachios pop in Iran," an analyst for the think tank Lexington Institute told National Defense in July. Though development of the plane is on track and two test versions have been delivered to the Navy, budget cuts may keep the planes grounded for at least a year longer than planned.

5. VH-71 Kestrel: $241 million

This high-tech helicopter project, intended to replace the President's aging chopper fleet, was running more than 50 % over budget by the time Barack Obama took office. Soon after his Inauguration, the President announced plans to scrap the helicopters because of cost overruns. On July 22, however, the House Appropriations Committee unanimously approved restoring $485 million to fund the Kestrels.

4. P-8A Poseidon: $290 million

Boeing's spruced-up military version of its 737 jet will be used by the Navy to conduct anti-submarine warfare and gather intelligence. It can carry torpedoes, missiles, depth charges and other weapons. The P-8A is expected to go into service in 2013.

3. C17A Globemaster III: $328 million

The Air Force military-transport plane is used to move troops into war zones, perform medical evacuations and conduct airdrop missions. There are 190 C17As in service; the aircraft is propelled by four turbofan engines (of the same type used on the twin-engine Boeing 757) and can drop 102 paratroopers at once. In operation since 1993, it has been used to deliver troops and humanitarian aid to Afghanistan and Iraq.

2. F-22 Raptor: $350 million

First conceived during the Cold War as an airframe to vie with Soviet aircraft that was never built, the F-22 is touted by manufacturer Lockheed Martin as the best overall combat plane in the world — not to mention the most expensive. It can shoot down enemy cruise missiles, fly long distances at supersonic speeds and avoid nearly all types of radar detection. But the Senate debate over whether to build seven more — at a taxpayer cost of $1.67 billion — eventually came down to the plane's job-creating abilities. The axed project would have employed 25,000 Americans.

1. B2-Spirit $2.4 billion

The B-2 bomber was so costly that Congress cut its initial 1987 purchase order from 132 to 21. (A 2008 crash leaves the current number at 20.) The B-2 is hard to detect via infrared, acoustic, electromagnetic, visual or radar signals. This stealth capability makes it able to attack enemy targets with less fear of retaliation. In use since 1993, the B-2 has been deployed to both Iraq and Afghanistan.

J-20 (2k18) vs. F-22E Strike Raptor (2k30) (2011-07-25 13:22)

The Pentagon wants a new aircraft (lets call it the F-22E Strike Raptor) must be able to operate in the "anti-access/area-denial environment that will exist in the 2030-2050 timeframe. The US airforce wants offensive and defensive "counterair" – destroying or neutralizing an enemy's ability to control the skies. Boeing Co, the Pentagon's No. 2 supplier after Lockheed, might be able to stay in the fighter business long enough to compete for it, he said, assuming exports can keep its fighter know-how alive as the U.S. Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps buy F-35s in large numbers. The Air Force in its wish list for the futuristic warplane cited greater reach, persistence, survivability, situational awareness, weapons effects and "human-system integration." In the twelve year gap , the US Airforce could get by with a small squadron of F-22s, a larger squadron of inferior F-35 Lightning II, and pilotless combat drones like the Predator and its successor the Reaper.

The J-20 is larger than the F-22A or the Russian Pak-Fa. It is said that the cyber attacks on the US that cost US 40 billion, was to get F-117 Nighthawk blueprints for the J-20. It is said that F-117 Nighthawk elements have went to china in the 1999 Kosovo war. The idea of Chinese reverse-engineering F-117 debris to understand technology is plausible. The idea that the J-20 has 30 years of Russian technology built into it and some F-117 technology would look true. J-20 will be ready in 2017.

The J-20 is of a conventional layout as fighters go - though it is worth mentioning that the size of the J-20 is greater than that of the American F-22 or Russian Sukhoi T-50/PAK FA development. Taken as a whole, the J-20 appears to be the body of the experimental, delta-wing Mikoyan Project 1.44 aircraft with the nose section of a Lockheed F-22 Raptor. The fuselage is noticeably long and wide presumably for the use of large amounts of internal fuel stores, advanced avionics capacities and large internal weapons bays. The cockpit is held well forward in the design and the engines are fitted in the rear. Canards are set along the forward portion of the fuselage and serve to provide improved vortex lift for the airframe body. Likewise, the use of the anhedral set main wing assemblies works in conjunction with these canards to help improve lift. The main wing assemblies, each sporting anhedral, are delta in arrangement and the vertical fins on the tail noticeably canted outwards. The vertical tail fins and forward canards are all-moving surfaces, hinged at internal joints, and help in providing for an agile airframe. There are two small ventral fins near the trailing edge of the main wings, outboard of either engine. The engines are buried deep within the middle and aft portions of the fuselage, aspirated by a set of inward slanted intake openings to either side of the cockpit. The intakes are preceded by a bulbous chine mount that is contoured rather elegantly to either cockpit side. From the first few initial photographs of the J-20, the engines seem to exhaust through a pair of conventional nozzles so no thrust vectoring is apparent in the prototypes. Stealth plays an important role in the design of the J-20 so plasma technology is used in the various exposed moving joints of the vertical tail fins and forward canards. The undercarriage is wholly conventional and made up of a tricycle landing gear arrangement featuring a single-wheeled nose leg and a pair of single-wheeled main landing gear legs. The nose leg retracts forward under and aft of the cockpit floor while the main legs retract forward into the sides of the fuselage. Of note here is the "saw-tooth" edges of the landing gear doors - consistent with the stealth design philosophy of the F-22 Raptor.

Internally, the J-20 will sport the latest in Chinese fly-by-wire technology and advanced fire control and engine management features. The pilot will most likely control the aircraft through a traditional HOTAS (Hands on Throttle and Stick) arrangement and have access to a single, wide-angle, full-color "glass" cockpit liquid crystal display ala the Lockheed F-35 Lightning II. In conjunction with the LCD may be a helmet-mounted sight system for the pilot. A wide-angle HUD (Head-Up Display) will provide pertinent performance and mission information to the pilot above the instrument panel.

Struggle for Recognition (2011-07-27 13:58)

As social struggles of the last few decades have made clear, justice demands more than the fair distribution of material goods. For even if conflicts over interests were justly adjudicated, a society would remain normatively deficient to the extent to which its members are systematically denied the recognition they deserve. As Charles Taylor has recently emphasized, 'Due recognition is not just a courtesy we owe people. It is a vital human need.'⁽¹⁾ As one scarcely needs to add, it is also a need that has all-too-often gone unmet. Regularly, members of marginalized and sub-altern groups have been systematically denied recognition for the worth of their culture or way of life, the dignity of their status as persons, and the inviolability of their physical integrity. Their voices are now being heard, and their struggles for recognition have come to dominate the political landscape. Consequently, if social theory is to provide an adequate account of contemporary fields of social conflict, it will have both to situate the motivation for these emancipatory struggles within the social world and to provide an account of what justifies them. In the present volume, Axel Honneth outlines an approach to this dual task of explanation and justification that is both highly original and firmly rooted in the history of modern social theory. Rather than following the atomistic tradition of social philosophy going back to Hobbes and Machiavelli, however, Honneth situates his project within the tradition that emphasizes not the struggle for self-preservation but rather the struggle for the establishment of relations of mutual recognition, as a precondition for self-realization.⁽²⁾ Like Hegel, George Herbert Mead, and, more recently, communitarians and many feminists, Honneth stresses the importance of social relationships to the development and maintenance of a person's identity. On the basis of this nexus between social patterns of recognition and individual prerequisites for self-realization - and with constant reference to empirical findings of the social sciences - Honneth develops both a framework for interpreting social struggles and a normative account of the claims being raised in these struggles. With regard to the first, explanatory task, his approach can be understood as a continuation of the Frankfurt School's attempt to locate the motivating insight for emancipatory critique and struggle within the domain of ordinary human experience, rather than in the revolutionary theory of intellectuals.⁽³⁾ As Honneth argued in Critique of Power, however, the Frankfurt School suffered from an exclusive focus on the domain of material production as the locus of transformative critique. In the present volume, he now proposes an alternative account, situating the critical perception of injustice more generally within individuals' negative experiences of having broadly 'moral' expectations violated. With regard to the normative task of critical theory, the roots of Honneth's approach are to be found in the model of the struggle for recognition developed by Hegel during his early years in Jena (before the completion of the Phenomenology of Spirit in 1807). Honneth takes from Hegel the idea that full human flourishing is dependent on the existence of well-established, 'ethical' relations - in particular, love, law, and 'ethical life' [Sittlichkeit] - which can only be established through a conflict-ridden developmental process, specifically, through a struggle for recognition. In order to get beyond the speculative, metaphysical character of Hegel's project, however, Honneth turns to Mead's naturalistic pragmatism and to empirical work in psychology, sociology, and history in order to identify the intersubjective conditions for individual self-realization. In the course of analyzing these conditions, Honneth develops his 'formal conception of ethical life', understood as a critical normative standard that is intended to avoid both the overly 'thick' character of neo-Aristotelian ethics and the overly 'thin' character of neo-Kantian moral theory. Honneth's approach can be summarized, in a preliminary way, as follows. The possibility for sensing, interpreting, and realizing one's needs and desires as a fully autonomous and individuated person - in short, the very possibility of identity-formation - depends crucially on the development of self-confidence, self-respect, and self-esteem. These three modes of relating practically to oneself can only be acquired and maintained intersubjectively, through being granted recognition by someone whom one also recognizes. As a result, the conditions for self-realization turn out to be dependent on the establishment of relationships of mutual recognition. These relationships go beyond (a) close relations of love and friendship to include (b) legally institutionalized relations of universal respect for the autonomy and dignity of persons and (c) networks of solidarity and shared values within which the particular worth of members of a community can be acknowledged. These relationships are not ahistorically given but must be established and expanded through social struggles. These struggles cannot be understood exclusively as conflicts over interests, since the 'grammar' of such struggles is 'moral' in the sense that the feelings of outrage and indignation generated by the rejection of claims to recognition imply normative judgments about the legitimacy of social arrangements. In this way, the normative ideal of a just society is empirically confirmed by historical struggles for recognition. Central to Honneth's 'social theory with normative content' is his account of self-confidence, self-respect, and self-esteem, along with the modes of recognition by which they are sustained, and this will be the focus here. With regard to each of these 'practical relations-to-self', three issues need to be addressed: the precise importance of each for the development of one's identity, the pattern of recognition on which it depends, and its historical development. Beyond this, the present introduction will provide a brief discussion of both Honneth's interpretation of social struggles as motivated by the experience of being denied these conditions for identity-formation - what he refers to as 'disrespect' [Mißachtung] - and some of the distinctive features of Honneth's readings of Hegel and Mead, found in Chapters 2-4. It is perhaps useful, at the outset, to spell out what self-confidence, self-respect, and self-esteem have in common. For Honneth, they represent three distinct species of 'practical relation-to-self'. These are neither purely beliefs about oneself nor emotional states, but involve a dynamic process in which individuals come to experience themselves as having a certain status, be it as an object of concern, a responsible agent, or a valued contributor to shared projects. Following Hegel and Mead, Honneth emphasizes that coming to relate to oneself in these ways necessarily involves experiencing recognition from others. One's relationship to oneself, then, is not a matter of a solitary ego appraising itself, but an intersubjective process, in which one's attitude toward oneself emerges in one's encounter with an other's attitude toward oneself.⁽⁴⁾ Love and Self-Confidence With regard to the concept of love, Honneth is primarily concerned with the way in which parent-child relationships - as well as adult relationships of love and friendship - facilitate the development and maintenance of the basic relation-to-self that Honneth terms 'self-confidence' [Selbstvertrauen: 'trust in oneself']. If all goes well in their first relationships to others, infants gradually acquire a fundamental faith in their environment and, concomitantly, a sense of trust in their own bodies as reliable sources of signals for their own needs. On Honneth's account, self-confidence has less to do with a high estimation of one's abilities than with the fundamental capacity to express needs and desires without fear of being abandoned as a result. As such, self-confidence operates at such a deep level that it is usually only when extreme experiences of physical violation such as rape or torture shatter one's ability to access one's needs (as one's own) and to express them without anxiety that it becomes clear how much depends on this relation-to-self.⁽⁵⁾ To explain the link between self-confidence and inter-subjective relations of love and concern, Honneth draws on the object-relations theoretic account of early childhood experience, particularly as developed in the work of Donald Winnicott. Against the Freudian emphasis on instinctual drives, object-relations theory has argued that the development of children cannot be abstracted from the interactive relationships in which the process of maturation takes place. Initially, the child is dependent upon the responsiveness of primary care-givers (following Winnicott, Jessica Benjamin, and others, Honneth uses the term 'mother' to designate a role that can be fulfilled by persons other than the biological mother) and their ability to empathically intuit the needs of the inarticulate infant. Due to the newborn's utter helplessness, an insufficient level of adaptation of the 'mother' to the infant's needs early in life would represent a serious problem for the infant, since the child can neither cope with or make sense of failures of this 'environment' to intuit and satisfy his or her needs. Of course, the failure or 'de-adaptation' of care-givers is an unavoidable element of the individuation process, by which infants learn to cope with gradual increases in the environment's insensitivity, that is, to recognize and assert their needs as their own instead of experiencing the absence of immediate gratification as threatening. Following Winnicott, Honneth argues that this formative process must again be understood as intersubjective. Because 'good-enough' infant care demands a high degree of emotional and intuitive involvement, the individuation process has to be understood as a complex, agonistic process in which both parent and child extricate themselves from a state of 'symbiosis'. Despite the fact that the 'mother' is a fully individuated adult, it is only together that children and care-givers can negotiate the delicate and shifting balance between ego-dissolution and ego-demarcation. And it is this balance that provides the enduring, intersubjectively reproduced basis both for relationships of love and friendship with peers as well as for a positive, embodied sense of what Erik Erikson calls 'basic trust'.⁽⁶⁾ Interestingly, although Honneth is generally at pains to emphasize the historically contingent nature of human subjectivity⁽⁷⁾, he argues that this notion of bodily integrity, together with the need for love and concern it entails, captures something whose importance cuts across differences of cultural and historical contexts. This is not to say that practices of child-rearing or love have gone unchanged, only that the capacity to trust one's own sense of what one needs or wants is a precondition for self-realization in any human community. This is part of what separates love from the two other patterns of recognition Honneth considers essential to self-realization, for unlike the form of recognition that supports self-confidence, the ways in which both respect and esteem are accorded have undergone a significant historical transformation. Indeed, the very distinction between the two is an historical product, something that may help to explain why 'respect' and 'esteem' are still used interchangeably in some contexts (as in: 'I respect her enormously'). In pre-modern contexts - roughly, until the bourgeois revolutions of the 18th century - one's standing in society and one's status as a moral and political agent were fused, typically, in the concept of 'honour'. Rights and duties were always rights and duties of one's station or 'estate', never of one's status as a free legislator in either the local kingdom or the 'kingdom of ends' (Kant). With the advent of the modern period, however, the fundamental principles underlying the realm of law and rights came into conflict with the idea of according legal status on the basis of class privilege. In this way, the notion of one's 'status as a person' was historically differentiated from the notion of 'social standing', giving rise to psychologically and analytically distinct modes of recognition, as well as to the corresponding notions of 'self-respect' [Selbstachtung] and 'self-esteem' [Selbstschätzung].⁽⁸⁾ Rights and Self-Respect On Honneth's account, self-respect has less to do with whether or not one has a good opinion of oneself than with one's sense of possessing of the universal dignity of persons. There is a strong Kantian element here: what we owe to every person is the recognition of and respect for his or her status as an agent capable of acting on the basis of reasons, as the autonomous author of the political and moral laws to which he or she is subject.⁽⁹⁾ To have self-respect, then, is to have a sense of oneself as a person, that is, as a morally responsible agent or, more precisely, as someone capable of participating in the sort of public deliberation that Habermas terms 'discursive will-formation'. Again, however, this relation-to-self is mediated by patterns of interaction, in particular, those organized in terms of legal rights. To show why being accorded rights is crucial to self-respect, Honneth makes use of Joel Feinberg's argument to the effect that '...what is called "human dignity" may simply be the recognizable capacity to assert claims.'⁽¹⁰⁾ The object of respect (including self-respect) is an agent's capacity to raise and defend claims discursively or, more generally, an agent's responsibility or 'accountability' [Zurechnungsfähigkeit].⁽¹¹⁾ But this capacity can only become a basis for 'self-respect' if it can be exercised. Indeed, it is unclear what it means to say that one has a capacity that one cannot exercise. Hence, the importance of rights for self-respect lies in the fact that rights ensure the real opportunity to exercise the universal capacity constitutive of personhood. This is not to say that a person without rights cannot have self-respect, only that the fullest form of self-respecting autonomous agency could only be realized when one is recognized as possessing the capacities of 'legal persons' and morally responsible agents. The specific content of these universal capacities, however, is something that shifts over time, along with shifts in the conception of the procedure by which political and moral issues are to be resolved: 'The more demanding this procedure is seen to be, the more extensive the features will have to be that, taken together, constitute a subject's moral accountability.'⁽¹²⁾ To understand this claim, it is important to keep in mind the distinction Honneth makes between two historical processes: (a) an increase in the number of people who are treated as full-fledged citizens and (b) an increase in the actual content of what it means to be a full-fledged citizen (in particular, the development of political and welfare rights, in addition to basic liberties). In the first case, the historical development involves realizing the universality clearly implied in the notion of modern law, with its basis in post-conventional morality. In the second case, the historical development involves a shift in the conception of law itself, in that the standard is raised regarding what skills and opportunities persons must be equipped with if a deliberative procedure is to count as legitimate. One of the interesting implications of this is that, since participation in public deliberation presupposes certain capacities, neo-Kantian moral and political theory cannot be as purely proceduralist as is often suggested, for it must rely tacitly on a minimally substantive conception of the justice in order to be able to determine whether participants in practical discourse have acquired (among other things) the practical relations-to-self necessary for engaging fully in collective or personal self-determination.⁽¹³⁾ With regard to these historical processes, Honneth emphasizes that the social struggles for either type of expansion are constrained, however, by the notions of universality and self-legislation, which make it normatively illegitimate (though perhaps factually accurate) to view rights as the embodiment of class interests. And it is precisely this universalistic core of modern law that is overlooked by attempts since Hegel to appropriate the model of the struggle for recognition. As Honneth argues in Chapter Seven, despite their insights into the non-Hobbesian character of many social struggles, Marx, Sorel, and Sartre all failed to appreciate that the appeal to rights has built into it the idea that every subject of the law must also be its author. Solidarity and Self-Esteem Whereas self-respect is a matter of viewing oneself as entitled to the same status and treatment as every other person, self-esteem involves a sense of what it is that makes one special, unique, and (in Hegel's terms) 'particular'. This enabling sense of oneself as a unique and irreplaceable individual cannot, however, be based merely on a set of trivial or negative characteristics. What distinguishes one from others must be something valuable.⁽¹⁴⁾ Accordingly, to lack self-esteem is to have the sense that one has nothing of value to offer. In this way, individuality and self-esteem are linked. And it comes then as no surprise that members of denigrated groups have enormous difficulties being perceived in anything but stereotypical ways. Hegel's work on issues of individuality and particularity is truly ground-breaking, but he unfortunately tends to understand the relevant mode of recognition in terms of an overextended conception of romantic love. Because of this, Honneth focuses instead on Mead's discussion of personal identity. Mead's claim is that distinguishing oneself from others as an individual is a matter of what 'we do better than others'.⁽¹⁵⁾ The immediate difficulty with this, of course, is that not everyone can stand out above others. Mead tries to democratize this 'sense of superiority' by focusing on the division of labour in modern industrial societies, that is, by allowing individuals to find their functional roles in which to excel, not at the expense of others but precisely to the benefit of the whole. In Honneth's view, however, Mead overlooks the fact that not every job can actually serve as a basis for one's 'sense of superiority' or self-esteem. Like the evaluation of the way in which the work is done, the esteem accorded to certain tasks hinges on a range of particular cultural factors. If, for example, homemaking is considered an insignificant contribution to the common good, then homemakers will lack the evaluative resources in terms of which they can acquire a sense of personal accomplishment. In this sense, the social conditions for esteem are determined by the prevailing sense of what is to count as a worthwhile contribution to society. By situating esteem not in the division of labour but the horizon of values of a particular culture⁽¹⁶⁾, Honneth opens up the possibility of conceiving of the conditions for self-esteem as a field of contestation and cultural struggle for the recognition of previously denigrated contributors to the common good. 'Solidarity' is the term Honneth uses for the cultural climate in which the acquisition of self-esteem has become broadly possible. Although 'being in solidarity with someone' is sometimes equated with feelings of sympathy, Honneth's view is that one can properly speak of 'solidarity' only in cases where some shared concern, interest, or value is in play. What he is concerned with here is not so much the collective defense of interests or the political integration of individuals, but rather the presence of an open, pluralistic, evaluative framework within which social esteem is ascribed. He claims that a good society, a society in which individuals have a real opportunity for full self-realization, would be a society in which the common values would match the concerns of individuals in such a way that no member of the society would be denied the opportunity to earn esteem for his or her contribution to the common good: 'To the extent to which every member of a society is in a position to esteem himself or herself, one can speak of a state of societal solidarity.'⁽¹⁷⁾ Unlike the sphere of rights, however, solidarity carries with it a moment of particularity: which particular values are endorsed by a community is a contingent matter, the result of social and cultural struggles that lack the universality that is distinctive of legal relations. Honneth's position here is usefully compared to the culturally oriented struggles of subaltern groups that have influenced recent debates over multiculturalism, feminism, and gay and lesbian identity. Like the politics of difference, Honneth views struggles for recognition in which the dimension of esteem is central as attempts to end social patterns of denigration in order to make possible new forms of distinctive identity. But again, for Honneth, esteem is accorded on the basis of an individual's contribution to a shared project; thus, the elimination of demeaning cultural images of, say, racial minorities does not provide esteem directly but rather establishes the conditions under which members of those groups can then make their own contributions to the community. To esteem a person simply for being a member of a group would be to slip back into pre-modern notions of estate-based honour discussed earlier, rather than acknowledging the 'individualized' character of modern esteem. At the same time, of course, Honneth insists that the point of reference for esteeming each individual is the evaluative framework accepted by the entire community and not just one sub-culture. Here, it remains somewhat unclear what exactly determines the boundaries of the community in Honneth's account - what if one is esteemed only by other Jews or other Blacks? - but the central point is that, in pluralistic and mobile societies, it is difficult to maintain self-esteem in the face of systematic denigration from outside one's subculture. Disrespect and the Moral Grammar of Historical Struggles These intersubjective conditions for identity-formation provide the basis for Honneth's 'formal conception of ethical life', understood as a normative ideal of a society in which patterns of recognition would allow individuals to acquire the self-confidence, self-respect, and self-esteem necessary for the full development of their identities. This ideal is not, however, a merely theoretical construct, but is implicit in the structure of recognition itself. For, as Hegel is able to show, recognition is worthless if it does not come from someone whom one views as deserving recognition. From this perspective, since the requirement of reciprocity is always already built into the demand for recognition, social struggles for the expansion of patterns of recognition are best understood as attempts to realize the normative potential implicit in social interaction. Although the teleological language of 'potential' and an hypothetically anticipated 'final state' of this development may raise eyebrows, Honneth is careful to avoid suggesting a philosophy of history in the traditional sense of a necessary progression along a knowable, pre-ordained path. He insists that history is made less at the level of structural evolution than at the level of individual experiences of suffering and disrespect. His point is that one misses the 'moral grammar' of these conflicts if one fails to see that the claims to recognition raised in them can only be met through greater inclusion, the logical extension of which is something like the state of society envisioned by the formal theory of ethical life. In this way, Honneth argues, normative theory and the internal logic of social struggles mutually illuminate each other. The idea of social conflict having a 'moral' dimension is not, of course, entirely new. It is a central focus of much recent work in social history inspired by the ground-breaking work of E.P. Thompson, and Honneth looks to that tradition - particularly in the work of Barrington Moore - for empirical support for his position.⁽¹⁸⁾ Where Honneth departs from this tradition, however, is in arguing that 'moral' motives for revolt and resistance - that is, those based on a tacit understanding of what one deserves - do not emerge only in the defense of traditional ways of life (as Thompson and Moore suggest) but also in situations where those ways of life have gradually become intolerable. Because key forms of exclusion, insult, and degradation can be seen as violating a person's self-confidence, self-respect, or self-esteem, the negative emotional reactions generated by these experiences of disrespect provide the pretheoretical basis for social critique. Once it becomes clear that these experiences reflect not just the idiosyncratic misfortune of individuals but experiences that are shared by many others, the potential emerges for collective action aimed at actually expanding social patterns of recognition. Here, the symbolic resources of social movements play a crucial role in showing this disrespect to be typical of an entire group of people. Hegel and Mead As Honneth demonstrates, many of the ideas outlined above - in particular, the tripartite distinction among three relations of recognition as social prerequisites for identity-formation - were first suggested in the work of Hegel and Mead, and much of Honneth's interest in these thinkers is in reconstructing a systematic social theory from their often fragmentary proposals. Beyond this, however, Honneth's discussions also represent significant contributions to the secondary literature on these authors. Honneth's discussion of Hegel focuses on the elusive and little-discussed early texts from the years in Jena. His reading of these texts not only uncovers the resources for reconstructing a 'recognition-theoretic' social theory but also identifies important tensions between the texts, tensions that help to explain why Hegel was never able to develop such a social theory himself. In the earliest Jena writings (discussed in Chapter Two) and particularly in the System of Ethical Life, Hegel postulates a transition from 'natural ethical life' to 'absolute ethical life' in which the differentiation of society goes hand-in-hand with the development of human autonomy and individuality. Here, under the influence of Classical theories of the polis, Hegel develops strong notions of both the normative potential of communicative relations and the primacy of the social. But he is unable to provide a sufficiently precise account of either the distinctions between forms of recognition or the stages of individual development. Honneth then argues, in Chapter Three, that this more detailed account is precisely what Hegel's later Realphilosophie provides. Unfortunately, however, this gain in analytical and psychological clarity also obscures some of the crucial insights found in the earlier writings, due to Hegel's increasing reliance on a 'philosophy of consciousness', that is, the metaphysical framework characteristic of subject-centred philosophy from Descartes to Husserl. By focusing on the struggle for recognition at the level of the formation of individual consciousness, Hegel makes social shifts in patterns of recognition mere stages in the overarching process of Spirit's formation through individual self-consciousness.⁽¹⁹⁾ In Honneth's view, the more interesting earlier notion, according to which individual and societal development mutually constitute each other, never returns in Hegel's oeuvre, and it is for this reason that Honneth does not discuss what is certainly the best-known of Hegel's discussions of the struggle for recognition, namely, the master-slave dialectic of the Phenomenology of Spirit. In effect, then, Honneth concludes that the earlier and later Jena writings negate each other, without Hegel ever being able to effect their Aufhebung [sublation]. In this connection, Mead represents a significant advance. For Honneth's purposes, what makes Mead interesting is that he provides an account the tripartite interrelation between individual identity-formation and social patterns of interaction that is built on a non-speculative, postmetaphysical basis. In his discussion of Mead's intersubjectivist conception of the self, Honneth is in substantial agreement with the work of Hans Joas, Ernst Tugendhat, and Habermas. Honneth develops his own criticism of Mead's narrow reliance on the division of labour as a basis for post-traditional solidarity (discussed above) as well as a careful reconstruction of the important distinction in Mead between two kinds of 'respect' (corresponding to Honneth's notions of 'respect' and 'esteem'). But what is most distinctive about Honneth's reading of Mead is his interpretation of the 'I' as a driving force of historical transformation. Something of the sort is needed to account for the expansion of identity-claims over time, for the development of new claims to recognition. Honneth sees Mead's notion of the 'I' as offering a way of explaining how innovation is possible in this domain. On his reading, then, the 'I' is not merely the placeholder for the irretrievable subject of an individual's thought and action but also the pre-conscious source of innovation by which new claims to identity come to be asserted.⁽²⁰⁾ On the basis of this, Honneth can then argue that historical transformations of social relations (in this case, individualization) are driven by the experiences and struggles of individuals and groups rather than functionalist dynamics.⁽²¹⁾ Aside from suggesting new lines of scholarly research, Honneth's discussions of Hegel and Mead serve three further purposes. First, they provide the raw materials from which Honneth constructs his own position, including the notion of struggles for recognition driving the development of social structures, the tripartite distinction among patterns of recognition and types of practical relation-to-self, and the ideal of full human flourishing as dependent on the existence of reciprocal relations of recognition. Second, these interpretations serve to forestall easy dismissals of, say, Hegelian or Meadian ideas on the basis of misassociations or distortions built into prevailing views on these thinkers. Finally, the discussions of Hegel and Mead - along with those of Marx, Sorel, and Sartre - serve to situate Honneth's own position within an often-overlooked tradition of social theory. By reconstructing and revising an alternative to the dominant tradition of modern social philosophy founded by Hobbes and Machiavelli, Honneth is able to undermine the apparent self-evidence of its underlying assumptions - in particular, assumptions about the self-interested (what Honneth calls 'utilitarian') motives for social conflict or the atomistic character of the state of nature. He thereby opens up the theoretical space within which the struggle for recognition can be conceived as an attempt on the part of social actors to establish the patterns of reciprocal recognition on which the very possibility of redeeming their claims to identity depends - a struggle to establish, in short, social justice in the fullest sense.

Next generation should overlap this generation 3 years (2011-07-27 17:23)

There isn't much else out there. It is Sturgeon's Law and videogames are the 10 % on Earth. I am tired of the graphics this generation offers, because it has been 6 years and 1000s of dollars spent on this generation.

If I was to cash out $30, $40, $50. They better make it on DirectX 10.1 hardware. The games look outdated, because it is DirectX 9.0!

The Wii U, PS4, Xbox 720 cannot come out fast enough. I really want some Crysis 2 PC graphics on my TV. There is no bragging rights on the graphics with the current generation. I know the low budget JRPGs next gen will look equal to Final Fantasy XIII.

This generation is a full 6 years old for Xbox 360 and the game consoles are OLD and TIRED. They still sell the PS2 at Wal-mart.

I want the PS4 and PS3 to overlap for 3 years so long as the PS4 is in my house under the TV by December 2012. The PS4 should have came out in November 2011! It's the world recession, and I shouldn't be paying $60 for obsolete graphics. Delaying is to maximize profits and it is sick. The manufactures wait too long. I had my DirectX 11 Radeon HD 5970 for Christmas 2009 showing manufactures delay launch dates for profit! If this is a firmware problem, manufactures should use reuse Xbox 360, and PS3's firmware until next gen firmware comes out. Current gen console / handheld debate is on its death bed as we speak. We talk in circles this year and that is a bad thing!

Linux Mint vs. Ubuntu Bout (2011-07-29 16:40)

Though the popularity of Ubuntu amongst the Linux-curious crowd is immense, Mint has quietly found itself a spot in the hearts of many new users. This gradual rise in the popularity of Mint makes it a distro that simply cannot be ignored anymore. So, let's compare Linux Mint 11 'Katya' with our very own Natty and see how it holds out.

User Interface / Look and Feel:

The user interface is the most important part of a distribution. Most often, it is the first thing a user notices or cares about, if of course, he's trying it on a live CD. Many times the User Interface is the sole deciding factor that can compel a Windows user to switch to a Linux-based distribution. While Ubuntu has recently moved to the controversial Unity interface, Linux Mint, with Katya, has decided to stick with the good old GNOME 2.x. Unity takes advantage of the powerful effects Compiz provides in order to create a beautiful shelled desktop. There are transparencies, different kinds of new effects and functionalities that give a modern look to the desktop. While this may work for new users who have never used Linux before, many seasoned Linux users have disliked this move, and many of them have even moved to Mint.

The elusive launcher on the left, the locked down panels and dash, lack of integration with default applications has brought down Ubuntu's popularity down a notch. For experienced Linuxers, the changes are too many to handle at once. Linux Mint in this case, steps up as a good, easy to use, viable alternative to Ubuntu. Of course, Ubuntu does ship with the GNOME 2.x desktop. However, that is going to change in the next version. Hence, Ubuntu users either have to get used to Unity or simply switch to another desktop. Linux Mint on the other hand, makes this switch possible for many users by keeping things really simple.

For those who don't know this, Linux Mint is Ubuntu-based, so users can enjoy all the goodness of Ubuntu but with a fresh minty flavor. From installation steps, Linux Mint makes sure that new users don't have any trouble installing it on their systems. They've kept the installer similar to the one Ubuntu has except for a few aesthetic changes. At the boot up itself, Mint pleases the user with one of the best GRUB splash screens that we've ever seen. Ubuntu however, sticks with the plain aubergine. When we compare the desktops, Mint has a fresh minty-green feel to it. Ubuntu on the other hand, pleases the user with the perky aubergine desktop that gives it its trademark look. Mint has modified the classic GNOME by combining the top and bottom panels into a single panel at the bottom. The real show stealer though, is the Start Menu (known as Mint Menu). This is what Unity should have incorporated instead of the locked-down dash. The menu includes links to 'Places' and 'System' on the left, and on the right there is a place for pinning the favorite applications. A search bar at the bottom makes it a complete menu. Dash on the other hand, simply includes shortcuts and a search bar.

Coming to the taskbar, Unity employs a modern-looking launcher that sits at the left of the screen. It comes with various functionalities like Quick lists, Lenses, Shortcuts and more. The launcher also has the ability to dodge windows intelligently. Mint on the other hand, employs the familiar task bar, which will please all the folks who long for the look and feel of a traditional desktop interface.

Also, when it comes to default selection of themes, Mint beats Ubuntu hands down with its collection of minty fresh themes that work perfectly. Ubuntu also comes with a wide variety of themes, but some of them aren't compatible with the buttons on the left. Also, few of them look ugly with the new Unity interface. The wallpaper collection in Mint is kept to bare minimum. It comes with around 9 Linux wallpapers but all of them look wonderful. Ubuntu however, has a much wider collection of wallpapers.

So, after looking at the UI aspect of both the desktops, there is no doubt that Mint Katya beats Ubuntu Natty hands down. Unity tries to do too much leaving the user both perplexed and agitated at times. Mint however, sticks to the minimal basics yet pleases the user aesthetically.

Winner: Linux Mint

Software Management:

Ubuntu has its own software center that was updated in Natty to include ratings and reviews. Mint users on the other hand, were already enjoying those features. What's more, Mint's software manager even has a pretty splash screen. Ubuntu's Software Center (USC) comes with all the features Mint's Software Manager provides including a few more. It includes support for installing paid applications like Family Farm, World of Goo and many others. Other than that, there's not much of a difference between both the Software managers. So, solely on the merit that USC lets users install paid applications, Ubuntu just wins this round.

Winner: Ubuntu Natty

Default Applications:

Lately, Ubuntu has been playing around with its default application set. However, no matter how hard it tries, it can never match up to what Mint brings to the platter. Don't believe me? Here, take a look at what Mint offers:

Graphics: GIMP, Simple Scan, gThumb, LibreOffice Draw

Internet: Firefox, Pidgin IM, Giver, Sun Java 6, Thunderbird, Transmission, XChat IRC

Multimedia: Banshee, Brasero, GNOME Mplayer, Movie Player, Sound Recorder, VLC Media Player

Office: Dictionary, LibreOffice

Now, with applications like those, a user doesn't have to install anything extra to get started. The very fact that Mint includes applications like VLC and Mplayer puts it miles ahead of Ubuntu in this round. Ubuntu does have a decent set of applications but it simply isn't as impressive as the one Mint provides. Hence the winner here is Mint.

Winner: Linux Mint

Performance:

Again, Linux Mint being Ubuntu-based, performs almost the same way as Ubuntu does. However, if we consider the performance while using the actual desktop, Linux Mint takes the lead. This is because, even if you have a powerful graphics card, the quality of proprietary drivers that are out there for Linux aren't up to the mark. So, Unity having features that take advantage of the graphics card, many users may feel a significant drop in performance. Moreover, with Unity, the time to load the desktop from the GDM login screen has visibly increased. Linux Mint, as it stays on the safer side, works as snappy as ever. So, based purely on how the desktop performs, Mint wins this round.

Winner: Linux Mint

Ease of use:

Reiterating the point we made before, Ubuntu tries to do too much with Unity. It's not something that a new user will get used to straight away. Mint on the other hand, retains all the principles of the standard desktop. Hence, a new user will get accustomed to the interface within no time. Also, users who are switching from Windows will love the non-fussy minimalist look of Mint. The winner here of course, is Mint again.

Winner: Linux Mint

Reliability, branding and support:

Reliability here is not to be confused with stability. If you're a frequent distro-hopper and are using Ubuntu, moving to Mint after reading this review, would be a child's play for you. However, if you use the computer for doing actual work and your productivity depends on its stability, you'll be a bit reluctant to switch right away. About a couple of years ago, switching distributions wasn't a big deal as most of them offered similar features. However now, with the whole GNOME 3 and Unity bifurcation, switching distros is like moving to another operating system. Hence, no matter how good Mint is, there will be people who'll be a bit hesitant to switch.

The very fact that Ubuntu is backed by a big company like Canonical makes Ubuntu more reliable as a 'product'. Moreover, Ubuntu has a strong community, a good fan following (P.S: Bandwagon effect), and a branding that is the best a Linux distribution can have. Also, some users are willing to stick with Ubuntu simply because it dared to make some brave moves. They believe that, with some added effort, Ubuntu has the potential to become the best operating system around. As far as support is concerned, Ubuntu offers top-quality professional Linux support (paid support) and sites like askubuntu.com and ubuntuforums.org have large amount of active users helping each other. So, considering its popularity and the prospects it has for the future, this round goes to Ubuntu.

Winner: Ubuntu Natty

Software Compatibility:

Linux Mint being Ubuntu-based, almost 99 % of the applications that are available for Ubuntu will work for Mint. However, inexperienced users who have just switched to Mint may find it difficult to find applications that are outside the software center. For example, if a new user goes to the Dropbox website to download the official application, he or she might get confused by not seeing an option to install the same software on Mint. That person might not be aware of the fact that any software that works on Ubuntu will also work for Mint. This has been a problem for Mint despite being so popular. Also, with new Ubuntu-only features like indicator applets, quicklists and lenses, the list of applications that make use of those features just keep on growing. In fact, popular applications like Dropbox online backup have even added support for Indicator applets. So, this round goes to Natty again.

Winner: Ubuntu Natty

Extra Features:

Since Linux Mint is based on Ubuntu, there is not much of a difference between both the distros. One key feature that Mint offers is that it comes with all the codecs installed. But now that Ubuntu also allows users to install the codecs beforehand, there's not much of a difference between the two distributions. Hence, there's a tie here.

Conclusion:

Although Ubuntu 11.04 comes with tons of new features, it simply fails to impress as much as Linux Mint 11 does. Mint is fast, easy to use and just fresh. Ubuntu Natty though, has a lot to work upon. Earlier, Mint was always a step behind Ubuntu, but by sticking with GNOME classic, it has proven itself as a superior distribution. Only time will tell whether it can retain the top spot as Ubuntu is readying itself for bigger challenges.

Linux Mint 11 review (2011-07-30 13:46)

I assure you that the Internet is changing from RPM packager to deb. I had this PC that rejected RPM distros, yet worked with Ubuntu distros. I had to get away from Unity in Ubuntu 11.04, because it is more work and buggy. Linux Mint 11 keeps on using Gnome 2.32.1 or Linux Mint 12 with Gnome 3.0. The biggest app for Linux Mint 11 is The Gimp image editor which was absent since Ubuntu 9.10. The 2nd biggest is VLC Media Player 1.0.9. Some worth while upgrades from Ubuntu 10.10 is the new Out-of-Memory (OOM) killer, AppArmor, improved threads, faster Ext4 file system, faster desktop environment reaction speed, and Find command executed with filled caches faster. I know that Firefox 3.6.5 in Ubuntu 10.10 was more stable than Firefox 4.0.1. The Software manager is easy to use, my first selection is "Gnome Games". Linux Mint 11 is definitely more stable than Windows 7 SP1 since Windows 7 SP1 crashed on me for no reason.

Top five Space Ghost Coast to Coast episodes (2011-07-31 20:33)

Back when I used Limewire, I downloaded these Space Ghost - Coast to Coast episodes. I watched this talk show on cartoon network from 1995 - 2001. I believe I have a total of 15 Space Ghost Coast to Coast Episodes in H.263. At the time, I thought it was a corny TV series compared to live action TV shows such as Sienfield, Jay Leno, and Star Trek TNG in the 1990s.

"Pavement" (Episode 49): Space Ghost tells the viewing audience that his special musical guest will be The Beatles. He does short interviews with Colin Quinn and Tommy Davidson, but his interview with Red Green is cut short and his interview with Goldie Hawn is drowned out by Zorak's incessant keyboard playing. Space Ghost is later informed that they couldn't get The Beatles, so he tells them to just get anyone, know one will know the difference. Finally, the rock band Pavement shows up and Space Ghost introduces them as The Beatles. They perform a song about Space Ghost, using Zorak's instruments.

"Piledriver" (Episode 52): "Macho Man" Randy Savage makes an appearance as Space Ghost's grandfather but pretty much just plays the role as "Macho Man," threatening to put wrestling moves on anyone who gets in his way. At one point, Zorak beats him senseless with a folding chair. Eventually grandpa fakes his own kidnapping to get away from the show.

"Snatch" (Episode 72): Comedian Steven Wright finds himself trapped on the Ghost Planet as gigantic pod creatures take over the studio. The crew must stay awake, lest the replicating pods take over their bodies. They try everything they can think of to trick the pods, including dressing a bucket and mop as Space Ghost, and, per Moltar's suggestion, trying to become metal (because rust never sleeps).

"Fire Ant" (Episode 77): Conan O'Brien holds his own against Space Ghost in this episode, but eventually Space Ghost becomes distracted by an ant and follows it, silently, for about the last five minutes of the episode before being chased back to the studio by the ant's gigantic mutant father.

"Flip Mode" (Episode 82): Busta Rhymes is the guest in this episode, but Space Ghost is too preoccupied with all the brilliant ideas he keeps coming up with, which all seem to revolve around Zorak getting whacked in the head with a wrench. It turns out Space Ghost is getting all these "ideas" because he broke a pipe and natural gas is leaking into the studio. Highlights include the show being taken into the woods; Space Ghost taking Zorak and Moltar to a hospital that's actually a grocery store; Zorak hiding in a heating vent; and Space Ghost sanding his own face off.

Your ego just does not want to see the one and only reason – the low interest level. Children should pay attention to their parents for mainly two reasons: 1) it is for their own good (parents know what is best for their children), and 2) it is to return their parents love (children show respect and honor for their parents when they pay attention to their advice). Keeping a long distance relationship alive can be a real challenge.

Becoming dehydrated can cause serious damage to you and your baby.

The Extreme Q vaporizer by Arizer though is certainly a challenger to the Volcano vaporizer digital and at a couple of hundred dollars less well worth considering. A vaporizer will be the best thing since sliced bread.

This is called the crumb coat – and for good reason, as much of the crumbs pull away and get mixed up in the frosting.

With a click of the button the herbs heat up super fast, and the best part is that the external part of the vape is cool to the touch making the handling of the vape super easy. But no, it does not give you energy but it does kill your lungs and provide you with lung cancer.

The only intention of this device is that to provide you the same essence of smoking but in a much safer way and this is only possible with herbs. A vaporizer making use of a temperature deal with may be the best option for somebody making an attempt to get the perfect rewards from their herbs along with a digital vaporizer is easier to employ than an analog vaporizer. Every section of society is getting involved to increase the consciousness about health.
